To accommodate each of our busy schedules, interested individuals have the option of attending one of two required scheduled clinics. Parents who are interested in learning appropriate baseball/softball instructional techniques are also welcome to attend these sessions. Even the most astute coach always picks up a pointer or two.

These meetings are scheduled at the Cohasset High School gym on either Saturday, April 9 from 9 to 10 a.m. or Tuesday, April 12 from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

The CYBSA is fortunate to have Lou Rettman, minor league scout and local baseball instructor, conducting the April 9 session. In addition, we're also lucky to have Frank Niles of the South Shore Baseball Club attending the April 12 session.

Immediately following the April 9 clinic, there will be player drafts for the softball, American and National league baseball and Farm league divisions. In addition, divisional schedules, Little League and local CYBSA rules and other helpful coaching material will be distributed on that day.

Little League now requires background checks on all league volunteers to ensure the safety of the children entrusted to our care. Should you be interested in coaching and have not already done so, please bring a photocopy of your license to the clinic where you will be asked to fill out the necessary forms. Individuals, however well intentioned, not complying will not be allowed to coach. Questions regarding this requirement may be confidentially directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538.

Any questions concerning these coaching sessions may directed to Mark Chase on (781) 383-9122. Questions regarding the League draft may also be directed to Liam on (781) 383-9538.

Final Hitters' Workshop of season SSBC April 19-22

The South Shore Baseball Club's final Hitters' Workshop of the season, under the direction of veteran SSBC instructor Rick DelVecchio, is being offered to players 8-15 during the April school vacation (April 19-22) at SSBC's indoor facility in Hingham.

The Hitters' Workshop (HW) features daily hitting lectures, five different hitting stations, various skills work and drills, live hitting cage with pitchers, soft toss and bunting stations, four live hitting stations, and a safety station for inside pitches.

"You never know what the weather's going to be like in New England," SSBC president/director Frank Niles, Jr. said. "Players get plenty of at bats, regardless of weather or playing field conditions, at this Hitters' Workshop. They also receive instructions from SSBC's professional staff. Our lectures and drills are intended to create habits that will give hitters what they need to succeed in games. Our Hitters' Workshops have been designed to directly focus on hitting and improve all aspects of a player's hitting."

SSBC is a year-round, full service club and training facility for baseball and softball players - boys and girls, ages five and older – in Hingham. For more information about SSBC or any of its programs for members and non-members, call 1-800-749-6466/781-749-6466 or visit its Web site at www.ssbc.com.

Evan's Run set for May 22

The 5th Annual Evan's Run has been scheduled for Sunday, May 22 at 10:30 a.m. at Norwell High School.

The race, which offers a 5K run and walk and a 10K run, is named in honor of Evan Henry, a Norwell native who passed away in July of 2000 at the age of 11.

Evan was autistic, and the Henry family decided soon after his passing to set up a foundation that raises funds for organizations that help autistic children like Evan. Thus, the Evan Henry Foundation was born.

The first Evan's Run had great numbers, but attendance and participation has waned in the last three years. The Foundation has organized quite an event this year, including live entertainment from the Jon Frattasio Band. There will be a bandstand set up at the high school, where the race begins and ends, and the entertainment is scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon.

A post-race party has also been planned, and will be held at McGreal's Tavern in Norwell Center. Festivities there are set to begin around 1 p.m.

Cost to register for the race is $20 ($10 for the various children's races that have also been set up), with proceeds going to the Evan Henry foundation. If you just want to watch the race and enjoy the music, that is totally free of charge.

For more information about the race, or to register, go to the Foundation's website, www.evan-henry.org, or call the race hotline at 617-347-2068.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Kindergarten orientation

A kindergarten orientation for parents will be held at the Joseph Osgood School on Wednesday, April 13, at 7 p.m. All parents of children who are eligible for kindergarten are invited to attend. (Children are eligible for registration if they turn five on or before Sept.1, 2005). Information about kindergarten curriculum and full-day and half-day programs will be discussed. Activities planned to promote a smooth transition from preschool to kindergarten will also be discussed. Parents will have an opportunity to meet faculty and staff, tour the building, and visit kindergarten classroom. Refreshments and a warm welcome will be provided.

Free workshop April 5 on learning disabilities

A free Parent Advisory Council Workshop on "Language-Based Learning Disabilities" presented by Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. is 7:30 p.m., April 5 at the Osgood School Library, 210 Sohier St.

South Shore parents, school faculty, paraprofessionals and all interested parties invited!

Phillips has an extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention. She recently attended the IDEA hearings in Boston and is writing an article for the upcoming MABIDA (Mass Branch of the International Dyslexia Association) newsletter on the subject of how parents, professionals and children with learning disabilities will be impacted by the changes in regulations that come as a function of the November 2004 re-authorization of IDEA, which goes into effect July 2005.

Much of PAC's time and resources have gone into providing these workshops for parents, educators and interested parties on the South Shore, free of charge.

SOUTH SHORE PAC Network has joined with local PAC members to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. If you would like to be added to the e-mail network for updates please forward your contact information to:

Social Service League offers $1K scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is accepting applications for the Margaret F. Loud, R.N. Scholarship. Applicants must be seniors or residents in the town of Cohasset, Hull, Hingham, Scituate or Norwell, who intend to begin or further their studies in nursing, social work, or allied health fields. One scholarship in the amount of $2,000 or two scholarships in the amount of $1,000 will be awarded for the 2005-2006 academic year.

Applications are available at the League office, 16 Highland Ave., weekdays between 9 a.m. to noon or in each town's high school guidance office. Applications must be received by April 29, 2005. For more information, call 781-383-0771.

Internet safety program April 6

On Wednesday, April 6, from 7:30-9 p.m., Inly School in Scituate will sponsor "Kids and the Internet: What Every Parent Should Know," a presentation by Dr. Mark Kline. This parent education night will be held in the Meehan Family Artsbarn at Inly School, 46 Watch Hill Drive (off Route 123). Designed for all parents of school-age children, the talk is free and open to the public.

In addition to serving as Associate Director of the Human Relations Service, Inc., in Wellesley, Kline is a consultant to the Wellesley, Weston, Wayland, and Needham school systems and has lectured widely on the topic of Internet safety. For more information, call Inly School at 781-545-5544.

Marc Greel of the Marc Greel Jazz Band coaches high school students in the jazz ensemble during last year's workshop.

CP Harvey Jazz workshop April 6 at CMHS

The CP Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund and the Cohasset Middle High School announce the third annual jazz workshop and concert on April 6 at 7:30 p.m.

The concert will be held at the Gallery of the Cohasset Middle High School. Concert tickets are $8 for students and $15 for adults. All proceeds go to the CP Harvey Scholarship Fund. Call 781-383-4205 for reservations.

The 2005 event features the Bobby Gallegos Quartet. Trumpet player Bobby Gallegos is an Air Force veteran that played in Air Force Bands and then performed at Disney World for 14 years. He is a music educator at local school districts and the Berklee College of Music. Guitar player Ron Bosse is a Berklee graduate and has performed at Tanglewood, Symphony Hall and the Boston Globe Jazz Festival. Rob Egan, also a Berklee alum, is the Quartet's drummer. Rob has toured the US & Europe. Irvin Dhimo is the bass player and learned the jazz of John Coltrane, Charlie Parker and Bill Evans from Yiotus Kiourtsoglu. Irvin is a Berklee Graduate.

The Quartet will hold a workshop for members of the Cohasset Jazz Ensemble. The Cohasset Jazz Ensemble was formed in 2002 and is led by music director Stephanie Hoskin.

Following the workshop the Bobby Gallegos Quartet and the Cohasset Jazz Ensemble will perform for Cohasset residents at a gala concert. In past years, the Ensemble gave explosive performances that kept toes taping and launched spontaneous dancing.

The CP Harvey Memorial Jazz Award will be presented to the student with the best performance.

The CP Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund was established in 2002 by the sons of CP Harvey in loving memory of their father. Its mission is to promote jazz in Cohasset Schools.

OBITUARIES

Carol Ann Comeau

Made friends for life

Carol Ann Comeau, 60, died March 23, 2005, at her home in Cohasset.

Born in Worcester and raised in Rumson, N.J., Mrs. Comeau attended Marymount College in Arlington, Va.

For years she modeled for Jonathan Logan, the famed clothing manufacturer in Manhattan.

She married Scott Comeau Sept. 25, 1984 and after residing in Brookline and Hingham, they bought their dream cottage near the sea in Cohasset in July 2004.

Mrs. Comeau will forever be remembered for her style, grace and a keen wit which embraced all that she did. She loved horseback riding, reading the classics, fawning over her cats and dogs, and traveling. Paris was especially dear to her heart. She was a loving wife, mother, sister, aunt, grandmother, who never forgot a birthday or anniversary, and she made friends for life. Doctors and fellow cancer patients remember her for her courage and dignity. She was an inspiration to all who knew her.

In addition to her husband, Scott, Mrs. Comeau leaves two sons, Jonathan Hayes and Tucker Robinson both of California; a grandson Tyler Robinson; two brothers, Adam Kretowicz of Wayland and Michael Kretowicz of San Francisco; five sisters, Susan Guiver of Felton, Calif., Marylou Mooney, of Whitefish Bay, Wis., Kathleen Petroff of Long Meadow, Annie Kretowicz of Cupertino, Calif., and Kim Nitto of Rumson, N.J.; and many nieces and nephews. She was the mother of the late Jennifer Davis Hayes.

Services were held at the First Parish Unitarian Church in Wayland.

The McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset handled the arrangements.

Norman George De Weir

Pioneer in ocean cleanup

Norman George De Weir, 80, died March 20, 2005 at Pen Bay Hospital in Rockport, Maine.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., Aug. 2, 1924 the son of Norman Farmer De Weir and Elsye Hahn De Weir. He was the beloved husband of Erika Purer DeWeir for 60 years.

Mr. De Weir was a graduate of Sewanhaka High School in 1942. He continued his education at New York State Maritime Academy at Fort Schulyer, N.Y., and graduated in an accelerated war time program in 1944, as lieutenant J.G., U.S. Naval Reserve. He served in the U.S. Merchant Marine during WWII and participated in the invasion of Normandy. He achieved the status of Captain.

From 1944-1948, he was at sea with various shipping vessels: Merritt, Chapman & Scott and dry vessels, Isthmian & Monroe-McCormack S.S., Co. As a young man, he was retained by Lloyds of London to assess the feasibility of raising the Andrea Doria off Nantucket Sound. He later became executive vice president of LaMorte, Burns & Co., Inc. as marine surveyor and consultant from 1948-1979. Mr. De Weir was a pioneer in the prevention and clean up of oceanic pollution world wide.

After retirement from LaMorte, Burns & Co., Inc., Mr. DeWeir formed his own company and was called upon for his expertise during the Exxon Valdez oil spill in Alaska.

In addition to his wife, Erika of Waldoboro, Maine, he leaves four daughters. Diane De Weir of Round Pond, Maine; Amy De Weir-Golden of Cohasset; Jennifer De Weir Ferris of Waldoboro, Maine; Nancy De Weir Geaney of Wilton, Conn.; 13 grandchildren and three great grandchildren

In lieu of flowers, contributions in his memory may be made to: Scholarship Fund, C/O Fort Schuyler Maritime Alumni Association, PO Box 509, Oakdale, NY 11769. Make checks payable to: F.S.M.A.A.

Arrangements are entrusted to Hall Funeral Home and Cremation Service, Waldoboro, Maine.

Abbey series shares ancestral traditions

Local companies provide on-site, Internet and satellite 'classrooms'

By Charlie Breitrose
DAILY NEWS STAFF

In June, Peter Ross will complete his MBA degree without ever having to leave his workplace at EMC Corp.

Many companies allow and encourage their employees to go back to school to improve their training or get a degree. Tuition and other expenses are often reimbursed for classes taken at colleges, but EMC has arranged for the classes to come to the workers.

Ross took advantage of EMC's partnership with Northeastern University to earn a degree through the university's High-Tech MBA program, where he can attend school while sitting in classes at the company's Hopkinton campus.

"I think it's incredibly convenient," Ross said. "There is no off-site travel involved, no hustling into Boston and my co-workers are very supportive."

EMC's ties with Northeastern go way back. Some of the company founders graduated from the university. The school's MBA program fit well with the computer storage company, said Mario Maletta, a professor of accounting at Northeastern and co-director of the high-technology MBA program.

"We've always had a relationship with EMC," Maletta said. "I think the reputation of our High-Tech MBA program caused them to inquire about creating this."

The program moves quite fast, said Ross, who attends classes Mondays and Thursdays for 4½ hours. There are no breaks for summer vacation, so he will finish in about 2½ years. The professors, however, work around the company's busy times.

"They'll look at EMC's work cycle," Ross said. "The end of quarter is demanding for sales and manufacturing, so they tend not to have many classes then, and they try not to have classes during the annual customer conferences and sales meetings."

Rather than being in a class full of students from different companies, Ross finds himself with 34 folks from EMC's various departments.

"I am with people from manufacturing, purchasing, the supply chain, coming from as far as Westborough and Southborough, and down to Franklin," Ross said. "Something that has been a hidden benefit of the program is you learn how large and diverse the company is. There is a guy in the class from China, guys from Germany, the U.K. and, obviously, all across the U.S."

Students are chosen by EMC for the program, Ross said, but they must then meet Northeastern's admission requirements. Once in, Ross said, the company takes care of the costs – tuition, books, application fees, etc.

Should someone leave EMC less than a year after taking a class or classes, said EMC spokeswoman Kristen Karapetian, the employee is required to pay back the cost of the course, but not the cost of the entire program.

From what he can tell, Ross said the coursework would be the same if someone was taking the class at another college,

"I'd say it's as close as it could be," Ross said. "My brother just graduated with an MBA from Babson (College), and we compared notes and they are very similar."

The partnership between EMC and Northeastern has allowed the coursework to be tailored for the company, Northeastern's Maletta said.

"In (Northeastern's own) on-campus program (students) examine different companies, but they do analysis of their own company," Maletta said. "There is the same philosophy (with EMC), but it is more dedicated to EMC's situation."

The areas covered are the same for on-campus and on-site students, Maletta said, including accounting, finance and marketing and organization of the business. Because the program has a high-tech focus it also includes strategies for technology companies, new product development and research of technology-based products.

In classes, rather than using hypothetical situations, Maletta has students analyze EMC's financial statements or what they are doing in their departments. They also compare EMC to its competitors, customers or vendors.

"The idea is to relate back to what they are working on," Maletta said. "It makes them more meaningful and, hopefully, more useful than if they were just theoretical."

Those who do not work at EMC also have the opportunity to get a degree, but it just may not be as convenient.

Brian Frost, a hardware engineer at Natick-based Cognex Corp., went back to get a master's degree in computer science, mostly on the company's dime.

"They paid for most of everything; they have $6,000 per year that they reimburse," Frost said. "There's no way I could afford that."

Frost completed his degree in 2½ years. It took him that long because he took just one class at a time in Northeastern's campus in Burlington.

"It's very difficult trying to maintain a balance between working here, especially in today's market with a lot less people doing a lot more work," Frost said, "and then to try to go home, manage a family and do (a) few hours (of) homework. It's difficult."

On days he had class, Frost said he would log 100 miles driving from his Worcester home to work in Natick, then to Burlington for class and finally back home.

"Luckily it met only twice a week for one hour and 40 minutes," Frost said.

Despite the time commitment, Frost said he was glad he got his degree.

"I decided to go back to school for a couple reasons," Frost said. "One, to continue my education and, two, to keep up on new research techniques and to try to maintain competitiveness with the rest of the market."

Any future training, Frost said, he will likely do using the company's on-site training.

Some businesses prefer that method, including Framingham-based Staples Inc. The office supply company has created a whole system of training classes, which is known as Staples University, said Jeff Boudro, the director of training and development for the program.

"I would say that 95 percent (of training) is in-house," Boudro said.

Looking at the name, Boudro said, people may not get the true picture of Staples University.

"It's not like your typical university," Boudro said. "It isn't a campus or a place, it's a network of learning opportunities."

It is set up like a university, however, with colleges for different sections of the business, including colleges for retail and delivery.

Everyone in the company, from the employees at the stores – known as associates – to the management, attend courses at some point, Boudro said.

Associates learn about new products, while people working at call centers learn about communicating with customers.

Some classes take place in a single room, but with more than 1,400 stores across the country and more than 65,000 employees, it is difficult to run a class that includes everyone. Staples uses technology to overcome this hurdle.

"A lot of training is done with distance (learning), using the Internet or CD-ROMs," Boudro said. "There is also a satellite studio we use to broadcast to 900 different locations. It is a great way to overcome geography."

Classes do not typically take a great deal of time, Boudro said.

"The most common one is a four-hour module," Boudro said. "We also have have (the) three-day leadership challenge, but the majority are bite-sized classes so people can incorporate (them) into their busy work schedule."

Using people inside the company to train employees has proven to be more efficient, Boudro said.

"We thought that having people who work at Staples would mean they would understand the culture, and they are better suited to understand technology and keep up with our business," Boudro said. "To do it in-house, we are able to develop and educate our employees quicker."

Working adults offered Pathways to earn degrees

By Sandy Lashin Curewitz
BECKER COLLEGE

Businesses like Verizon and National Grid are increasing the pool of employees they can promote from within by offering them a path to earning a college degree. Employers are acting as guidance counselors in increasing numbers, hosting information sessions for local college continuing education and accelerated degree programs.

"The end result of a better-educated employee is a much more professional and dedicated employee," said Mark Beauregard, training specialist at Verizon.

Marc Durocher is currently an engineering staff consultant for Verizon. He answers all of Verizon's engineering questions from Maine to Maui, he says. He wisely instilled the value of a college education in his children, but was feeling the guilt of not having attended college himself. He said he could see that in today's economy it was no longer possible to get as far as he had without a degree.

Maureen Pond is a customer service quality monitor for National Grid. "Every job posting in the company requires a degree," she says. While she had taken a few college classes, the process of earning a degree was moving too slowly for her.

Durocher and Pond both learned of the accelerated bachelor of business administration degree available at Becker College through their employers. They could earn the degree in 22 months, by attending classes one night a week, if they had three years' work experience and 24 college credits. Both were ready to make the commitment, but lacked the required credits.

In an effort to meet the educational needs of professionals like Durocher and Pond, Becker developed another accelerated learning option by launching Pathways in the spring of 2004. Pathways is a sequence of accelerated college courses that help students gain the credits they need to qualify for the accelerated bachelor's degree. Ten months later, Durocher and Pond are among the first students to successfully complete Pathways and continue on toward a bachelor's degree.

"I jumped at the chance," Durocher said, of learning about the Pathways option. "It is amazing how far I have come in less than a year." He was able to turn his electrical license and years of experience at Verizon and the former NYNEX into college credit too, through a portfolio option which allows students to petition for college credits based on prior learning, life experience and professional training.

Now that they have come this far, Durocher and Pond both say they may not stop at a bachelor's degree, but may push on toward a master's degree.

The coursework is demanding, but they enthusiastically recommend the experience. "Nothing worthwhile comes easy," says Durocher. "The satisfaction I get when I see the reactions of people when I tell them I have gone back to school is priceless."

"When our accelerated degree program was developed in 2001, there were very few non-traditional learning options for working adults in central Massachusetts," said Jack Foran, vice president of lifelong learning at Becker College.

In addition to Becker's program, other area institutions, such as Nichols College in Dudley, offer various accelerated options. Nichols offers associate's and bachelor's degrees in business administration. To qualify for the bachelor's program, prospective students must already have an associate's degree or at least 60 college credits. Clark University in Worcester offers the unique and nationally recognized accelerated B.A./Master's Degree Program. Students enter or transfer into one of 13 specialized programs that allow them to earn both a bachelor's degree and a master's degree in five years.

The Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences is offering accelerated options for students entering the field of nursing. The college has recently launched a new accelerated three-year full-time bachelor of science nursing degree program at the main campus in Boston. Additionally, there is a second BSN program offered at the MCPHS Worcester campus beginning January 2006. Adults with a bachelor's degree in a field other than nursing can earn a post-baccalaureate BSN in 16 months.

The cost of a college education is often one of many obstacles for adults who wish to return to the classroom – or go for the first time. Lora A. Baldracchi, a vice president at Southbridge Savings Bank, was in a position to help. She had witnessed classmates in her accelerated classes drop out because of unemployment or other financial difficulties.

Baldracchi created an educational line of credit exclusively for accelerated degree students at Becker College. The funds must be used for educational purposes with a repayment period of up to 120 months. "I researched finance options at the time and found no other similar programs offered locally," she said.

Private or alternative loans are being offered by increasing numbers of financial institutions and other companies such as Edamerica, which offers student loan options and college planning resources. Private loans are recommended by financial aid offices for adult students and for traditional students who need to pad their financial aid packages. Other alternative loans include the Signature Loan, the Key Loan and the Citiassist Loan.

A new Pathways sequence begins on Monday evenings starting this spring on the Becker College Worcester campus. Accelerated bachelor of business administration degree classes are starting at Becker through April. Cohorts take classes at company and community locations like Southbridge Savings Bank in Sturbridge, the Windham Hotel in Westborough and on Becker's Worcester campus. For more information, contact 1-877-523-2537, ext. 239 or visit www.beckercollege.edu/accelerated.

The Massachusetts College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences is accepting applications now for the accelerated BSN programs. For further information visit www.mcphs.edu, call 800-225-5506 or e-mail admissions@mcphs.edu.

GIVE YOUR INVESTMENT PORTFOLIO THE WIZETRADE™ EDGE

TAKE THE FAMOUS WIZETRADE™ CHALLENGE

Name any stock. See if Wizetrade™ gives it a green light or a red light. "No stock can fool Wizetrade™. We'll prove it at the free Wizetrade™ portfolio clinic."

George Thompson, Wizetrade™ Creator and Author of Don't Play in the Street

The stock market is complicated enough. Stocks can go up or down in a matter of minutes, if not hours, and for no apparent reason.

And, when it comes right down to it, why it's going up or down is anybody's guess. You might as well try to read tea leaves.

Intel's earnings go up but the stock drops like an anchor. Or, Microsoft gives back a whole bunch of money it's been bankrolling in cash for years, only to find out that the investment community is skeptical, and so the stock plummets.

Who knows?

That's why Wizetrade™ is essential.

The beauty of Wizetrade™ is that none of that matters.

It doesn't matter whether the company is earning more or less money. It doesn't matter what the street's expectations are. And it doesn't matter whether it's giving shareholders back a bunch of money or is hoarding it all for an unspecified future.

None of that matters for one simple reason.

Because at the end of the day, if there are more shares being bought than sold, the stock is going to go up, and if there are more shares being sold than bought, the stock is going to go down.

It's just that simple. Everything else is nothing but noise.

If you want the straight scoop on knowing what a stock is actually doing right now in eight different time intervals, starting at one minute and going up to one full month, Wizetrade™ is just about the only decision support tool in the market that will give you that basic common sense information in an easy to use red and green light format.

Wizetrade™ isn't going to make you money every single time you use it, of course, but I'll tell you this, it is going to tell you what any particular stock is doing in real time, every time — and I'll stake my professional reputation on it.

It does that with simple-to-understand red and green lights.

And if you can't figure out from those simple and easy-to-understand clues what you should be doing with that information, well, quite frankly, you shouldn't be in the stock market at all.

You can trade or invest without Wizetrade™, of course, but I have one simple question and one question only to ask you: why in the world would you even want to?

Join me for my free workshop where you will understand, pure and simple, why Wizetrade™ is the software program used by more traders and investors in the world than any other software program in the market. And you will see, for yourself, in less than two hours why you need to own it.

Join me for my free workshop, which will revolutionize the way you approach your trading and investment decisions forever.

THE 2 FORCES YOU MUST FOLLOW TO WIN ON WALL STREET

Any self-directed investor can be positioned to beat the market if they harness the power of the two key factors that rule Wall Street with an iron fist.

Wizetrade™ shows the buying and selling pressures on stocks in real time, positioning investors to capitalize on these two key market forces. Knowing which side of the buying/selling "tug of war" to be on has proven to be a significant advantage, and Wizetrade™ lets investors track buying and selling pressures like a bloodhound.

Recognize a dramatic timing opportunity

A change in the balance of buying and selling pressures is a classic timing opportunity. That's why thousands of investors rely on Wizetrade™ to monitor trading activity in real time. Wizetrade™ displays easy-to-follow red and green indicators that alert investors to making decisions regarding stocks experiencing extreme buying and selling pressures.

See if your stocks pass the Wizetrade™ test

Discover how many gainers (and losers) you're holding by attending the free Wizetrade™ workshop. See firsthand how Wizetrade™ works and how easy it is to use Wizetrade™. Within seconds, Wizetrade™ reveals if the forces of buying and selling pressures have tagged a stock as a diamond or a hot potato.

- ☑ Witness for yourself which stocks investors are buying and which stocks they're dumping.
- ☑ Discover if you're holding blue chips that have investors singing the blues.
- ☑ See why market newsletters, magazines, and newspapers can't match the real-time market analysis of Wizetrade™.
- ☑ Discover why Wizetrade™ helps take the guesswork out of investing and lets you trade with added confidence if, of course, you believe in the universal law of buying and selling pressures.

What Investors Are Saying About Wizetrade™

"If Wizetrade™ was no longer available, I would quit playing the market altogether."
— Don Courtney, FL

"Wizetrade™ saved my portfolio! In this market, my ex-broker had no idea what to do."
— James Jacobson, IL

"I know my account would be over six figures if I had had this two years ago. For the first time in my life,I feel like financial independence is in my future."
— Darryl Gordon, FL

"It is ridiculous to trade this market without Wizetrade™. I will not trade without it."
— Mel Raiman, GA

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS

Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

BEYOND CONVENTIONAL WISDOM

Once, all hearing instruments were conventional analog units that converted sound into an electric current, which was boosted by an amplifier and converted back to sound by a speaker. Now there are also programmable analog units that are customized by computer to accommodate individual patterns of hearing loss. They adjust volume automatically for various environments. There are also digital hearing instruments that employ microchips to convert sound waves from a microphone into digital signals that can be manipulated by a computer. This makes it possible to tailor and process sounds very precisely and supress background noise. Digital models can provide the clearest sound. They also make it possible to switch between different settings, suitable for different listening conditions.

The many marvels that exist today in the hearing industry make it easier than ever to enhance your hearing. And you can always expect the best when you visit FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. You'll find innovative hearing instrument design, you'll find personalized service from skilled Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialists, and you'll find friendly faces ready to help. Don't put up with a hearing loss. There are lots of ways to get back the sounds of life. The first is a call to 781-337-1144, 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth.

P.S. Some digital hearing instruments can even adjust themselves automatically to suit different sound environments.

Tampa-St. Pete region offers charm, amusement and culture

By CINDY ATOJI

TAMPA, Fla. — Central Florida doesn't top the cultural landmark list of most serious history buffs. After all, make-believe castles that sprang up overnight in the middle of orange groves outside of Orlando don't really qualify as weighty civic monuments.

But this coastal city 84 miles west of Orlando offers a national historic district along with its kid-pleasing theme parks and attractions, white sand beaches and thriving ethnic communities where the melting pot of flavor isn't served from a concession stand.

Ybor City, Tampa's Latin quarters, has a smoky, Bourbon Street charm that belongs to another era. This former "Cigar Capital of the World" attracted Cuban, Spanish, Italian, German and Jewish immigrants to work in the factories. At the neighborhood's peak in the late 1800s, 12,000 master tabaqueros hand-rolled 700 million cigars a year.

Ybor City Museum State Park tells the story of immigrant life in restored casitas, "shotgun" style homes in which cigar makers and their families resided.

A flamenco dancer at the Columbia restaurant in Tampa Bay.

Historic Ybor City, Tampa's Latin quarter

Stroll along Ybor City's red-brick streets, illuminated by old-style globe street lamps, and you'll find trendy nightclubs, funky tattoo parlors and nouveau boutiques tucked beneath wrought-iron balconies and near wide piazzas.

The intoxicating aroma of Cuban coffee lures walkers on La Setima (Seventh Avenue), the main drag, where Florida's oldest eatery, the Columbia Restaurant, opened in 1905. The establishment has humble beginnings as a small cafe where patrons gathered to drink steaming cups of Cuban coffee and discuss news of the day.

Today, the Columbia occupies an entire city block and seats more than 1,700. Hundreds of original hand-painted tiles line the 13 dining rooms, including the main stage area where spectacular flamenco dancers perform.

Take an electric streetcar, replicas of those in which the cigar rollers rode to the factories, from Ybor City into the Channel District of Tampa, a vibrant downtown waterfront and home to the Florida Aquarium. Here you'll find more than 10,000 aquatic species native to Florida and from around the globe. A new outdoor attraction, Explore-A-Shore, serves up a discovery zone where kids can splash aboard a pirate ship and ride on plastic turtles and crocodiles.

You'll have to go to nearby Lowry Park Zoo, though, to see live manatees, the shy and gentle sea cows that reside in Tampa's bays. The natural habitat zoo, which was just named "No. 1 zoo for kids in the U.S." by Child Magazine, includes the Manatee Aquatic Center, one of only three rehabilitation hospitals in Florida for the endangered animals, as well as a free-flight aviary and stingray touch tank.

For a real wildlife safari — and wild rides — venture over to Busch Gardens, where free-roaming herds of zebras, ostriches and bongos and flocks of majestic cranes wander in the shadows of looping, plummeting world-class roller coasters.

Downtown Tampa Bay by the Gulf of Mexico.

Busch Gardens in Tampa Bay.

From its beginnings in 1959 as a humble bird sanctuary adjacent to the Anheuser-Busch Tampa Brewery, Busch Gardens has expanded into a family-pleasing blend of thrilling rides, majestic animals and top-rated entertainment.

The African-themed adventure park claims to house more animals than any destination outside of Africa, with more than 2,000 representing 300 species, cared for by one of the country's top zoological staffs.

Jump on Rhino Rally, and you can get an inside look at Busch Garden's Serengeti Plain while also getting an adrenaline rush as you traverse the extreme course on a Land Rover. The Serengeti Express Train and Skyride also offer up-close views of giraffes, antelopes and gazelles on the 65-acre habitat.

Too tame for you? Then plummet 13 stories on the Montu's 104-foot inverted loop or pull 3.85 G's on Kumba's twisting, turning steel track. In May, Busch Gardens will open the new SheiKra, billed as America's first dive coaster — as in riders being hurled straight down at a 90-degree angle. At 200 feet, SheiKra also will be the tallest roller coaster in Florida.

For nighttime retreats, the luxurious Grand Hyatt Tampa Bay or more economical Chase Suites by Woodfin are centrally located near the airport and provide easy access to nearby Clearwater and St. Petersburg.

In the morning, start the day as the Ybor City locals do, dipping a long slice of crusty Cuban bread into a steaming cup of cafe con leche at La Tropicana Restaurant. You won't find pancakes, waffles and bacon on the menu, but you also won't encounter a line of little visitors seeking autographs from oversized mice. This is Tampa, after all, and life here is simply simpatico.

Selectman, school seats up for grabs

Saturday is Election Day

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

If campaign signs serve as the barometer of the political climate in town, then this year things are a little schizophrenic.

Some yards have Koed and Vanderweil signs, others have Vanderweil and Shadd, and still others have Koed and Shadd – you get the picture. Voters can choose just two for selectman.

One prominent spot in town is sporting signs for both Pam Wilson and Lee Jenkins, even though they are running against each other for the one-year school committee seat.

Go figure. Simply put, it's anyone's guess who will win come Saturday night.

Voters thinking they're going to get a chance to vote on the $400,000 general override or $13.2 million debt exclusion will have to wait a few weeks until a special election, whose date selectmen are expected to set at their Tuesday meeting.

Selectmen to set date for election

Town Meeting approved the $31.9 million budget by a majority vote, contingent on a Prop. 2-1/2 override passing at the ballot box.

Selectmen have not set a date for the special election, which will ask residents to approve a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override that would be used to subsidize the school budget.

Hosting a special election will cost the town between $3,000 and $5,000. Town Manager Bill Griffin expects selectmen to set the date during their meeting Tuesday.

The budget article was one of 21 items of business discussed during the Saturday, April 2 Annual Town Meeting, during which 468 residents were in

The town is going to forge ahead with roughly $13.2 million in new sewer projects. The only open question is who's going to pay for them.

Town Meeting voters approved two sewer articles Saturday that appropriated $12 million to connect 440 dwelling units in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods to the municipal sewer plant off Elm Street and $1.2 million to expand the North Cohasset District to include 37 homes along portions of Jerusalem Road, Rust Way and Deep Run.

The afternoon session of Town Meeting also voted to ask all taxpayers in town to pick up 50 percent of the cost, contingent on a

Pope was a hit at historic Mass on Boston Common

Cohasset's Tinory recorded the pontiff

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When Cohasset's Rik Tinory is working on a recording, he puts his entire heart and soul into it.

But on his latest project, Tinory is taking that dedication to a whole new level.

The Pond Street resident, whose company Rik Tinory Productions recorded Pope John Paul II's Mass on Boston Common on Oct. 1, 1979, is working around the clock to produce a new CD of the historic event.

Tinory's company had the exclusive recording contract with the archdiocese some 25years ago to create an album, whose proceeds go to agencies that work to help the poor and for propagation of the faith.

It's a day that Tinory can recall as if it happened yesterday. Tinory recorded the entire Mass which was conducted in front of an audience of upwards of half-a-million people.

"It was the largest live audience in the history of recording," Tinory says.

When Tinory recently heard how ill Pope John Paul II was, he took the original analog tapes out of storage and played them. "They played beautifully," he says.

He transferred them to "digital audio," then to a computer where they were "remastered." The 1979 album cover is being redesigned to fit a CD (compact disk) which he hopes to release today (Friday). Again the proceeds, minus some production costs, will be distributed to charitable Catholic agencies.

Tinory, who has recorded Aerosmith and whose song "Remember Ol'Scollay Square" is in the Smithsonian, is no stranger to celebrities and large-scale events – but the Pope's visit to Boston will always be at the top of his list.

For one thing, the security was phenomenal as were the logistics, Tinory recalls. And the weather didn't help – torrential rain poured down. In fact, Tinory – who worked from atop a kiosk 20 feet from the ground — was

Name: Donna McGee

Occupation: Retired Human Resources Director, Harvard University and current Advisory Committee Chairman

Best day of your life: The four days I sat in the hallway at South Shore Hospital waiting for the birth of my three granddaughters and one grandson.

Best vacation: Sailing with my family in the Virgin Islands.

Favorite season: I like early spring for gardening and summer for the slowed down pace.

Favorite holiday: The Fourth of July because it's summer.

Favorite junk food: Anything that contains chocolate, especially ice cream (Ben & Jerry's New York super chunk).

Favorite book: Any Tom Clancy novel.

Best movie: The Hunt for Red October

Best TV show: The West Wing because its main character is my president.

Pet peeve: People with no sense of inquiry.

Most embarrassing moment: When I was working as Director of Personnel to Governor Mike Dukakis I inadvertently insulted a close friend of his. After not sleeping all night, I went in to see the governor at 7 the next morning to confess. He surprised me by smiling and asking me, "How do you plan to straighten this out?" With that one question, he gave me back my confidence.

Goal: To support my family and my community.

Person you'd most like to meet: Antonio Banderas

Biggest worry: That the conflicts going on in town will not be resolved soon.

Best part of Cohasset: My family…all the Laugelles.

Chat with the chief

Police Chief James Hussey, who recently agreed to stay on the job for another three years, will take part in a live call-in cable show to enhance communication between the police department and citizens of the town.

This initiative fits well with the Chief's emphasis on "community policing."

Tune-in to community access channel 10 from 7:30-8:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 14, for the very first "Conversation with Chief Hussey" or come to the selectmen's office at town hall and be a part of the show.

"I encourage our residents to participate in this conversation by either joining our live audience or by calling in questions from home," said Chief Hussey.

Wigmore Pierson, who hosted the live cable show "Pierson to Person" for 10 years, will be the facilitator for the show. Pierson described the format:" After the Chief makes a few opening remarks, he will take questions from the audience and from viewers at home The number to call is 781-383-4105."

Devon Noonan will be the technical assistant and Molly Pierson will answer the phones.

Citizens who want more information prior to the show are welcome to call Chief Hussey at 781-383-1212.

Juvenile Ct. public awareness night

A statewide Juvenile Court public awareness night will take place to give an opportunity for the citizens of each county to learn about the mission of the Juvenile Court, case types and conduct of juvenile court proceedings.

The program begins at 7 p.m. and ends at 9 p.m. on May 25, at the Norfolk County Juvenile Court, 55 Allied Drive, Dedham. There is no cost to the participants. All residents of Norfolk County are welcome to apply. Class size will be limited to 40. Presentations are made by Judges, Magistrates, Probation Officers, Court Officers and representatives from the District Attorney's Office and the Norfolk County Bar Association.

For more information call James Poirier, Clerk Magistrate at 781-329-1500.

Police Chief Hussey gets permanent post

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Town Manager Bill Griffin has appointed James Hussey to the position of permanent police chief. This is Griffin's first department head appointment since coming on board Jan. 31.

Griffin said Hussey's contract will be a three-year agreement and the final details are being aired out. When the details are settled upon, the contract will be made public, he said. Currently, Hussey is receiving a base salary of $101,000 per year. Former Chief Robert Jackson was salaried at $84,000 per year.

"I have had the opportunity to work with Chief Hussey for the two months of my service as Town Manager, and I have found him to be highly qualified, motivated, and hard working," Griffin stated in a memo to selectmen. "I have been told that many, many people in town government and the community have also been very impressed with Chief Hussey's performance over the past 10 months."

During Monday's selectmen's meeting Griffin publicly announced the appointment. Griffin said during Hussey's tenure, "he has brought stability to the department and has tried to reconnect the department to the community."

Griffin went on to say although there is still work to be done, the positive momentum should carry forward with Hussey on board.

Hussey, a Norwood resident, came on board last June, replacing the retiring Jackson, who had had a rocky year at the helm of the small-town police department that had been riddled with controversy.

Jackson's departure followed on the heels of former Town Manager Mark Haddad who abruptly resigned one month earlier for personal reasons.

Haddad placed two officers on paid administrative leave in October 2003 amid allegations of misconduct and fired the animal control officer. Two former dispatchers filed sexual harassment complaints. The actions resulted in a spate of lawsuits and headlines.

Enter Hussey, a certified mediator, who has turned out to be the kind of leader the department needs, relying upon the skills he acquired during 28 years with the Boston Police Department, selectmen say. Hussey reinstated the two officers in time for the July 4th weekend.

But even Hussey's appointment was not without controversy. Jackson's retirement was announced on a Tuesday and Hussey was publicly interviewed and subsequently recommended by selectmen to be appointed as interim chief two days later. Hussey was the only candidate interviewed by all five members of the board, and some residents believed with a position such as police chief, a wider search should have been conducted.

In addition, because the public interview was the first time the town had been introduced to Hussey, some questioned just how much business had been conducted before that night and why the public wasn't involved.

Griffin said this time around, he chose not to formally advertise the position or solicit applications from other candidates because he believes such a process would not be in the "short and long term interest of the Cohasset Police Department or the town as a whole. The police department has come through a very difficult period of time, and Chief Hussey has made huge strides in building a sense of teamwork within the police department," Griffin stated.

Hussey, who was in attendance during Griffin's announcement, said he was thrilled with the opportunity to be continuing on in Cohasset.

"You have a great police department and a great community and I look forward to the next three years," he said. "People are slowly but surely pulling in the same direction."

"I'm very happy and honored to be presented with this opportunity," Hussey said.

Griffin said under the Town Manager Act, the board has 15 days in which to veto his appointment, or it may choose to take a vote to waive that right and let the appointment stand.

"I think the community overall is happy with the appointment," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer echoed that statement and said, "I'll be glad to waive."

"I think it's the right decision and I'm glad the chief decided to stay," said Selectman Fred Koed. Selectmen Ronnie McMorris and Rob Spofford concurred.

Elm Street housing complex could get boost

Wilson House repair money is also sought

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The apartments are the only state-subsidized senior housing in town, and they are in dire need of exterior improvements, including new siding and roofing.

Every year under the Community Preservation Act, the Community Preservation Committee is required to make a recommendation to the annual Town Meeting as to how it believes its funds should be spent, and this year the Captain Wilson House and Harborview Apartments will benefit.

Community Preservation Funds are raised through a surcharge on property taxes, which is matched by the state. A Town Meeting recommendation is required even if the committee recommends the money should be reserved rather than spent, and Town Meeting passed this year's articles unanimously.

Although the recommendations were not ready at the time the warrant went to press, the CPC asked Town Meeting to spend $400,000 for capital improvements to the Harborview Apartments, located at 60 Elm St. The apartments are the only state-subsidized senior housing in town, and they are in dire need of exterior improvements, including new siding and roofing. Members of the Senior Housing Committee hope with some money promised by the CPC, they will be able to secure some matching funds from the state to revamp the 30-year-old apartments. If the total funds cannot be secured for the project, the CPC funding will be returned.

In addition, the CPC recommended allocating $100,000 to be used for improvements to the Captain Wilson House, a historic house located on Elm Street which has been sustaining water damage due to its being located on ledge. Water flowing down the rocks has been slowly creating water damage, and a major renovation headed up by the Cohasset Historical Society, has taken place to divert the water and update the electrical system, to enable future generations to enjoy it.

The CPC previously allocated roughly $150,000 for the interior portion of the project, and this second allocation would be used to finish the exterior work on the property, now that inside renovations are nearing completion. The Historical Society will be donating $25,000 of its own money for the project.

CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey reminded Town Meeting his committee recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. He said anyone who wishes to request funding is encouraged to stop by the Town Clerk's office for an application or call him directly at (781) 383-2604.

Supt. appoints new CMHS principal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

At the Thursday, April 7 school committee meeting, Supt. Denise Walsh was slated to appoint a new Cohasset Middle High School principal. The appointment took place after the Mariner went to press, but the agenda stated Walsh has chosen current Holbrook Junior-Senior High School Principal Joel Antolini to replace Jack DeLorenzo.

Prior to serving as principal, DeLorenzo worked alongside former Principal Mike Jones as assistant principal. DeLorenzo was given high marks when he was named as the state's top assistant principal in 2002. Last spring, Jones accepted a position at Lexington High School, and with Supt. Edward Malvey retiring and Walsh coming on, DeLorenzo stepped up to take over at the helm to help the district through the transition. DeLorenzo has spent the last 19 years working in the Cohasset school system.

"I'm very disappointed," said DeLorenzo, adding he was very interested in continuing on in his role as CMHS principal and had expressed that interest to both Walsh and the school committee.

A letter sent home to parents April 4 states Antolini will take over as principal July 1, 2005.

He said Walsh had indicated she was looking for someone to commit to a long-term position, and he said he was willing to make that commitment, but she decided to go ahead with a search. "I just don't understand it," he said.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea deferred questions regarding the appointment to Supt. Denise Walsh saying she would have the specifics. Under the Education Reform Act, superintendents are given the authority to hire principals without consulting the school committee.

Although Walsh was not immediately available for comment, a letter sent home to parents April 4 states Antolini will take over as principal July 1, 2005. A selection committee including David Magnussen, Elaine Breslow, Joan Allen, Linda Gill, Maureen Duffy, Michael Gill, and Ron Ford, spent the past two months screening and interviewing candidates.

Antolini is no stranger to Cohasset as he served as a technology education teacher as well as track coach in town from September 1991 through June 1995.

"Mr. Antolini began his administrative career ten years ago when he was appointed Assistant Principal at Mansfield High School. Since 2002, he has served as principal of Holbrook Junior Senior High School. We are fortunate that his previous experience and concern for the students of Cohasset have brought him back to us," Walsh's letter states.

Please Join Sunrise of Cohasset for Upcoming Activities:
Wine Tasting and Antique Appraisal Events

Sunrise of Cohasset has planned two informative and enjoyable events coming up soon. In April, please join us for a wine tasting event, featuring an overview of wine, grape variations, tastes and smells of different vintages. Hors d'ouevres will be served. Then in May, bring along one favorite collectible or treasure and see what it is worth at an Antique Appraisal Event. Our guest expert is retired antique specialist Andrea Hunt, former owner of the Peg Leg Duck Antique Store in North Scituate Village. Light refreshments will be served.

Sunrise Assisted Living is committed to furthering the knowledge of senior living topics through events and seminars designed to help and inform seniors and their caregivers.

Hooking up to Hull not off the table

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Sewer Commission has historically denied new housing projects access to sewer, including the possibility of securing capacity from Hull. However, if discussion at a recent Board of Selectmen's meeting is any indication, at least two sewer commissioners are willing to allow the latter option to be discussed.

Sewer Commissioners Sean Cunning and John Beck stated they would be willing to take part in a discussion to consider purchasing capacity from Hull for future developments, although there would be many details to be worked out before it is considered a viable option.

Beck said speaking for himself, he would be in favor of a solution that would encompass Avalon, Cedarmere, and Cook all sending their wastewater to Hull, "assuming you can negotiate an intermunicipal agreement." He added if an agreement can be reached, he would like to see the existing homes on the pathway to Hull hooked up as well, because that "would satisfy existing laws." The Sewer Commission as a whole says it has always maintained the position of sewering existing residences first.

Beck also said if a Hull connection is considered, he believes developers should pay 100 percent of the cost to lay the pipes and 100 percent of the capacity charges. He also said after the project is complete, the developers should sell the pipeline to the town for one dollar or whatever amount is legally binding.

Wastewater disposal has become an issue for all three of the proposed housing projects in town, but with an April 30 deadline fast approaching, the Cook Estate project is running out of time to show progress toward a wastewater solution. Soils on the site cannot support wastewater for all 95 units, and an alternative wastewater solution has yet to be found.

Developers from Northland Residential, who are working with the town to build on the Cook property, recently presented a possible alternative which would ask the town to sewer the affordable portion of the 95-unit project, leaving 60 units to be dealt with on site. Soil tests have indicated up to 60 units could be handled on site.

However, Avalon and Cedarmere are ahead of the Cook project in the proverbial sewer line. Avalon is a 200-unit complex slated for Route 3A, and Cedarmere is a 105-unit seniors-only project planned off Beechwood Street. All three projects have been denied sewer access. If the Cook project is given a connection, the question remains as to whether it can move forward without taking the other two projects with it.

The town of Hull has an abundant amount of capacity in its wastewater treatment plant and it has been suggested more than once that Cohasset begin negotiations to try to purchase some. In fact, after being told by the Sewer Commission a municipal connection in Cohasset would not be granted, Avalon developers began looking into that as an option.

However, Avalon developers would have to get permission from the Sewer Commission to install the necessary pipes to Hull in Cohasset streets, and until now, that option has seemed a far reach. The Sewer Commission has denied Jerusalem Road Estates, another development interested in buying capacity from Hull, from getting a street opening permit to install sewer pipes. Jerusalem Road Estates sued and lost. A Superior Court decision affirmed the Sewer Commission's exclusive authority over sewers in town and its authority to deny connections and reserve capacity for existing homes.

Searching for options

To help the town find a solution for its wastewater woes, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis has suggested it adopt a Home Rule Petition, or special legislation, which would allow the town to set its own rules when it comes to doling out sewer capacity. DeRensis said Cohasset could pass special legislation similar to that in Sturbridge and Provincetown. The town would be given authority to pick and choose what gets sewered through Town Meeting, which could decide to form new sewer districts. Currently, if the town opted to sewer the Cook project, it would be opening itself up to litigation because the property is outside the Central Sewer District. Avalon and Cedarmere are outside the district as well. The legislation would allow for "spot sewering" through new sewer districts.

The Home Rule Petition would also give the town a variance from state law so it would not have to sewer on a first-come first-serve basis. That means if Town Meeting chose to create a new district encompassing the Cook property, Avalon and Cedarmere would have no legal grounds to sue. The state legislature, which would ultimately approve the Home Rule Petition after a Town Meeting vote, is immune to lawsuits.

DeRensis said another potential option would be for the town to find a way to incorporate the Cook property into the Second Amended Judgment. The Second Amended Judgment was handed down by the state as a means of implementing the Clean Waters Act. In 1979, a complaint was filed alleging violation of the Act, and the town reached an agreement with the state to supply modern wastewater treatment. As part of the settlement, the town consented to enter the Judgment. Since then, the town has been working on a plan to clean up the waters in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area of town.

DeRensis said if the Cook property is added to the judgment, and order from the state "trumps over first come first serve. You have to obey the order first."

Beck said he is "vigorously opposed to the Home Rule," as well as any solution specifically crafted for the Cook Estate. "It'll be a legal disaster," he said.

"The problem with Cook is, you can't have one without the others," Beck said, adding the town is going to generate a lot of work for lawyers if it goes down that path. He said in addition, the Home Rule would "emasculate" the Sewer Commission as far as planning is concerned.

Cunning said he is not in favor of DeRensis' idea that the town use the Second Amended Judgment as a crutch to sewer the Cook Estate. "It's not very ethical to put certain projects ahead of others," he said.

Sullivan agreed and said there was a reason the Department of Environmental Protection wanted Cohasset to enter the Judgment, and he doesn't see how the Cook project would fit in.

With Hull capacity looking like a potential solution to be investigated, Selectman Ronnie McMorris asked whether Beck thought the town or the Sewer Commission should be doing the negotiations with Hull, and Beck said any conversation regarding Hull capacity should begin with the developers of the projects because that will determine whether they have the funds to pay for the associated charges. "How much to developers have to put into the pot?"

However, Spofford said currently, the town is in litigation with Avalon and Cedarmere as well as Jerusalem Road Estates and negotiating with Hull could affect all three. "Haven't we denied access to Hull?" he said, which would indicate there would be a major change in policy if the commission started discussing the potential of connecting.

"I'd have to ask my lawyer," quipped Beck.

Speaking for himself, Sewer Commission Chairman Raymond Kasperowicz said, "I'm not quite as crazy about that idea as John is," referring to an inter-municipal agreement with Hull. He said he doesn't feel that comfortable putting the town's sewers into the hands of others. "What if Hull shuts off the valve?" he asked. Kasperowicz said he sees Hull as a temporary solution for a much larger problem and said, "Thirty years from now, there could be a problem," if Hull decides it needs its capacity back, or another neighboring town such as Hingham decides it will pay more for capacity and Hull cuts Cohasset off.

The Sewer Commission has not taken a formal vote on whether it would be in favor of allowing discussions on negotiating with Hull to proceed, but Spofford asked the commission to meet as soon as possible to make that decision. Beck and Cunning said they would be open to being a part of that discussion, but at that point Kasperowicz had left the meeting. The commission has also been asked to speak with the Cook working group, which has been charged with investigating all potential solutions for the Cook site.

Dormitzer questions meeting's legality

At the beginning of the Monday, April 4 Selectmen's meeting, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he was concerned the meeting they were about to have might not in fact be legal.

"As many of you know, the posting of this meeting is insufficient to give people warning," he said, adding the meeting was posted Friday morning, and Town Hall closes at 1 p.m. on Fridays and is not open either Saturday or Sunday.

"People were given 11 hours notice essentially," he said, adding "We are supposed to be open and transparent, and this doesn't look it."

"I'd be glad to adjourn," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan.

However, Town Manager Bill Griffin said Town Counsel Paul DeRensis had a scheduling conflict that prevented him from attending meetings on Tuesday nights for the next few weeks and DeRensis had already set aside Monday night to enable him to attend Town Meeting. When it became apparent the Monday night session would not be necessary, he was asked to attend the board's meeting instead.

Dormitzer said he still feels the timing is very questionable and residents did not have 48 hours notice.

Selectman Fred Koed said as long as the board does not take any votes, he would feel comfortable sitting through an informational meeting. However, he also noted that usually, the Board of Selectmen does not meet during the week between Town Meeting and the election.

Sullivan said the board would not need to take a vote that night, but it is extremely important for it to meet with DeRensis because the town is approaching an April 30 wastewater solution deadline with the Cook heirs and there are a lot of questions to be answered.

Dormitzer said he would go along with whatever the board decided to do.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he shares Dormitzer's concerns, but added considering the number of people who had turned out for the meeting, which was roughly 20, if the meeting remaines informational, he thinks it is imperative that it continue, to allow DeRensis the time to inform the board of all possible ramifications of its decisions.

Under the Open Meeting Law, "For each city and town, a notice of every meeting of any governmental body is to be filed with the clerk of the city or town and a notice or a copy of the notice must be publicly posted in the office of the clerk or in the principal official bulletin board of the city or town at least forty-eight hours (including Saturdays but not Sundays or legal holidays) before the meeting."

The Open Meeting Law applies to every meeting of a quorum of a governmental body if any public business over which the governmental body has jurisdiction is discussed or considered. The Open Meeting Law Guidelines further explain, "A governmental body engages in 'deliberation' under the Law, and must comply with the Law's requirements, whenever a quorum engages in a 'verbal exchange.' Thus, when a committee interviewed candidates for employment in closed session, the Law applied even though the members did not converse among themselves, but merely questioned the candidates."

Sewer proponents rule at Town Meeting on Saturday

huge 2-1/2 debt exclusion vote.

The so-called "50/50" is in keeping with precedent established in the mid-1990s with expansion of the Central Cohasset District and development of the North Cohasset Sewer District when voters at the polls agreed to share the cost of sewer installation for both those projects.

If the debt exclusion fails at the special election to be scheduled this spring, the users will pick up the entire cost through betterment fees.

When the new sewer projects are completed in four or five years, roughly 60 percent of the town will be connected to sewer mains. The rest of the homes will still be on septic systems.

When the $12 million for Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue project — dubbed the "big gorilla" article by sewer commission chairman Ray Kasperowicz — won on a resounding voice vote, many in attendance broke out into cheers and applause. But the win wasn't without drama.

The four sewer articles – or items of business on the warrant – came up late in the day after the morning budget discussion and a grueling 2-1/2-hour debate over two proposed zoning changes following the lunch break.

As the clocked ticked toward 4:45 p.m., sewer proponents — who had a clear majority and would benefit from the connections — staved off attempts to adjourn Town Meeting at 5 p.m. so their remaining articles wouldn't be put off until Monday night.

Water commissioners had led the effort to adjourn the meeting out of fear their articles (which followed the sewer articles) would not draw a quorum on Monday, but the $12million sewer article would ensure a crowd.

While the water commissioners' attempt failed, they were subsequently successful in keeping Town Meeting in session for roughly another 1-1/2 hours. Upwards of 100 diehard voters remained, maintaining the necessary quorum and took up all the remaining articles negating a need for a Monday session.

If the debt exclusion for 50 percent of the sewer projects passes muster at the ballot box it would add roughly 19 cents to the tax rate or $127 to the tax bill of the owner of a home assessed at $670,000 in fiscal 2009. Starting in fiscal 2010, the debt service will add about 14 cents to the tax rate or about $94 for the same house.

Most who spoke at Town Meeting felt it was fair to allow voters in the privacy of the polls to decide whether they wanted to subsidize the projects.

Selectman Rob Spofford described it as a "fairness issue" and therefore, the affected homeowners had the right to seek an override vote.

Joe McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Road, who benefited from the 50-50 subsidy for the original North Cohasset project, agreed. He said even though the town's high property taxes might drive him out of town, he appreciated that Little Harbor homeowners had voted to support subsidizing that project.

"Ethically I don't see how we can avoid not supporting the 50-50," McElroy said.

However, the capital budget and advisory committees were against the town incurring any more debt and urged a no vote on the taxpayer subsidy.

Several voters also said they felt the way the sewer articles were presented was misleading. Sewer commissioners first urged approval of the two articles appropriating money for the projects stating there would be no cost to the taxpayer. After those articles passed, they presented the "50-50" article asking taxpayers to pay for 50 percent of the projects.

Adrienne MacCarthy, 85 Doane St., characterized it as a "bait and switch."

A few minutes earlier Dick Avery, 22 Surry Dr., unsuccessfully tried to raise the 50-50 issue during discussion of the two project articles by asking who was going to pay for them.

But sewer proponents ruled the day. They were able to "call the question" on their articles, stopping debate, and with their clear majority pushed three sewer articles through in less than an hour.

In addition to the two projects and the 50-50 payment articles, voters also agreed to a $100,000 appropriation to update the town's 1997 Comprehensive Wastewater Management Plan to prioritize other wastewater management solutions including the potential of satellite treatment plants and expanding the town's inter-municipal agreement with Hull. The town has an agreement with Hull for 80,000 gallons of wastewater per day but is only using 63,000 of that. Sewer commissioner Sean Cunning said there is enough capacity to include the expansion of the North Cohasset District without having to purchase any more capacity.

The town is under a court order to solve its wastewater problems that include pollution of water bodies from failing septic systems and runoff from driveways and other impervious surfaces.

William R. Daileader makes his debut

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

VOTE SATURDAY!

Hey Cohasset, don't forget to vote this Saturday at Town Hall. Each vote is important. Also remember that even though we all have an opinion, a thought or an idea on what and who should be voted in, we are all a part of the community. No matter what happens at the polls, we all are still involved in this town and will see each other on a day-to-day basis around town.

Keep it all pleasant if possible, express your thoughts and ideas in a constructive manner and look forward to what looks like a positive year to come.

NEW ARRIVAL

William Robert was born on Feb. 8, 2005 to Heidi and John Daileader of Darien, Conn. Despite being 3-1/2weeks early, he was 7 pounds, 10 ounces. He has a big brother Matthew (4-1/2) and a big sister Katie (2-1/2). Grandparents are Judy & Lee Peacock of Hingham, Russ & Susan Smith of Cohasset and Marion & Bob Daileader of Rexford, N.Y. Proud aunt and uncle are Emma & Adam Smith of Cohasset. Congratulations to all.

FAMILY REUNION

Betty Brook, along with Jean Figeuriedo and Joyce Higgins went to visit their sister Margie and husband Harry Ritter and Marge and Harry's niece Lynne and husband Mo. A wonderful time was had by all. I understand that Marge and Harry receive and read the weekly Cohasset Mariner so here is a huge hello to you as you read this message.

PSO TELETHON

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) LIVE Televised Telethon is set for Wednesday, May 4, 7 - 9:30 p.m.. The Cohasset PSO want to thank all of the wonderful local families and businesses that are coming forward with donations. It's truly inspiring to see how the local community support our school system. If you would like to donate an item or become a business sponsor, please contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125. If you are interested in participating in the talent show, please send an e-mail to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com with your name, phone number and talent.

Seventh-grade spring summit May 4

The Cohasset School Department and Project Safeguard announce that the 2005 Spring Summit for 7th Graders will be held on May 4, in the Middle High School Auditorium from 7:50 to 11:50 a.m. This year's event promises to be a very informational and insightful day.

The Spring Summit (previously known as "Campus on the Common") is being planned for both parents and students this year. Its purpose is to provide young people and their parents with the information needed to help them deal productively with such social pressures as anorexia, divorce, drinking, drug use, athletic pressure, college admission, etc. Using parent and student breakout sessions, speakers, peer leaders and interactive presentations, our goal is to help the students in making productive and healthy choices in their lives.

Commenting on the event Sheila Toomey said, "The Spring Summit can be an important resource for both students and parents. The pressures and choices that young people face today can be daunting. Within our families, schools, communities and peer groups, we have the ability to offer our youth the support they need for healthy development. The Spring Summit is a great resource for accomplishing this goal.

Motivational speakers, student peer leaders, special drug ambassadors, health professionals and educators will all present at this event. The day will include several interactive exercises such as role-playing and workgroup sessions for both students and parents.

One of this year's speakers will be Dr. Punyamurtula S. Kishore, President and Founder of the National Library of Addictions (NLA) in Brookline, MA. He personally maintains the NLA, which offers lectures on addiction related topics, publishes newsletters and coordinates interventions. Dr. Kishore also serves as an associate physician at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston as well as primary care and addictions medicine specialist with Primary Care Associates (Chestnut Hill and Sandwich,), Brighton Family Practice and Addiction Medicine Associates, Woburn Family Practice, Springfield Family Practice and Worcester Family Practice.

The day's presentations will also include the results of a targeted survey of the Cohasset sixth, seventh, and eighth graders. Among other questions, this survey asked students about the types of pressures they may be under and how they personally have responded to those stresses.

Most Cohasset youth live healthy, productive lives and develop into competent, successful adults. The goal of the Spring Summit is to build on these strong backgrounds and present our students with a positive-oriented presentation that will help them in their coming-of-age years. Through the peer leaders and interactive formats, as well as by giving their parents the information needed to guide them, we will assure the students that they are valuable members of our society with a worthy and fresh perspective. We will also present the consequences of making unhealthy choices through our drug ambassador program, sponsored by the National Library on Addiction.

Parents interested in getting more information about the 2005 Spring Summit should look for a letter from the school department in the coming days.

The Spring Summit is made possible by the generous support of the volunteers from Project Safeguard. Project Safeguard is a Cohasset community initiative that offers information to youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and wellbeing. For information about becoming involved with Project Safeguard, contact Nancy Oddleifson, fiveodds@aol.com or Sheila Toomey, toomey6@comcast.net.

Rabies clinic April 9 at NE Wildlife Center

Rabies is an infectious viral disease that affects the nervous system of humans and other mammals. People get rabies from the bite of an animal with rabies. Any wild mammal, like a raccoon, skunk, fox, coyote, or bat can have rabies and transmit it to people. It is also possible, but rare, that people may get rabies from a rabid animal if its infected saliva gets directly into their eyes, nose, mouth or a wound.

The New England Wildlife Center will conduct a rabies clinic April 9 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at 19 Fort Hill St. There will be a $10 charge for a rabies vaccine. Please call the Cohasset Health Dept. at 781-383-4116 with questions.

Because rabies is a fatal disease, the goal of public health is to educate people to avoid exposure and to prevent the disease by vaccination treatment if exposure occurs. Rabies is preventable by following these simple guidelines:

- Be a responsible pet owner by keeping vaccinations current for all your pets.
- Teach children not to touch unfamiliar animals. The rule, "Love your own, leave other animals alone," is a good one to follow.
- Make sure pet food and garbage are not left out where they can attract animals. Cover trash cans tightly.
- Feed pets indoors and keep them indoors at night.
- If you are bitten or scratched by an animal, wash the area thoroughly with warm water and soap for at least 10 minutes and contact your primary care physician.
- Use caution when handling an animal that has been in a fight with another animal. If possible, wear gloves when handling your pet after a direct encounter with a wild or stray animal.
- Be extra cautious about bats. Bat bites and scratches may be so tiny they may be undetectable. If you think you or your children may have been bitten or scratched while asleep, you should call your primary care physician. Bat-proof your house by closing any outside exposure in the attic and screen all windows.

Pope was a hit at historic Mass on Boston Common sure his tapes were ruined.

"It was a miracle, we didn't short out," he recalls. "I took the master tape back to Cohasset and used a hairdryer all night long to dry the tape and then I let it air dry for two days." He said the tapes played beautifully and captured the day as it was, just as the archdiocese had wanted, complete with all the sounds of wind and rain.

Rik Tinory in October 1979 on top of a kiosk from where he recorded Pope John Paul II's mass.

Tinory will share his personal recollections in the CD's sleeve, which will state in part, "standing in the rain were people of all faiths — women holding babies, children, the elderly and handicapped.

"A symphony of bells erupted. The pastoral messenger of justice and peace had arrived to a tumultuous welcome of which I had never experienced. The cheers of 'long live the Pope' and 'viva il Papa' began, the decibel level was deafening.

"This was history in the making and it was more than anything I could have imagined."

Tinory recalls the Pope saying, "Today I stand at the gateway to the United States and again I greet all of America. Its people wherever they are have a special place in the love of the Pope.

"I want to tell everyone that the Pope is your friend," the pontiff said. "I greet you America the beautiful – beautiful even when it rains."

More to life than winter

FAITH REFLECTIONS

GARY RITTS

And so it's finally spring! A time we begin to sense there certainly is more to life than winter would have us believe. There are always times of darkness and despair in everyone's life. We all are saddened by the passing of Pope John Paul II, and will keep St. Anthony's Parish, the Catholic Church and the College of Cardinals in our prayers.

As we all move through the winter-times of our lives, it's those springtime gifts of fresh-smelling air and glorious colors that speak to souls that are starving for hope. All of our religious traditions have holidays that coincide with spring and the chance at a renewal of life and Spirit.

May the fresh, spring-like breath of God breathe upon us all! And may that uplifting of spirit infuse every relationship from our own spiritual journeys, into our families, right through our own Cohasset community and, finally, out into our needy world!

The Rev. Gary A. Ritts is pastor of the Second Congregational Church. Faith Reflections is a monthly series by members of the Cohasset Clergy Association.

Q: What's Fred done for you?
A: Plenty

"Fred was the selectman that made sure the town outlined the proposed Village bump-outs right on the streets. Thank god he did. Everyone saw how foolish and damaging they would have been.

Fred didn't just do the right thing for us, the merchants, he knew what was best for the whole town. I don't want to lose that thinking on the Board."

-- Jim Watson, Proprietor, Cohasset Hardware

"Many of us in our senior years are finding higher and higher taxes and fees too much to bear.

I don't know what the solution is. I do know that Fred Koed is the person at town hall to figure it out for us. He agrees there is a problem."

-- Nancy Snowdale, long-term Resident of Beechwood, and retired Assistant Tax Collector of Cohasset, outside her home on Mill Lane

"Its hard to believe, but back in the 1990s, the water system in our whole part of town collapsed. We had no water at our taps, and the hydrants didn't work. Fred was the one town official that came to our rescue. No finger pointing from him. He got the job done."

-- Mary Hartwell, of Rust Way, reminds Fred her faucet was used to monitor water pressure in her neighborhood during the water crisis of 1994, when Fred was Water Commissioner.

"As a former school teacher, I know what a challenge it is to fund our schools, with costs going up across the board. We think Fred is highly capable of finding the solutions to support quality schools.

He also treats everyone, fairly. He listens to all of us. We support him strongly."

-- Sarah Gomez of Highland Avenue with husband Gabriel and son, Max aka 'Pudge'

For Affordability

Every capital project, operating budget, and development strategy needs to be looked at for its impact on taxes, fees, and town services. We must find a solution so everyone – young families and seniors alike – can stay in Cohasset.

For Quality Schools and Services

The challenge is to maintain quality education and town services in the face of escalating cost pressures. My goal is to identify and implement the greatest dollar efficiency for our schools, DPW, fire, and police.

For Our Neighborhoods

Existing homeowners, residents, and tax payers are my first priority. Developers should neither gain first access to our sewer capacity until all needed areas are sewered, nor degrade the investment we all have in our homes.

For Controlled and Planned Growth

We need to work even harder to preserve the character of Cohasset while allowing for controlled growth in our business districts to better stabilize our tax rate. The new Master Plan is our roadmap for achieving this critical balance.

"I ask for one of your two votes to return me as your Selectman this year. Frankly, I think Cohasset government needs a major course correction."

Committee reports on school budget investigation

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Bill Avery and Gabriel Gomez of the school budget investigation committee show a charge of the school budgets from fiscal 2003 through fiscal 2005.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Last December's Special Town Meeting voted for the Troika to appoint a committee to investigate why the school department was over budget for fiscal 2004.

At Saturday's Annual Town Meeting that group presented its findings, complete with recommendations for the future.

The committee found at the heart of many school budget issues lies the common denominator of a lack of communication. There has been a feeling around town that year after year there are "surprises" in the school budget, which arise at the last minute, for which a large amount of funding is necessary. The committee recommended the school committee become more aware of potential account deficits and possible solutions, and moving forward approve inter-account transfers. For example, if a teacher retires and money becomes available that could be used in another area, the school committee should vote to make that transfer to keep everyone on the same page.

In addition, the report recommended all financial information available to the school committee should be shared with the town manager, director of finance, and advisory committee chairman to keep more people abreast of the school budget situation throughout the year.

The committee also recommended the school committee present at the Annual Town Meeting, a balanced budget that does not rely on being supplemented by a later Town Meeting. Historically, certain line items in the school budget have been underfunded with the expectation the money could be allocated at a later date. The idea that overrides are an annual necessity should no longer exist, the report states.

The town had passed a $400,000 operating budget override at the 2004 Annual Town Meeting to help balance the school department's fiscal 2005 operating budget, and with that action still fresh in the minds of taxpayers, a $93,000 unpaid gas bill had surfaced just before the end of the fiscal year June 30.

At the December 2004 Special Town Meeting, the school committee came under scrutiny and voters spent almost 90 minutes deciding whether to allocate funds for an unpaid Keyspan gas bill for the schools.

Not only was it determined the $93,000 would need to be paid for fiscal 2005, it would need to be added to the budget for fiscal 2006. That, coupled with an additional $65,000 in unbudgeted unemployment costs which would also need to be paid for fiscal 2005 as well as added to the budget moving forward, caused many voters to question the school budgeting process. One resident even called for the resignation of three school committee members, effective immediately. However, voters ultimately approved the appointment of the investigative committee instead.

The committee was appointed by the Troika, which consists of Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan, Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee and Town Moderator George Marlette in early February and is comprised of Chairman Joe Barresi, a former Inspector General of the Commonwealth and former advisory committee member; Dick Avery, also a former advisory committee member; Gabriel Gomez, a police advisory council member; Maureen Jerz, a former advisory committee and school committee member; and Margaret Lynch, a former advisory committee member.

Getting down to business

To begin its work, the committee completed a series of interviews beginning with Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh. Former Supt. Edward Malvey was interviewed as well. Director of Finance Michael Buckley — who served as Acting Town Manager from the beginning of May until Jan. 31 when new Town Manager Bill Griffin came on board — was interviewed twice. Griffin was also interviewed as was Selectman Rob Spofford, formerly the chairman of the building facilities committee. Advisory Committee Vice Chairman Bernadette Faulkner who serves as that board's liaison to the school committee was also interviewed as were school committee member Rick Flynn and School Committee Chairman Rick Shea. The committee also interviewed a Keyspan customer representative.

Avery and Gomez presented the committee's findings at last Saturday's Town Meeting, which uncovered a list of systemic problems including:

•Insufficient up front information: The committee constructed a timeline of when information was available to the school staff, and it found insufficient information was available in early 2003 to enable the department to predict utility costs for fiscal 2004 renovations.

attendance. Unlike other recent Town Meetings, business was completed in one day. As is custom, Town Meeting will formally adjourn after the Annual Election which this year will be held Saturday, April 9 (See related story).

The town voted to approve a total operating budget of $31,886,824, with the school's portion totaling $12,629,382, including the $400,000 override.

Selectmen and the advisory committee recommended the budget as proposed.

"I don't think anyone prefers to recommend an override," said Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan, but added his board felt it was in the best interests of the town. Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee said her committee felt there was no other way to sustain the level of service. She said the town and schools had cut as much as they could be without affecting services.

However, there were some in the crowd who needed some additional clarification before casting a vote in the affirmative.

Bill Flynn, 41 Atlantic Ave., asked Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh to explain how the override figure was decreased to $400,000 when it started out as $640,000.

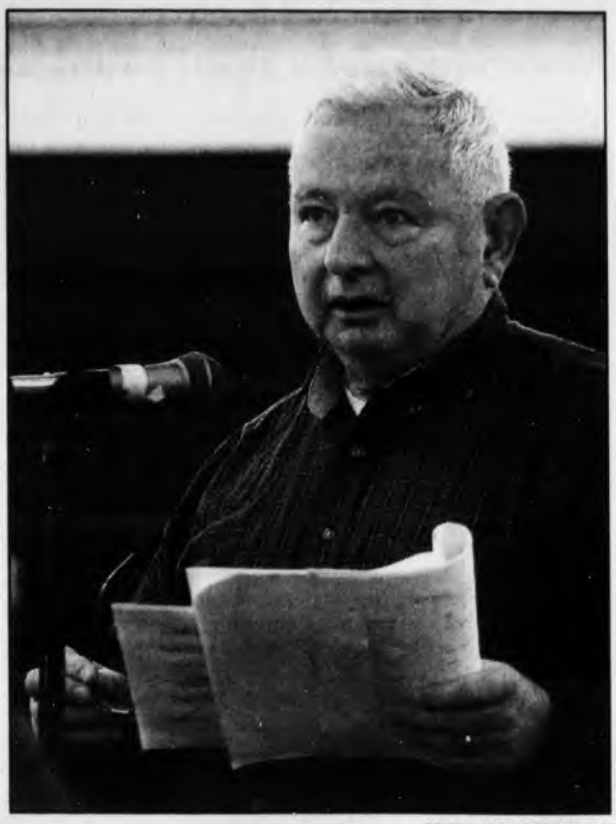
Walsh explained the school department is in the middle of settling two special education cases which have some guardianship issues that are currently in litigation. One is for $185,000 and the second is for $10,000. If those cases are settled, they will no longer be the responsibility of the district. However, the Department of Education will need to approve the final special education figures and the school department is not sure what the final outcome will be. In addition, Walsh said the schools have looked at salaries to make up the additional $45,000.

Griffin said because the special education cases will likely not be Cohasset's responsibility moving forward, it wouldn't have made sense to include them in the override because that would raise the tax levy "for all of eternity" when the money is only going to be needed for one year.

General overrides are permanent tax increases and are absorbed into the regular tax base the following year. Under Prop. 2-1/2, the state law capping the amount a municipality can raise its taxes without voter approval, a town can only raise its tax levy by 2-1/2 percent without an override.

Joe McElroy, 59 Windy Hill Road, said he was baffled at the budget that flies in the face of the committee to investigate the school committee's report stating the town should not accept overrides as being an annual occurrence (see related story). Town Meeting voted to accept that proposal, and McElroy said, "But that's exactly what we're doing."

He added the budget assumes teachers will take a zero percent increase in salaries and contract negotiations are not final.



Sullivan said McElroy brought up a very good point, and said last year, town employees agreed to a zero percent raise, and this year the budget is asking the same of the teachers.

"No one likes to do it, but I think it's important to recognize all the individuals that work for us contribute significantly to the community and we want to support them all," Sullivan said.

McElroy reiterated the teachers have not accepted a zero percent increase, and asked whether "Everybody would stick by their guns," in asking for that zero percent if the teachers threaten to go on strike.

School Committee Chairman Rick Shea said while they are in the negotiations process, "it would be completely inappropriate for us to make a definitive statement."

The budget was passed by a majority vote.

Local shellfish beds open

Selectman Ronnie McMorris said the selectmen recently received a letter from the Division of Marine Fisheries, dated Jan. 31, 2005, which states the town's shellfish beds have received approval to open. That means seafood from the shellfish beds, which have been closed since1978, could be harvested for direct human consumption, subject to local rules and regulations.

"The Division has determined that the area now meets the established criteria for the harvest of shellfish and has changed the status to 'Open to shellfishing'," the letter states.

The shellfish beds are located in the waters and flats of the portion of Massachusetts bay both in Cohasset and Scituate, northerly of a line drawn northeasterly from Strawberry Point in Scituate, southerly of a line drawn along the Cohasset/Hull line, northerly of a line drawn across the entrance to Cohasset Harbor and Little Harbor, and westerly of the Plymouth County line.

McMorris said she would like more information regarding what caused the status to change which would allow the shellfish beds to be open once again. The issue will be discussed at an upcoming meeting of the board.

Bia Bistro's Brian Houlihan keeps endangered fish off the menu

Local chef receives eco-friendly seafood award

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Since opening in December 2004, Bia Bistro in downtown Cohasset has received rave reviews from locals who dine there. But not only is the food delicious, it's environmentally friendly.

During the first week of March, head chef and owner of Bia Bistro, Brian Houlihan, was flown down to Washington D.C. by the National Environmental Trust, to receive an award for his efforts on a sustainable seafood campaign called, "Take a Pass on Chilean Sea Bass." As part of the effort, Houlihan has agreed to keep the endangered fish off his menu.

Houlihan explained the Chilean sea bass, which is also known as the Patagonian Toothfish, is on the verge of commercial extinction due to over-fishing. He said it takes 10 years for the fish to mature, and many are being caught before having a chance to reproduce, which is having a devastating affect on the species. By agreeing to take the fish off his menu, Houlihan is promoting the efforts of those who catch seafood in an environmentally sensitive manner, therefore benefiting the health of the oceans. In addition, he is purchasing all his fish from local fishermen, which gives their business a boost.

According to the NET, since 1991, the Chilean sea bass has gone from being virtually unknown to becoming one of the most popular fish in America. However, even with the threat of commercial extinction, pirate fishermen continue to catch the fish illegally. Although international laws exist to protect the species, they are ineffective and hard to enforce. Unless demand for the fish declines, estimates suggest that it may be commercially extinct within five years.

That is where Houlihan stepped in.

To help bring down the demand for Chilean sea bass, the NET began asking chefs to take the fish off their menus. Houlihan said while he was serving as the Executive Chef at Seasons Restaurant at the Millennium Bostonian Hotel, he was approached with the idea to take Chilean sea bass off his menu, and he was happy to oblige.

"I take it as part of my job to educate people on what to eat and lead them in the right direction."
— Brian Houlihan, Bia Bistro

"I take it as part of my job to educate people on what to eat and lead them in the right direction," he said. "It's very important people take it seriously."

Houlihan said restaurants in Boston were among the first to become involved in the campaign adding, "I was one of the first in Boston and I've never had it on the menu since then," he said. Houlihan said the effort has since spread to larger cities such as New York and San Francisco.

"Lots of chefs took it off their menus," to begin with, he said, but last year, when the NET revisited and contacted restaurants to see how the efforts were going, they found Chilean sea bass had found its way back to the table. "I was one of the only ones that kept it off," he said.

Impressed by Houlihan's dedication to the efforts, the NET asked him to be a part of their 10th anniversary celebration in Washington D.C. There were three awards given out during a large banquet for various environmental conservation efforts, one of which was presented to Houlihan.

"It was a lot bigger deal than I thought," he said, adding he had expected there to be closer to 100 people in attendance with 20 awards given out, but upon his arrival, he was greatly surprised. "There were about 550 people and three awards," he said, adding if he had known how big it was going to be, he would have brought his family along for the trip, including wife Tristen and their three children, Conor, Hailey, and Aiden.

Houlihan said there are many other great seafood options chefs can incorporate into their menus, and he said due to his location in Cohasset Village, he has been very fortunate to be able to take advantage of the fresh local seafood caught off its coast.

"I talk to the local fisherman and see what's abundant," he said, adding sea scallops, mussels, cod, and haddock are very abundant and tasty. "I try to get it right off the boats."

"We always have a seafood stew on our menu," he said, and the seafood keeps changing depending on what is available. He said he hopes chefs from all over will follow suit, and serve up the type of seafood which is most abundant and environmentally-friendly in their areas, helping spread the message to their customers.

Bia Bistro is located at 35 South Main St. It is open Tuesday through Friday from 5-10 p.m., Saturday from 4-10 p.m. and Sunday from 5-9 p.m. To make reservations, please call (781) 383-0464. Bia Bistro recently introduced a more casual big plate/small plate menu in addition to its regular menu. Please visit the restaurant's Web site at www.biabistro.com for more information and for upcoming events.

"SHE THINKS I'M FUNNY AGAIN"

I used to really crack her up with my jokes. But, over the years, my comic routines seemed to get a little tired with her. She did ask me to repeat a lot so we went to Mass Audiology for a free hearing test. Before the exam, they asked her lots of questions. Come to find out, she was having trouble hearing a lot of things! Who knew that she couldn't hear my great punchlines? Now, she hears great! And, I seem to be funny again.

Are Hazards Hiding in Your House?

The miracles of modern convenience often come with a side effect: toxicity.

Chemicals that kill crabgrass, remove rust, dissolve paint, and even electronic devices and some building materials can also make us sick if we toss them out carelessly.

The South Shore Recycling Cooperative has some tips to prevent us from poisoning our planet:

1. Be careful what you buy

Choose the least toxic product to get the job done. Simple soapy water cleans most surfaces. Latex paint is easier to work with and dispose than oil based paint. If you buy too much, you can just dry it up and put it in the trash. Oil based paints and thinners are flammable, the fumes can make you sick, and they need to be brought to your town's paint shed or household hazardous product (HHP) collection for proper disposal (which, by the way, costs your town a lot of money). Electronic thermostats are also a safer and more versatile choice than non-electronic ones, which contain a lot of mercury and should also be disposed separately.

2. Fight the urge to buy the bulky bargain!

Proper disposal of excess hazardous products can cost more than what you paid for them; improper dumping can hurt people. For instance, flammables in the trash can cause trash truck fires.

3. Weigh the choices

Some products that contain scary stuff have other virtues that outweigh their toxicity. Fluorescent lights contain small amounts of mercury, but save large amounts of energy. So buy them, then recycle them at your town's recycling center or HHP collection, along with your old fashioned thermostats and thermometers.

Rechargeable batteries contain cadmium, another toxic heavy metal. But they too save energy, as well as waste, and can be safely recycled like fluorescent lights. Their alkaline counterparts are not toxic, but they only deliver 2% of the energy required to make them, and they weigh down your trash.

4. Throwing it away doesn't mean it goes away.

What you put in your trash or down your drain can end up in the air you breathe, the water you drink, or in a sanitation worker's face. Solvents, pesticides, pool chemicals, automotive fluids, caustic cleaners, and toxic metals like mercury and cadmium are just some of the hazards that may be hiding in your house. Most towns provide safe ways to dispose of them, and will even trade you a digital thermometer through a program run by American Ref-Fuel for your mercury ones! The South Shore Recycling Cooperative coordinates about a dozen town collection events open to all area residents each year. If you're not sure what to do with your household hazardous products, check with your Board of Health or go to ssrc.info.

BUSINESS NOTES

Wild Plums opens in Cohasset village

Wild Plums announces the opening of its second location at 24 South Main St. in Cohasset Village. Wild Plums is a children's clothing and gift store catering to boys and girls from birth to 8 years of age. Carrying a wide selection of clothing, it features designers such as Florence Eiseman, K.C. Parker, E-Land and Petite Bateau. Also showcased is a large selection of special occasion dresses from US Angels, Susanne Lively and Sweetie Pie.

Owned by Stephen and Julie Galgay, their first store opened in South Boston two years ago. It has been named the 2004 Editor's Pick for Best Children's Clothing Store by the Parents Paper and is featured in the City Style section of the April Boston Magazine. The store is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and can be reached at 781-383-6254, or visit its Web site: www.WildPlums.com.

Music Circus box office opens

Always a sure sign that summer is near, the South Shore Music Circus box office will open for the season on Saturday, April 9 at noon for in-person sales.

To celebrate our opening day, radio station Country 99.5/WKLB will be on hand for the special festivities.

The Music Circus box office is located at 130 Sohier St., and will be open from noon- 6 p.m. daily throughout the season. Tickets will be on sale for all announced shows scheduled at both the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and our sister venue, the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis. For concert updates, check the Music Circus web site at www.themusiccircus.org.

No seat is more than 50 feet from the stage. Sit closer - it's just better.

The South Shore Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent have hosted world-class entertainment for over 50 years, serving nearly 200,000 patrons annually. The Music Circus and Melody Tent, as well as Music Circus Productions, are operated by South Shore Playhouse Associates (SSPA), a not-for-profit organization that supports arts and education in Southeastern Massachusetts. In the past decade, the SSPA has distributed over $1.7 million to other local non-profit organizations.

The new Crate&Barrel
at Derby Street Shoppes
in Hingham is now open.

To visit this store, take Route 3 to Exit 15 and turn right off the exit. Monday-Saturday 10-9, Sunday 11-6. 781.749.8100

Committee reports on school budget investigation

FROM BUDGET, PAGE 8

• Incompatible financial reporting systems: The school and town departments currently operate with different chart of accounts structure. The school department says it had difficulty presenting monthly financial statements.

• Acceptance of overrides: Budgeting risks were taken to delay or minimize Prop. 2-1/2 overrides. Implicit in this is the understanding that at Special Town Meeting in the fall, corrections can be enacted with more funding.

• Poor monitoring: The school committee was not made aware of the Keyspan bill, which was three times the normal bill, until after a March 2004 Town Meeting had approved a $200,000 addition to school utilities.

• Weak communication: Communication between prior school administrators, the Town Manager and the school committee proved to be insufficient. This fed a mutual mistrust which led to "posturing" for override levels, which led to tight budgets, which invited overruns.

• Insufficient oversight: The school committee did not exercise vigorous oversight over the superintendent and school administration, and did not require monthly financial information.

Agnes McCann, 104 Doane St., said she was struck by one recommendation — the town should not accept overrides every year.

"We need overrides when we need them, they're not one size fits all," she said. McCann added a 2-1/2 percent increase "has never been enough. Let's expect 2-1/2 is never going to be enough," she said.

However, Avery said looking into the town's history, "We can live a couple of years at a time without them." He said by looking at areas such as conserving utilities and salaries, "There are many ways to be creative in keeping the total below 2-1/2," he said.

George Chamillard studies the school budget during last Saturday's annual Town Meeting as the school budget investigation committee explains its findings.

Selectmen Chairman Michael Sullivan said it is important to note, however, over the last two to three years roughly $700,000 has been cut in state funding, which has made staying within those bounds a challenge.

To further help remedy the situation, Director of Finance Michael Buckley said by July 1, the existing Town Hall computer network will be expanded to include the school budget information. He said from then on, the schools will be on the town server and both will have the same charter of accounts.

In addition, Supt. Walsh said her interim financial consultant has been working with the software company that designed the school's accounting program and the school department will be able to provide monthly reports going forward.

However, R. Murray Campbell, 75 Old Pasture Road, asked what assurance does the town have from the school department that it is going to adopt the recommendations?

Walsh said Town Meeting was also the first time she was seeing the budget investigation committee's recommendations and she would need time to process the information and bring the recommendations back to her staff. In fact, she said in looking at the presentation, "Much has already been dealt with."

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A man of courage and faith

While mourning his passing, the worldwide Roman Catholic community celebrates the life of 84-year-old Pope John Paul II. He would not want mourners. He is finally with God, to whom he dedicated his life, and his suffering has ended.

Those who are not Catholic share in paying tribute to a man who left an indelible imprint on history. He bore witness to Nazism and communism, meeting both with courage and faith. As much as any one man, he sent communism to history's dustbin.

He was a highly educated man, earning two masters degrees and a doctorate in philosophy, and a prolific author. His intellectual gifts were balanced by a caring and practical nature.

Born Karol Jozef Wojtyla on May 18, 1920, his childhood years were difficult. His mother died when he was 8, his brother when he was 12, and his father when he was 21. Though raised a strict Roman Catholic, he was taught to respect and admire people of other faiths. That served the Roman Catholic Church in good stead two years ago when he ended the long-standing estrangement between Catholics and Jews.

He was a highly educated man, earning two masters degrees and a doctorate in philosophy, and a prolific author. His intellectual gifts were balanced by a caring and practical nature. As a young priest, he founded programs to help those with marital problems and alcoholism, and he provided counseling on family planning and physical abuse. He loved children. He spoke out in defense of the most vulnerable among us.

And he was a man who believed in miracles. He brought to sainthood 482 people during his 26 years as pope, more than any other pope in the history of the church. His recovery from an assassin's bullet was something of a miracle itself.

Historians will long debate the legacy of this remarkable man. He helped liberate millions yet remained a theological conservative. In an age of moral relativism, he held fast to the morals and principles his church had embraced for centuries.

In the days to come, millions of words will be spent trying to summarize the life of Pope John Paul II and capture his essence in fitting tribute. All will be inadequate. The prayers in the hearts of the faithful will speak more eloquently than eulogists and editorial writers.

May he rest in peace, and live on in the deeds of believers and the respect of people of every faith.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks to those who make road race possible

TO THE EDITOR:

Cohasset has again had a successful Road Race By The Sea sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club. For those residents of Cohasset who don't know much about the Rotary Club it is made up of a small group of extremely generous individuals who work very hard to help others. I have had the pleasure of working with the Rotary Club to put on the race for more than 25 years.

Without their help and generosity we wouldn't be able to have our race. The Club works quietly behind the scenes and helps many of the Town"s organizations, families in need, and also world wide Rotary Club projects. One year they worked to help eradicate polio from the world and made a very generous donation to an African Nation to complete their program to eradicate polio.

We all owe the Rotary Club of Cohasset a big thank you for putting on the race. Cohasset is lucky to have these dedicated individuals.

We should also thank a few volunteers who have worked the race for many years Sharpless Jones and Brian Noble.

Congratulations to the walkers and runners who participated today, to the sponsors who generously supported the race, to the Town departments who volunteered their services to make the race a success. A special thank you to the personnel from the highway department who were out on the roads early this morning patching the pot holes to make the course safer for the participants.

Apology noted

TO THE EDITOR:

I should have known better. At town Meeting on Saturday, I reacted inappropriately and said something that appeared to some to question Mark DeGiacomo's integrity. That was not my intention and to attempt to explain what I said would probably lead to my foot becoming even further lodged in my mouth.

I sincerely apologize to Mark and to the citizens in attendance. It was uncalled for.

SAFETY COUNTS

CHIEF HUSSEY

As you set out for that run, walk or bike ride, please consider the following tips to make your adventure a safe one.

The Police/Community Council has met on two occasions since the start of the year. We are reviewing the services the police department currently provides as well as the results of the public safety survey. We have had good discussions and all agreed that one area the police department could improve its services was in providing information and education to the community. The issue of wanting more information/education from the police department also surfaced in the public safety survey.

Spring has finally arrived. Everyone is getting over winter's induced "cabin fever". As you set out for that run, walk or bike ride, please consider the following tips to make your adventure a safe one.

- Use designated run/walk areas whenever possible. Running/walking on trails through parks, woods or on a sidewalk is always the safest option.
- Run/walk with a partner. This is especially important if you are running/walking in the woods or a park. There will be times when you should go "single file" to maintain safety.
- Run/walk during daylight hours. Obviously you can see and be seen much better in the daylight. If you must run before/after daylight, make sure to wear reflective material.
- Running/walking on the street. If you run/walk on the street, make sure to run/walk against the traffic. This allows you to see a potential hazard approaching. If a vehicle's driver has poor vision, is intoxicated, is talking on a cell phone, is blinded by the sun or oncoming lights or is distracted in some other manner, you want to be able to take evasive action. You cannot do so if your back is to the traffic. A vehicle coming toward you is a good time to go "single file" if you are running/walking with others. "Single file" is also a good idea when approaching the curves in a road. This is when both you and an oncoming vehicle will have trouble seeing each other.
- Make eye contact with the vehicle's driver at intersections and driveways. You never want to assume that a driver sees you. Most drivers are just looking for other vehicles. Make eye contact with the driver to insure he/she is yielding before you proceed through the intersection or pass the driveway.

For you bicycle enthusiasts, there are a different set of rules to follow. Here are a couple of tips to consider:

- Use proper equipment. Inspect your bicycle (brakes, tires, etc…) to make sure it is in good working order. Mirrors are very helpful in monitoring vehicle movement around you. Wear a helmet. Just because you didn't wear one when you were younger doesn't make it all right. What better way to model positive behavior for our youth and your children.
- Use designated bike paths whenever possible. Anytime you can avoid mixing with vehicle traffic your ride will be more enjoyable.
- Ride during daylight hours. If you must ride before/after daylight, make sure to wear reflective material.
- Riding on the streets. Bicycles follow the same "rules of the road" as do motor vehicles. You not only ride in the same direction as vehicle traffic, but you should obey traffic signs and signals. Stay far to the right to allow vehicle traffic to move safely around you. Use hand signals to give notice of your intended action/movement.

I hope you find this information helpful. If you follow these guidelines you will make our streets safer for everyone.

HEALTH NOTES

Environmentally friendly artificial turf

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

With the coming of spring, we will again see the platoons of landscapers and grass cutters invading our lawns and gardens. With these ministrations will come the addition of tons of fertilizers and lawn chemicals, most of which will leach into the groundwater and add to the already dangerous levels of nutrients in our water bodies, Cohasset Cove, Lily Pond, the Gulf and the rest.

It seems that there's no way to get people to give up their addiction to the need for perfect lawns and the consequent desire to spend millions on fertilizer and lawn care. Well, here's an alternative. Artificial turf. That's right: Astroturf, Synlawn, Sprinturf, to give some of the trade names of companies who sell synthetic lawn products.

It seems that there's no way to get people to give up their addiction to the need for perfect lawns and the consequent desire to spend millions on fertilizer and lawn care.

After years of development, these products have reached near perfection in terms of their ability to reproduce good looking lawns. And compared to conventional lawns they cost less and require almost no maintenance. Moreover, they are better for the environment, and certainly better for those who choose to walk lie or play on the lawn outside.

Here's a clip from one vendor:

"LawnScape product is the perfect solution for your home landscaping needs. Tired of maintaining your yard? Want it to look like your gardener was there this morning — every day? LawnScape requires no water, never needs mowing, and drains quickly when it rains. Oh, and how about LawnScape installations in regions where it doesn't rain too often? Recent droughts have been decimating lawns lately. Your lawn can look lush and green all year round. Whether you are looking for aesthetic edging on your property or huge swaths of green grass, LawnScape is your solution."

And there's competition. There are several very aggressive vendors for this product. Moreover, it's probably much cheaper than equivalent real turf.

Let's work out some details: These turf products sell for prices in the range of $3 to $5 per square foot. They come in 15 foot rolls. They are generally made of 100 percent nylon with blended colors. The grass blades are cut to about 1-3/4 inches long. And most have a 10-year color fade guarantee.

Let's say you have a 20 by 100 foot front yard, 2000 square feet. The lawn will cost about $10,000. No need to do the back; after all, nobody sees that. Now what do you spend per year for lawn maintenance? There are, of course, other costs. Site preparation. It's necessary to ensure proper drainage, and, to ensure that rainwater enters the ground without causing ruts or siltage, but these are minor expenses equivalent to rototilling and edging; done once and forgotten.

And now you have a lawn which is beautiful; doesn't contribute to creation of algae and plant growth in our water bodies, and is safe for people to walk and play on. After all the Patriots play on Astroturf, and if it's good enough for the Patriots, shouldn't it be good enough for you?

Reptilian residents with personality plus

ON THE WILD SIDE

JUNE FREEDMAN

What's in a name?

Most people think of the N.E. Wildlife Center as the place to bring injured and orphaned animals and birds for treatment and rehabilitation and eventual release back to the wild. Not so for the residents of the reptile room at the Center: Rosie, Winston and Joe, Beardy and Skinky, Woody and Boxy, and Spot, Spot and Spot.

Known as the educational animals, these residents were pets brought to the Center by people who could no longer care for them, or they were animals whose injuries precluded their release. Hence they have been given names as well as lots of TLC provided by a faithful team of volunteers who visit them every day of the week to feed and bathe them, clean their habitat, and provide enrichment. The residents earn their room and board by being available to campers and school groups who visit the Center as well as by "going on the road" to classrooms and to fund raisers.

Staff can be quite ingenious in their naming. Two large African Spur-Thighed Tortoises lumbered around the clinic, one named Sherman, the other Tank. I remember an American Crow named Poe, after the author of "The_Raven." I took care of Poe, a human-imprinted bird, until he moved on to better quarters at a local zoo, and he entirely changed my concept of crows. Poe greeted me enthusiastically, and he vocalized profusely with much more than the raucous "caw-caw" I was used to hearing from the tops of my backyard white pine. He loved to play, particularly with bright shiny objects, and I had been warned not to wear earrings into his cage. He liked to be hand fed, and would often hide pieces of his meal about his cage for a later snack.

Then there was Elvis, the boa constrictor, of whom I was not quite so fond. So named because of an injury to his upper "lip" which gave him The King's famous look, the appeal ended there, at least for me. Elvis would flatten himself upright against the glass of his cage, as if readying for escape. Most of the time I barely managed to replenish his water. His ration of dead mice fortunately was fed him by professional staff.

Boa constrictors are not poisonous, but as the name suggests, asphyxiate by strangling their prey before swallowing them whole. Their unique jaw structure allows them to open very wide.

Our current resident boa, Winston, I find far less daunting. Much smaller, in fact he is hard to find at all, since he is usually hiding under the paper in his cage, more afraid of me than I of him, I suspect. He did prove to be the better escape artist, however. After several days on the "Missing Reptile List", he was found comfortably curled up in a drawer! I am still at the "getting-to-know-you" stage with Joe, the Western Hognose Snake.

As potential caregivers of the educational animals, we had been given excellent training, including the handling of the snakes. I had no problem doing so at the time with other people in the room. However, my first visit to the reptile room alone found me wondering, how many hours would pass before I would be found with a boa around my neck — and not the synthetic dress-up kind!

Known as the educational animals, these residents were pets brought to the Center by people who could no longer care for them, or they were animals whose injuries precluded their release.

Neither does Rosie, the Chilean Rose Tarantula, rank high on my popularity list. Tarantulas do have venomous fangs, to which some people are allergic, although no person has been known to die from a tarantula bite. Although she shares the furry feel of my cats, whose coats I love to stroke, I somehow think to do so with Rosie would raise rather than lower my blood pressure. I just manage to replenish Rosie's water and drop in her supplement of mealy worms and crickets. I leave her enrichment activities to heartier souls. Would a tarantula by any other name be so sweet?

Zoos and other places where animals are kept in captivity are becoming increasingly aware of the need for enrichment activities. Thus at the Center the educational animals are visited by volunteers for additional handling, bathing and soaking, changes in the furnishings of their habitats, such as rocks, branches and other objects, as well as time spent out of their cages and out-of-doors, weather permitting.

Beardy, the Bearded Dragon, who hails from Australia, is very lovable and the favorite of many. He loves to be handled and stroked, and clings very nicely to one's chest with his prehensile claws and tail. In this position he is quite an eye-catcher at fund raisers, and has more than earned his keep. His cagemate, Skinky, is a Blue-Tongued Skink, a fellow Australian lizard belonging to the family Tiliqua, and relatively shy.

Madison Foley, 5, pets a turtle while visiting the New England Wildlife Center in Hingham.

Also roommates are Woody, the Wood Turtle, and Boxy, the Eastern Box Turtle

(I know, I know, not so ingeniously named). Then there are Spot, Spot and Spot, three very gentle Leopard Geckos, so named because they are practically indistinguishable!

Not all the educational animals are reptilian. The avian population is also well represented at the Center. There is Sgt. Pepper, the Screech Owl, and Puddles, the Peking Duck. Finally, there is Fernando, the Bantam Rooster, and Thumbelina, the Rhode Island Red, who comes when called en falsetto "chicken, chicken, chicken."

Such is the cast of characters who make up the family of permanent residents at the N. E. Wildlife Center. Some are adopted in time by competent caregivers who can give them even more time and attention. Some, unfortunately, die in captivity of the usual animal maladies despite excellent veterinary and daily care. In such cases, they are truly missed and grieved by the staff and volunteers.

That reminds me, I really should go visit Poe the crow to see if he remembers me as fondly as I do him!

June Freedman is a resident of Hingham and a volunteer at the N. E. Wildlife Center. You, too, can become involved with the Center. For more information, please call at 781-749-5387.

Entry fee for Boston?

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I see where indigent Boston is out to nail us 'affluent' suburbs again. I guess we'll have to give up that weekend on the Riviera, Muffy. (There, there, don't cry.)

City Councilor Paul J. Scapicchio, who hails from the North End, where even the churchmice stand in bread lines, wants to charge us $1 to $5 just to drive to work or shop in the city where we can pay up to $20 to park our BMWs for a day in what is purported to be a safe place after filling our tanks with gas at $2 a gallon.

For the safety of the driving and walking public in Boston as well as the suburbs, I haven't driven a car for several years now so my recollection of parking fees in Boston and the price of gasoline may be faulty. It may be $100 a day and $5 a gallon now, for all I know.

Maybe they will set up a toll booth at Neponset Circle and call it Checkpoint Tommy.

But I digress . . .

Scapicchio also wants to set up cameras on the main commuter roads to take pictures of the number plates of our cars as they enter the city so we can be assessed $1 to $5 for passes or fined, depending on how much money the mayor needs that day to keep his cops off the picket line.

For the sake of headline writers everywhere, we can call it "the Scapicchio Tax." Of course, money is the last thing the good councilor had in mind when he proposed the entry fee.

"The program could remedy three problems: congestion, pollution and the lack of revenue," he said. "This could discourage the use of our overburdened roadways and create a revenue source to fix our falling bridges and pothole-filled streets."

Boston's Mayor Tom Menino is all for it.

"Anything we can do to reduce congestion on the streets of our city, we're willing to take a serious look at," he said.

Maybe they will set up a toll booth at Neponset Circle and call it Checkpoint Tommy.

If I were running South Shore Plaza or Hanover Mall, I'd be all for it, too. Anything that discourages you shoppers from the affluent suburbs from filling your pockets with money and using Boston's overburdened streets to shop 'til you drop would be okay with me.

Then there is Fred Salvucci. You remember Fred. He was Mike Dukakis' transportation secretary and he likes the idea of the Scapicchio Tax, too. The last time I saw his name in print it was accompanied by the phrase "Big Dig." You know what that means.

Fortunately, imposing the Scapicchio Tax on us wealthy suburbs is not a matter for the Boston City Council alone. The State Legislature will have to pass on it, too. Maybe our legislative delegation can save us from new taxes.

POLITICAL NOTES

Friday night at the movies — Join the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee for a repeat screening of "Unconstitutional," the provocative documentary produced by Robert Greenwald that examines the US Patriot Act and its impact on American civil liberties, on Friday, April 8, at 7 p.m. in the meeting room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Admission is Free. For information, call Agnes McCann, Chairman, 383-0222 or visit: www.cohassetdems.org

Army Day and Patriot's Day celebration —The Cohasset Republican Town Committee is having a get-together to celebrate Army and Patriot's Day and enjoy a convivial evening of causal conservative conversation in the Sail Room at Cohasset's Atlantica Restaurant on Wednesday, April 13.

Drop in anytime, after 7 p.m. and feel free to 'dress' for the occasion. All are welcome to join the members and guests, and have hors d'oeuvres, dinner, dessert or just beverages.

School buildings are underutilized

TO THE EDITOR:

Your last question to School Committee candidates asked how the $50 million renovated facilities could be made more available to the entire citizenry year-round. All of the responders gave the same old answers.

The three school buildings are grossly underutilized. Cohasset is ideally situated to break with tradition and realize greater usage with badly needed cost savings. The 180-day school year was established a 100-plus years ago when youngsters were needed to help their families prepare, plant and sow farmland. The Cohasset School District should submit a plan to the State Board of Education(with a request for generous grant money) to go to a 210-day school year. Roughly speaking, each day would be shortened from seven to six hours for on-site curriculum subjects. 180 days at 7 hours equates to 1260 hours annually; 210 days at 6 hours equates to 1260 hours annually. There would be two semesters: a. Feb1-July15 and Aug15-Jan31. Air conditioning is partially or wholly available and "zoned" in the three buildings and it is not being used as intended. Some of the advantages:

- Continuous staffing of the buildings will enhance security and make it possible for groups to use the facilities without asking for them to be "opened, supervised for limited usage, and closed."
- Modest staff reductions by attrition. Higher paid teachers.
- Easier class scheduling
- Less opportunity for summer mischief.
- Greater usage of the facilities by both students and other citizens.
- Increased availability of athletic fields and other specialized facilities while allowing more time for teachers to offer special help.
- Increased overall capacity of the facilities.

A lot more planning will be necessary. There are other advantages although skeptics will be fearful of change. The most probable skeptics will be teachers. Teachers need to join us in the 21st century. They want it both ways; i.e., to be treated as professionals while hiding behind their unions. If they are really professionals, they will embrace positive change and do what is best for their students.

Some people will complain that vacation planning will be more difficult and others will say that the opportunities for teenagers to get summer jobs will be impaired. Parents can plan vacations during the month I have left open and minimum wage summer jobs are not as important as cited advantages. Critical summer jobs, such as life guarding, can be covered by returning college students. When the Cohasset School District takes the leadership role in a performance oriented merit compensation system and goes to a contemporary facilities usage plan; we will be the envy of the State's 350 school districts.

A Request for Proposal(RFP) should be issued to all companies that offer evening adult and high school education courses. The Cohasset School District could permit usage of its facilities and realize a solid rental fee. As an example, perhaps Silvan, Princeton Review, or Kaplan would be interested in offering their college preparatory courses. Quincy College, Massassoit or UMass might see potential for on-site adult education classes. Bingo appeals to adults and is very popular, but it should be done in a non-smoking environment.

Home Rule petition is a 'power grab'

TO THE EDITOR:

Most citizens of Cohasset are unaware that in 2004 Town Counsel was sent to try to mislead the Sewer Commission into sponsoring some "Home Rule Petition." Articles that, in essence, would have emasculated the Commission by stripping it of its authorities that it has as an independent, elected Commission and defined in the voter-approved Bylaws of our Town. Our Sewer Commission is set up in the same fashion as exists in about 99 percent of the hundreds of towns/cities across the State — for solid reasons that have stood the tests of decades! After review, the Sewer Commission, recognizing this "power grab" for what it was, rejected sponsoring those ill-intended Articles. They received a standing ovation for their decision and their defense of the best interests of all residents.

The objective of the power grab was to allow Town Officials other than the elected Sewer Commission, regardless of what the vast majority of the voters wanted for the best interests of Cohasset, to give out sewer expansions and tie-ins on a spot basis, called "checkerboarding", obviously to their favorite but currently ineligible housing project developers. By itself, this is an egregious effort to go against the will of the overwhelming majority of citizens, as demonstrated in Town Meeting votes last December and again just last Saturday. The Townspeople demand that existing residents with existing pollution problems be sewered first before giving our capacity away to housing projects that do not even yet exist. The Sewer Commissioners hear and agree. To their credit, the Selectmen endorsed the Sewer Commission Articles voted last Saturday at Town Meeting. So—why continue the power grab? What's the agenda?

One would think that the power grab sponsors would have heard the public's message by now—but apparently not and continue to pursue this divisive agenda. What exacerbates this transgression is that they have spent many tens of thousands of our tax dollars and many hundreds of Town hours, without appropriate public disclosure and debate, for "consultants", legal fees, etc. One would expect more fiscal sensitivity by these officials when Cohasset is coping with tax increase overrides every year.

You may see a Selectmen's vote, between this writing and Town Elections on Saturday, or shortly thereafter, setting a date for a costly, Special Town Meeting as these officials try to again mislead the voters to support these nefarious Home Rule Petition Articles, which may be the sole agenda. Such a vote was obviously planned at a "surprise" Selectmen's' Meeting this past Monday but was prevented by those alert Selectmen who, visibly upset, stated that the meeting and any votes thereof would be illegal given inadequate public notice of the meeting as required by law. I'm certain that Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer and Fred Koed will vote against this proposed Special Town Meeting, and we hope another Selectman will join with them. The Sewer Commissioners/other officials also remain opposed to this power grab attempt. It's an unnecessary, further waste of taxpayer money!

What is most frustrating to me, as well as to other knowledgeable citizens, is that we know that the development project most desired by our senior group can proceed without getting a special sewer access ahead of existing residents. The technology exists! The environment would be protected. Environmentalists would applaud. Town Counsel consistently warns that a special sewer access to an ineligible developer would open a legal abyss for the Town. However, the alternative power grab is even more unacceptable and the voters will not tolerate it.

The developer stubbornly insists that it be given sewer access or it's a no-go. I have concluded , after months of this stubbornness and a closed mind by the developer, that the major problem is the developer and a more qualified, flexible, open-minded developer be brought to that project to start afresh. I sincerely suggest, which may have already been initiated, that those supporting seniors objectively assess the situation, perhaps with assistance of a qualified, truly independent consultant, and hopefully reach a similar conclusion. There is nothing to lose at this point and everything to gain. Even the Sewer Commission can get on with their voter approved tasks and the divisiveness be ended. All for the best interests of our Town. We truly must work together to insure that this year does not duplicate last year(including last winter!).

Cohasset PSO 'LIVE Televised Telethon' is May 4

This is the second year to host this televised event on Comcast local channel 22 television station. Last year's successful telethon raised a net profit of $12,000.

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) LIVE Televised Telethon set for Wednesday, May 4, from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

What does the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) and WGBH have in common? Both host a LIVE televised fundraiser to raise funding to support their wonderful organizations. The Cohasset PSO Telethon is similar to the WGBH annual telethon drive, except that instead of items for auction on television, the Cohasset PSO will be raffling many wonderful items at different pledge levels. Also, the Cohasset PSO will televise local talent comprising of children from the Cohasset public school system throughout the evening.

This is the second year to host this televised event on Comcast local channel 22 television station. Last year's successful telethon raised a net profit of $12,000. This year, organizers will add an on-line auction component to compliment the raffles. The event will feature the top 10 to15 highly prized donations on-line. These include vacation homes, yacht cruises around Boston Harbor, tickets to sporting events, golfing and more. Be sure to read the Cohasset Mariner for a complete listing of all on-line auction and raffle items.

New to the telethon this year is that ability to be a "Telethon Business Sponsor." For a $300 tax deductible contribution, a business will be granted top billing in all printed materials as well as special recognition throughout the televised talent show. Signage for the business will be displayed on television as well as a description of the Sponsor will be announced from our telethon emcees. It is a great opportunity to have "free advertising" for local businesses.

How else can you participate? Phone in your pledge money. Once you phone in your tax deductible contribution, your name will be entered into raffle drawing(s) based on your level of pledging ($100, $75, $50, and $25 and below). Winners will be drawn LIVE on TV at the end of the evening. In order for your name to be entered into the raffles, all pledges will have to be received by 9 p.m. sharp. According to PSO fundraising staffers, there are so many chances to win such wonderful prizes and support such a worthwhile program, it's a winning situation for everyone. For example, with a pledge of $100.00, your name will be entered in every raffle item drawing. $75 pledges will be entered in all items listed in the $75 pledge category as well as the $50 and $25 and below, etc..

If you would like to donate an item or become a business sponsor, contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125. If you are interested in participating in the talent show, send an e-mail to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com with your name, phone number and talent.

If individuals would rather send in a pledge instead of phoning in, make your check payable to the Cohasset PSO and postmark your note including name, address, and phone number by Monday, May 2, to: Cohasset PSO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025

Any entries postmarked after May 2, will not be entered into the raffles.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

Selectman

Frederick R. Koed

NAME: Frederick R. Koed
AGE: 53
ADDRESS: 92 Pleasant St.
FAMILY: Lisa, wife; Ashley, daughter; Mariel, daughter.
YEARS IN TOWN: 44
EDUCATION: BA, UMass-Boston; Masters of Science in Public Affairs, McCormack Institute, UMass- Boston.
OCCUPATION: Systems Analyst, Commonwealth of Massachusetts
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Advisory Board, 1983-1987, chairman 1985-1987; Cohasset Housing Authority, 1987-1992; Cohasset Water Commission, 1994-1997, chairman 1994-1997; Selectman 1999- present, chairman 2001.
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: A good sense of humor.
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? Well let's see, I think my dog thinks I am here just to take her wherever she wants to go. On top of that half the time, I think, she thinks, she's the boss.
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Taxes and the affordability of Cohasset, for both young families and our senior citizens
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I moved to Cohasset at the age of nine years old in 1961. Growing up here was one of the great experiences in my life. Swimming off Cohasset, and lobstering early in the morning are vivid memories. I have a unique perspective of over forty-four years. I went to school with everyone from the fisherman's son, to the attorney's daughter. In other words, with people from across a wide economic spectrum. That economic diversity is important to balance our children's view of the world as it really is.

My wife and I decided to raise our family here and bought our first house in 1982. Both of our daughters graduated from Cohasset High School as I did. Serving in town government has been a way to repay Cohasset for the opportunities I have had.

Serving on the four different boards I have been on has also given me an opportunity to help people. Whether it was helping fix water system problems along Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road or working to build 14 units of Chapter 689 housing for the Department of Mental Retardation. It has been an opportunity to make a difference in people's lives.

Debbie Shadd

NAME: Debbie Shadd
AGE: 51
ADDRESS: 31 Summer St.
FAMILY: Husband Bill Grimm, children Kate (21), Jon (18) & Michael (15)
YEARS IN TOWN: 23
EDUCATION: Middlebury College, B.A. (1975), M.A. in German (1976); Columbia University Law School, J.D. (1981)
OCCUPATION: Attorney, community volunteer
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Cohasset Advisory Committee, 2 terms 1997-2003; Director, Cohasset Conservation Trust, 1991-present; Cohasset Middle/High School Council, 2000-2004; Cohasset Middle/High School Accreditation Team Member, 2002-2002; Cohasset PSO, Past President and Board Member 1993-1996; Cohasset Soccer Boosters Board Member, 2000-present; Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association Board Member, 2000-2002; Cohasset Appalachia Service Project Adult Advisor, 2003-2004; Cohasset Garden Club Board Member, 1994-present
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: If I had to pick one quality, it would be honesty. I also admire intellectual curiosity, a good sense of humor and loyalty.
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? My fairly new status as the shortest member of my household, particularly evident in recent campaign photos.
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? People want to be assured that their Town government is being financially responsible and professionally accountable in its efforts to maintain the quality services, including education, that we currently enjoy.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am a candidate for Selectman because I believe we need independent and engaged leadership on the Board. I am committed to finding creative, responsible solutions for Cohasset.

I believe my background as an attorney, my 6 years on the Advisory Committee, 15 years of work on environmental issues for the Cohasset Conservation Trust and many years of work with school and community groups make me ideally suited to pursue informed decisions in the best interests of the Town as a whole. I am an independent thinker. As a member of the Advisory Committee, I made decisions on budgets and warrant articles only after careful consideration of all the facts and opinions presented to the Committee. I would bring the same approach to the Board of Selectmen.

If elected, I promise to support maintenance of services for all citizens, excellence in education, development of senior and affordable housing options, openness and fiscal restraint in budgeting, town-wide wastewater solutions and responsible development consistent with our zoning by-laws and Cohasset's unique character. Finally, I hope to contribute to an improvement in the tone of political discourse in town. Cohasset deserves Selectmen committed to the community as a whole. It's time for a new direction. I ask for your vote tomorrow.

YEARS IN TOWN: 50
EDUCATION: CHS '58; AB Engineering and Applied Physics, Harvard '61; MS Mechanical Engineering, MIT '63.
OCCUPATION: Engineer.
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: 20 Years Cohasset Sewer Commission, President of Cohasset Conservation Trust, Founding Member Clark Chatterton Memorial Committee; Head of Alumni and Millikan Field Expansion/Restoration Project.
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Result-Orientation
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? "I look smarter than I am!"
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? "Preserving the character of Cohasset; Affordable housing and taxation; Excellence of schools."
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE : Cohasset means a lot to me, and I would like to preserve its character for future generations. To do this, our goals must be: to be good stewards of Cohasset's natural and man-made environments, to maintain its size as a small town, and to strive for housing and tax affordability to retain the economic diversity of our people. As a selectman, I will never lose sight of these goals. I will advocate for implementing the town's 2004 Master Plan, a great roadmap for Cohasset that was developed with major input from the town's residents.

Alfred Slanetz
NAME: Alfred Slanetz
AGE: 42
ADDRESS: 14 Nichols Road
FAMILY: Wife: Carol; Children: Abigail, Michael, Charles
YEARS IN TOWN: 9
EDUCATION: Ph.D. Immunobiology, Yale University; M.S. Biomedical Engineering, Brown University; B.S. Biology, Hamilton College; Graduate of Portledge School, Locust Valley, NY.
OCCUPATION: Biotechnology
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: This is my first.
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Intelligence
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? When I see traits of myself in my children.
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Quality of education in Cohasset Schools
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am seeking to serve on the School Committee to enact significant positive change in the following ways:

- Achieve personalized education in the classroom, through reduced class size and customized teaching methods for each child.
- Teach students not what to think, but how to think for themselves by learning critical, analytical, creative and independent thinking, in-depth research, organization, oral and written communication.
- Assure that students experience the richness and diversity of world cultures, literature and the visual, musical and performing arts in every grade K-12.
- Ensure that students engage in scientific and mathematical thought and experimentation in every grade K-12.
- Improve each school's sense of community through weekly all-school assemblies with outside speakers, professional performances, student-led discussions, debates and performances.
- Convert activities such as debate, math, robotics, and model UN into interscholastic teams.
- Expand school day Monday through Thursday to provide time for additional activities and provide teachers a half day on Friday to collaboratively develop improvements in curriculum and teaching methods.
- Make accounting transparent, minimize non-instructional expenses, partner with the teachers union for cost-effective program improvements and with the CEF to raise more private funds and grants.
- Encourage communication and cooperation between the School Committee, Administration, Teachers and Community to make decisions that optimize the educational experience for children and achieve greater educational value for taxpayers.

Leonora Jenkins

NAME: Leonora "Lee" Jenkins
AGE: 56
ADDRESS: 198 Jerusalem Road
FAMILY: Married to Leland for 31 years. Proud parent of Jessica (27) and Rebecca (25) both Cohasset graduates and both are engineers
YEARS IN TOWN: 26
EDUCATION: B.A. – Psychology - Rosemont College, Pa.
OCCUPATION: V.P. K.J.K. Management Group, Inc.
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: 25+ years of community service. Program Committee and Board of Directors of the Community Center, Brownie leader, Library Reader, Sunday School Teacher and member of the Second Congregational Church Christian Education Committee, METCO Host Mother, Host Mother for over twenty foreign students and teachers, Youth Symphony Coordinator, Co-Founder of the Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers, Community Garden Club member, Active volunteer in the schools from 1982 - 1997 especially involved in programs in math, computer, art and music. School Policy Book Revision Committee '97-98. Cultural Exchange Committee and Council on Aging.
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: Being straightforward and having the ability to actually listen and fairly evaluate what is heard.
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? My friends find that when I am not discussing school issues that I laugh quite a bit especially about my creative recycling
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Lack of fiscal responsibility and accountability that has caused our real estate taxes to be ranked ninth highest in the state and inefficiencies in school spending that has taken needed funds from the classroom.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: It has been apparent for years and verified by the School Budget Investigation Committee that the school committee has had a lack of oversight of the school administration, almost non existent monitoring of the expenses and encumbrances and an unwillingness to share financial information with other town boards and the public. This attitude which led us into our financial predicament has to change. We must take action and become equal partners in the community. The first step was taken at Saturday's Annual Town Meeting by the passage of the warrant articles that I sponsored requiring month-to-date and year-to-date reports to be generated and shared town wide.

By working together with the new town and school management and using the business tools voted at Town Meeting we can expend our energies on discovering creative solutions to living within our budgets while providing the best education possible. With extensive knowledge of recent budgets, I want to be involved to insure that all possible money is directed into the classroom where it belongs.

Childhood is precious and we are only entrusted with the children a brief moment in time so we must provide them with a strong foundation for their lifetime of learning.

METCO host family, 6 years, Cohasset METCO Program. Room Parent: Cohasset Public Schools. Alter Guild: St. Stephen's Church. Cohasset Garden Club member, 2 years.
QUALITY YOU MOST ADMIRE IN OTHERS: A strong sense of integrity and ethical values. Being forthright and honest with others.
WHAT CAN YOU LAUGH AT MOST ABOUT YOURSELF? Humor, to me, is my tonic for life. In reflecting on this question, I keep returning to the humorous fact, (perhaps only to me), that I often talk out loud to myself. I have been seen on numerous occasions, in the past, weighing a situation out loud, or cheering to myself when I have accomplished something, as I have been deep in my own thoughts. Often, my response has been to laugh! I believe that healthy, appropriate laughter is a critical component of life.
WHAT HAVE VOTERS TOLD YOU IS THEIR BIGGEST CONCERN? Voters are concerned about two things; Fiscal Responsibility, and Quality Education in Cohasset. However, an inference that I have made from listening to people in our community is that we have a need for better dissemination and conveyance of factual information around issues, and better communication to the community at large.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: As a concerned parent and taxpayer in Cohasset, I have observed a decline in the perception of the substance of our schools. Class sizes have increased, programs, classes, aids and services have all been reduced or removed, while our expenses have escalated and funding has been drastically reduced from the state. As a result of these concerns, many families have been lead to consider alternate education for their children. The community has become divided in its thinking.

We have lost our sense of unity and purpose. This is alarming to me. I believe that if we focus our priorities on strengthening our school system and teacher workforce, keeping class sizes small, managing our finances while maintaining acceptable levels of services, we will convey the message to our community, that we care about our town's well being today, and for the future. I bring a new perspective with many creative and new ideas to the school committee. My current and previous business experiences in finance, my involvement in our schools and this community, coupled with my determination to facilitate positive change for Cohasset, makes me the right choice for the school committee.

Carroll running as a write-in

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although his name is not on Saturday's ballot James Edward "Ted" Carroll is running for the vacant seat on the recreation commission as a write-in candidate.

Carroll, 38, a lifelong Cohasset resident, served on the commission in the mid-1990s.

He's also no stranger to recreation departments. He started working for the Cohasset Recreation Department during the summers when he was still in high school and later served as director of the Summer Playground Program before being hired by the Hingham Recreation Department where he is program manager.

"It's time for me to give something back again," Carroll said this week. "I'm looking forward to working with (director) Jack Worley again."

Carroll says he will be able to share with the commission what he has learned working in Hingham, where the recreation department runs a successful fitness center, has "open rec" times, and has handled playing field projects.

Carroll, who graduated from Cohasset High in 1984, is also involved with recreation at the state level where he attends conferences.

Carroll will fill the seat vacated by Wallace St. John, who is not seeking reelection. Recreation Commission terms are five years.

5,136 registered voters in town. She isn't expecting a huge turnout Saturday because there's no override vote.

"I would guess between 25 and 30 percent, but I hope it's more," she said.

With the town's "Accu-Vote" optical scanning system, it doesn't take long for the numbers to be tallied and usually a crowd gathers inside the auditorium by 6:15 to see who won and who lost.

Town Moderator George Marlette will be on hand to read the results, and he likes to wait until all the write-ins are counted.

This year there is a three-way race for the Board of Selectmen, and residents Gary Vanderweil, 500 Jerusalem Rd., Debbie Shadd, 31 Summer St., and incumbent Fred Koed, 92 Pleasant St., are vying for two seats.

In addition, there is a two-way race for a one-year seat on the school committee with Pam Wilson, 80 North Main St., and Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, vying for that spot. The one-year seat will complete the remainder of Chartis Tebbetts' term. Tebbetts resigned from the school committee her Feb. 2.

"I would guess between 25 and 30 percent, but I hope it's more."
— Town Clerk Marion Douglas

Alfred Slanetz, 14 Nichols Road, is running uncontested for the three-year school committee seat. Chairman Rick Shea is not seeking reelection.

Looking to fill three open seats on the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Board of Trustees are Rodney Hobson, who is running for the first time, and incumbents Roger Lowe and Sheila Evans. Roger Whitely did not seek reelection.

After 12 years, the town will see a new moderator as George Marlette has decided not to run against Dan Evans to retain his post.

Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt's term is expiring and he is running unopposed, as is Stuart Ivimey for the Planning Board, Robin Lawrence for the Board of Health, Mary Granville for the Board of Assessors, and Marion Douglas for Town Clerk. Ted Carroll is the write-in candidates for the Recreation Commission, and he will replace Wallace St. John.

Lelia Weinstein conducts a pruning workshop at the home of Iku Isihara, with Joan Carlo and Marcia Diekmann among Community Garden Club members who attended.

Community Garden Club is out and about

During the last week in March the Community Garden Club gathered in the garden of Iku Isihara to review essential principles of pruning that are included in the club's new book, "The Eclectic Gardener." Club member Lelia Weinstein, a horticulturist, demonstrated how to make those crucial cuts to shape and invigorate trees and shrubs recovering from a long, snowy winter.

The Club is fortunate that its membership includes local residents who are experts in the many branches of the arts of gardening and reaping garden bounty. Publication and sale of "The Eclectic Gardener" is a way to share this collective wisdom and experience and to raise funds that help the club support its community service projects.

The public is invited without charge to a flower arranging demonstration by Fran O'Toole, a Master Flower Show Judge, at Buttonwood Books and Toys on April 10, at 2 p.m. and on April 17, a local member of the Garden Club Federation's Landscape Design Council will speak about beginning a garden to guests who have purchased reservations for the Windsor Tea Shop's monthly afternoon tea. The Club is grateful to the Cohasset businesses that support its fundraising by offering copies of "The Eclectic Gardener" for sale: Buttonwood Books and Toys, Fleming's of Cohasset Village, and The Windsor Tea Shop. Books also may be purchased from club members. Call 781-383-2486 for information.

The Cohasset Police Department is sprucing up its fleet of vehicles and three new cruisers purchased with money allocated at prior Town Meetings have been painted with a design unique to the town. Officer James McLean and Police Chief James Hussey worked together on the designs, which will be on every new cruiser moving forward.

Police cruiser design is unique to Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Chief James Hussey, who came on board last summer, is on a mission to return the police department to community policing. One of the latest changes, may be evident to those who have seen the department's three new cruisers that are sporting a new friendlier look, exclusive to Cohasset.

Past Town Meeting appropriations allowed the department to purchase three new cruisers. The first arrived at the station in the fall, and the other two arrived within the last month, Hussey said. Although the first cruiser now looks like the other two, it was essentially used as a "guinea pig" during a trial-and-error design phase.

Hussey said coming to Cohasset from Boston, where he spent 28 years in various roles on the Boston Police Department, he said his first impression of Cohasset's vehicles was that they didn't fit with the community. He said their black and white design had a "west coast," look, and were reminiscent of the kinds of cars typical to the Los Angeles Police Department, rather than that of a small seaside town on the east coast.

'West Coast' look is gone

"I'm even in favor of black and white cruisers, and I like the change."
— Officer James McLean, designer

"We wanted to come up with a unique design," for the Cohasset cruisers, which was more reflective of the town's character, he said.

When the first of the three new cruisers arrived this fall, the department was not happy with the new design.

"The first one came back really awful," said Hussey. The design featured a white car with a bright royal blue stripe across the side with white lettering for the word "Cohasset" and gray and white lettering for "police," inside the stripe. The town's seal was also printed on the stripe closest to the front end of the car. "It stunk, to be quite honest," Hussey said.

Knowing the design was still not what the department had in mind, Hussey decided it would be best to go back to the drawing board. That was when Police Officer James McLean stepped forward and asked if he could "take a stab" at a new design.

McLean submitted three designs to Hussey, "and we took a little from here and there," said McLean. With some fine tuning, Hussey and McLean were able to work together to come up with a final design.

"I'm even in favor of black and white cruisers, and I like the change," McLean said.

McLean said he looked at cruisers from other towns when coming up with Cohasset's new design and Cohasset's new blue is similar to the grayish blue Nantucket uses. The gray Cohasset stripe is similar to Boston's police stripe. The lettering for the word "police" is McLean's unique design, which is white with a gray shadow. McLean added in addition to the new design, the cars have been outfitted with new light emitting diode, or LED, light bars which are the latest in technology. The older vehicles have strobe lights which will eventually need to be replaced, he said.

In addition, none of the windows in the new cruisers are tinted, which was a concern previously raised by residents.

Hussey said the new design is exactly what he had in mind for the department. "I've never seen anything like it," he said.

"I think it came out really nice," he said, adding he is going to begin looking into entering "best cruiser design" contests on the department's behalf.

Amateur gardeners meet

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet at the home of Addie McGrath on Tuesday, April 19, at 9:30 a.m. This is the clinics annual meeting with election of officers for next year. The program will be "Planting seeds in Various Mediums for the Coming Summer Garden."

Next month's meeting will be a field trip to a garden center specializing in garden pools.

Rep. Bradley runs to raise money for autism research

By Sara Mason Ader
CORRESPONDENT

As a state representative, Garrett Bradley is keenly aware of the struggle facing the rapidly growing number of local families coping with autism. And recently, when a close cousin's child was diagnosed with the developmental disability, Bradley challenged himself to run the Boston Marathon in the hopes of raising awareness and funds for autism.

Autism is the fastest growing developmental disability in the United States, affecting up to 1.5 million children and adults.

"The training is going well," he says. "It's great because I get to run along all the streets in my district." Bradley is hoping that his run will help support programs and services for the approximately 25 families in Hingham and possibly as many as 400 families in his district (Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and North Scituate) affected by autism.

Bradley's weekly training routine includes two shorter runs of about 5 miles to 7 miles. On weekends, he tackles a longer distance. On Saturday he ran 18 miles in the rain.

So far, Bradley's effort has raised about $5,000 and he expects to grow that amount to $7,000 before the marathon on April 18. All of the money he raises will go directly to the Autism Center of the South Shore, a not-for-profit organization that provides programs and services to parents of children with autism.

Before that organization was founded in 2001, families from the South Shore had to commute to Fall River or Dedham for services and support.

"It is very difficult to travel that far on a regular basis with a child with disabilities," says Hingham resident Amy Anderson who helped found ACSS. Anderson's nine-year-old son Luke was diagnosed with autism when he was 3 years old.

April is national Autism Awareness month, and the state of Massachusetts designates a particular day to discuss autism issues in the legislature. This year's Autism Awareness Day will be on April 27, and Anderson plans to be at the State House that day as she has for each Autism Awareness in the past five years. Part of her ritual for the day includes knocking on state representatives' doors to emphasize to them the importance of support for families of autistic children.

About autism

- In the past five years, the rate of autism is widely believed to have increased to 1 in 166 births from 1 in 500 about five years ago.
- Autism affects as many as 1.5 million Americans.
- During the 1990s, the incidence of autism grew at a rate of 172 percent, while overall disabilities increased 16 percent and the US population grew 13 percent.
- The worldwide cost of care and services for individuals with autism is expected to balloon in 10 years to an estimated $300 billion from $90 billion a year.
- 90 percent of those costs are for adult services.
- The cost of lifelong care can be cut by two-thirds with early diagnosis and intervention.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, whose district includes Cohasset, runs along wooded path on Hingham's Main Street to train for the Boston Marathon. Bradley challenged himself to run the marathon, which will be his first, to raise awareness and funds for autism.

Of Bradley, Anderson says "He's always been very responsive and has listened to what we have to say."

Autism is the fastest growing developmental disability in the United States, affecting up to 1.5 million children and adults. The Autism Society of America defines autism as a "complex developmental disability that affects an individual in the areas of social interaction and communication. Autism is a spectrum disorder that affects each individual differently and to varying degrees of severity."

Although manifestations of the disability vary considerably, common characteristics can include resistance to change, difficulty in expressing needs and mixing socially, repetition of words or phrases, and tantrums. While no specific cause has been found for autism, scientists generally agree that abnormalities in the brain structure of function are to blame. Researchers are investigating links between genes, as well as environmental factors such as viral infections, metabolic imbalances and exposure to chemicals. Links between autism and vaccines have received attention but researchers have not found any data to support a connection, according to the ASA.

Autism experts agree that early intervention is critical in helping the children to reach normal functioning levels of behavior and social interaction. Also, autism "like most disabilities" affects the entire family. This is why Bradley says he believes so strongly in funding groups such as ACSS that provide programs and services.

"The more services these families receive, the more the child can be drawn out. Sometimes just a few words can be a huge leap forward," Bradley says.

The state recently created an Autism Division within its Department of Mental Retardation. However, the current budget provides no funding for the office. Bradley says he hopes this office will eventually be able to provide a centralized effort for families to get information and resources, and also to track the disability. But for now, families must find the "pockets of assistance" that exist, such as ACSS locally.

ACSS provides support groups, music therapy, teen groups, and swimming lessons. The organization is run primarily by parent and professional volunteers who donate their time and effort. Funding comes partially through grants from the state but also through private donations. Each year, the organization sponsors a golf tournament, which will take place this year at the Pembroke Country Club on May 20.

More information about ACSS is available at www.autism-southshore.org. Donations to support Bradley's marathon efforts can be made until April 18 either by sending a check to Garret Bradley at 774 Main St., Hingham, MA 02043 or directly to the Autism Center of the Shore at 210 Winter St., Suite 101, Weymouth, MA 02188.

Boys rebound from Duxbury loss

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Scituate and Cohasset has generally been an intense boys lacrosse rivalry the last few years, and they lived up to that billing again on Tuesday.

In a physical battle that included its fair share of smack talk, Cohasset simply had a few too many weapons up front and left the hallowed grounds of Scituate High School with an 11-7 win.

Jake Previte and Jon Grimm each led the Skippers (1-1) with three goals. Aidan Buick notched a team-high six points (two goals, four assists), while Sam Steele, Joe Durkin and Michael Bunstein scored a goal apiece.

Colby Hawkins led a balanced offensive effort for Scituate (1-1) with two goals. Five of his Sailors teammates - Conor O'Brien, Clayton Dawson, Ben Brigham, Sam Brigham and Gary Crowley - each had a goal. Hawkins and Ben Brigham paced the Sailors with two assists each.

For the Skippers, it was a nice

Girls tennis nips Hingham in opener

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The sentiments of the Cohasset and Hingham girls tennis coaches coming into their season-opening match Monday could both be summed up the same way.

'Gee, what a way to start the year.'

Indeed, this was not an easy start to the season for either team, as both figure to be among the best in the South Shore. Cohasset got victories from first and second singles, along with second doubles, to take home a 3-2 win.

Hingham head coach Deb Boles said that despite the loss, she was generally pleased with what she saw Monday.

"I told my kids before the match, 'I don't care if we win or lose, I'm more interested in how you handle the pressure on each point,'" she said. "By and large, I think they did very well."

Cohasset head coach Gigi Meehan said she was expecting a 3-2 match one way or the other heading in, and that she was glad that her team started the season with an opponent of Hingham's caliber.

"I'd rather push our kids and have them play a team that's tough," Meehan said. "I wouldn't be surprised if it's 3-2 the other way next time."

Winners on the day for Cohasset were senior Elizabeth Stone, junior Susan Curry and the second doubles team of junior Emilie Shea and freshman Meg Anderson. Hingham picked up victories in third singles from sophomore Krista Vreeland (playing her first varsity match) and first doubles from senior co-captains Jesse Hatfield and Alex Hosea.

The team contest was decided by second doubles, as that was the only match to go three sets. The Hingham team of senior Leonie Roell and junior Liz Whitney had a rough start, losing the first five games and eventually dropping the first set, 6-2.

Roell and Whitney rebounded in style, however, in the second set. Whitney was firing strong, accurate volleys from the baseline. That and some strong serving from Roell led to a 7-5 second set win for the Hingham duo.

Shea and Anderson would not be denied in the third set. The Cohasset duo jumped out to a 4-0 advantage, on the power of some powerful winners from Shea at the net. Two strong serves in the next game from Anderson, including an ace, made it 5-0.

The Skippers finished it off in the next game, with Anderson playing well at the net and Shea hitting a couple blistering backhand winners.

Stone squared off against Hingham star Meaghan Doyle in first singles, and both lived up to their billing in an exciting match. Doyle jumped out to a 3-1 lead in the first set with some well-placed forehands that had Stone running all over the baseline.

The Cohasset senior settled down during one of the first set's between-game breaks and turned the tables on Doyle with several hard serves. Once she got the momentum turned in her favor, Stone was her usual near-unbeatable self.

The other intriguing match of the day was in first doubles, where the Hatfield/Hosea duo took on senior Rachel Garber and freshman Sally Meehan (yes, the coach's daughter) of Cohasset. The Hingham duo is the more experienced of the two, and it showed in the first set with a 6-2 score.

Garber and Meehan came back and played much better in the second set. Despite dropping that one as well, the Cohasset coach was encouraged with what she observed.

"That team dug deep inside and showed that they can be a good partnership," Gigi Meehan said. "They clearly played better in that second set."

Boles, meanwhile, is expecting big things from her first doubles

Lady laxers win one, lose one

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Like their male counterparts, the Cohasset girls lacrosse team has gotten off to a 1-1 start.

The season opened last Thursday with a nice 12-1 victory over Cape Cod Academy. Senior co-captain Lauren Rizzotti scored four goals to pace a balanced Skippers attack, which also featured a solid all-around effort from Mackenzie Holway (goal, assist).

Giving up only one goal, there were obviously some nice defensive efforts as well. Head coach Torin Sweeney said senior co-captain Miranda Lanzillotti and senior Molly Kirk led the way in that regard. Goalie Joanna Hamilton made seven saves in net.

"We moved the ball in transition well, and we trapped well on defense," Sweeney said. "We were able to use that transition to get a good number of fast-break goals."

The coach said those transition opportunities went missing in Tuesday's 12-5 loss to Scituate. Rizzotti scored two more goals, and Lindsey Durkin scored a goal. Cohasset was within three early in the second half, and time of possession was about equal.

The big difference, in Sweeney's opinion, was Scituate star Alyse Kennedy.

"She was just too much for us to handle," said the coach. "We tried to double team her and it didn't help. She was still able to find an opening."

Cohasset will be looking to make its fifth straight trip to the postseason. After finishing a 10-9 season last year with a loss in the first round of the state tournament, Sweeney says the team's biggest goal is to make it farther into the tournament.

Sweeney likes the balance of his team, particularly up front. Rizzotti is an obvious talent who figures to tally around 50 goals this year. Holway, juniors Lisa Spirito and Mia Lieb-Lappen, and sophomores Caren Garber and Cassie Rosano, will all see a lot of minutes on attack.

Baseballers' rally falls just short

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

What the Red Sox were able to do against Mariano Rivera this week, the Skippers couldn't quite pull off in their season opener at Mashpee.

Down 6-2 going into the top of the seventh and final inning, Cohasset put three runs on the board and had the bases loaded with one out. That's where the rally stopped, however, and the Skippers fell, 6-5.

Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta was left to rue the near miss afterward.

"We were obviously a little disappointed. We made a good comeback, but we couldn't get the big hit in the clutch when it mattered," he said. "Overall, though, I thought we played a pretty good ballgame. If Mashpee had any advantage, it's that they already played a game the day before and had three

Casey Anderson makes her second straight appearance

There are many three-sport athletes at Cohasset High School, but few have matched the accomplishments of Casey Anderson.

One of the CHS soccer team's leading goal-scorers the last two years and an All-Star catcher on the softball team, Anderson's best sport is basketball. After averaging over 22 points a game and making the South Shore League All-Star team, Anderson has been named to the Mariner girls basketball All-Scholastic team for the second straight season.

A co-captain that earned the praise of head coach John Levangie throughout the year for her play and leadership, Anderson was the star of a team that made the state tournament for the second straight season and finished with a 12-9 record.

Anderson is looking to play basketball in college, where she will be attending either Roger Williams or Salve Regina. She says she will likely study education in hopes of becoming a teacher.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions," all of whom received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 14, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top girls basketball players in Marinerland for this honor:

Casey Anderson - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Cohasset

Casey Anderson

Once again a South Shore League All-Star, making her second straight appearance on our All-Scholastic basketball team...The 5-10 power forward averaged over 22 points per game, offensively carrying the Skippers on some nights...Turned in one of the area's most impressive individual performances in an early January victory over Harwich, scoring 37 points and pulling down 21 rebounds...Also had a triple-double (17 points, 11 rebounds, 10 assists) in a win over Holbrook in the annual Cohasset holiday tournament...Nearly unstoppable in the paint...Has a knack for coming up with several offensive rebounds every game...Also an adept ball-handler, frequently positioned in the middle of the Cohasset press break...Also an accomplished soccer and softball player at CHS

Cohasset's Casey Anderson averaged over 22 points and 10 rebounds a game, and makes her second straight Mariner girls basketball All-Scholastic team.

Erin Curran - Senior (Capt.)
Point-guard - Abington

There isn't much that can't be said about this talented point-guard...A member of the Abington team since her freshman season, Curran is a three-year starter and was named the South Shore League's Player of the Year this winter for her efforts in guiding the Green Wave to a share of the SSL crown (10-2)…The three-time league All-star shined in big victories over Carver and Norwell and gave a tough Scituate team some problems…As both the team's go-to person on offense and assists leader, Curran led the team in scoring and assists for the third-straight season averaging 15.5 points and six assists per game…Also averaged five boards and 2.5 steals per game…She did this despite being the focus of virtually every defense she faced…Deadly from behind the arc, Curran buried a slew of three-pointers this season and averaged six rebounds per game….She finished her career with 825 points...Curran led the Green Wave to a 13-7 overall mark and appearance in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney. Abington coach Steve Moore: "Erin was the team leader and our offense and defense was run through her. We'd be lost without her."

Stephanie Geehan - Junior Center - Braintree

Stephanie Geehan

Without question one of the top players on the South Shore… Making her second straight appearance on the Forum girls basketball All-Scholastic team, the Bay State League All-Star did it all for the Wamps, as evidenced by the fact she led the team in all five major statistical categories…Her stats in those categories? Averaged 13.2 points, 9.8 rebounds, 3.1 assists, 3.8 blocks and 1.7 steals per game…Offensively, can play facing up or with her back to the basket…For a 6-footer, has great handle and passing ability…Makes opponents think twice about driving the lane; had six or more blocks on multiple occasions this year…Playing AAU this spring for the Bay State Magic, her seventh year in the program…Has visited several Division I colleges, where she plans on continuing her basketball career…Also a Forum volleyball All-Scholastic in the fall…Braintree head coach Nick Krot: "I think she exceeded expectations in a couple of those statistical categories, but that's the kind of player Stephanie is. She can do just about anything on the court."

Maegan Cook - Junior
(Capt.)
Forward - Braintree

Maegan Cook

Another Bay State League All-Star for Braintree… The team's second-leading scorer at 10 points per game, but that doesn't begin to tell of her contributions to a team that went 19-4…Consistently assigned to defend the other team's top scorer, whether it was a 6-3 center or 5-8 swingman…Excelled at that task, frequently holding those players under their scoring averages…Made a number of key plays late in close games, and wasn't afraid to take the big shot…One of the hardest workers you'll see on the court, leading by example with her hustle…Earning captaincy as a junior speaks to her leadership abilities…Also a Forum All-Scholastic in volleyball, and is a starting outfielder for the BHS softball team…Says basketball is her favorite sport of the three, and plays AAU ball in the summer for the Bay State Magic…Braintree head coach Nick Krot: "Maegan is the heart and soul of this team. She is definitely one of the toughest kids I've had in my 26 years of coaching. For a girl to take three charges in a game (as Cook did against Framingham) is rather astounding. She makes the team go."

Lindsey Arria - Senior
(Capt.)
Point-guard - Hanover

Lindsey Arria

A four-year starter and Patriot League All-star, Arria finished her final basketball season at HHS in style, bringing the 12-8 squad back to postseason play after an absence of several years…Was the Lady Indians' second leading scorer with an average 9.4 points per game, a little less than in year's past, but only because the team's offense was far more balanced than in year's past…Arria was the team's leader in virtually every other category, averaging six rebounds, five steals, and five assists per game…A dynamic presence and excellent leader, Arria's coaches have referred to her as being like an assistant coach for their teams…Also a soccer and softball player at Hanover, Arria will reprise her role as the starting shortstop on the HHS softball team, which has won the last two Patriot League championships. Hanover coach Katy Delaney: "Lindsey was the overall leader on and off the court. She's a fantastic athlete and gives 110 percent in games and practice. She's had a tremendous impact on the program."

Jackie Burke - Sophomore Guard - Hingham

One of those players who doesn't put up the big point totals but did just about everything else a team needs to succeed, Burke is making her first appearance on the All-Scholastic squad…Just a sophomore, this talented guard's court presence is always seemingly cool, calm, and collected…Always looks for the open man first, but also knows when to take a shot herself…Was among the team's leading rebounders and steals because of her aggressive play and defensively, was about as good as it gets…This Patriot League All-star shined in several games this season, but perhaps the brightest in a 59-49 road victory over rival Rockland, in which she tallied 11 key points…She helped pace the Harborwomen (11-8) to an appearance in the Div. 2 South Sectional and 5-3 record in the PL's talent-loaded East Div., tying Scituate for second in the final standings…Was named to the All-Tournament team for her pacing her squad in the elite Massasoit Hall of Fame tourney.

Terri Duffy - Junior Center - Marshfield

Terri Duffy

It was just another stellar season for this talented center…A scoring and rebounding machine for the Lady Rams, Duffy led the squad in both categories again this winter averaging 15 points and 12 boards per game…All this despite drawing the bulk of attention from opposing defenses…A two-time Old Colony League All-star, Duffy's aggressive play at the low post guided the team to a trio of victories over a solid Hanover squad and gave OCL champs Bridgewater-Raynham a run for its money in a key league game…In the end, the Lady Rams fell just short of a tourney berth at 9-11 and finished 2-4 in the OCL…Also a talented tennis player at MHS, Duffy returns to that varsity squad this spring where she will likely be the No. 1 singles player after a solid season in the No. 2 hole last year…She will return to the basketball squad next winter.

Katelyn Stravinsky -
Sophomore
Forward - Norwell

Katelyn Stravinsky

As talented as any underclassman on the South Shore…A South Shore League All-Star this season, Stravinsky makes her second consecutive girls basketball All-Scholastic team…Led the league in scoring at 22.4 points per game…Perhaps her greatest skill is her ability to finish; she simply does not miss in the paint…Scored a career-high 34 in a game this season against Harwich…Also excels on the glass and on the defensive end…Had a remarkable triple-double (31 points, 17 rebounds, 10 steals) against Hull…Can also stick the three…Played through hip and leg injuries at the end of the season, and scored 24 points in the season-ending loss to Cathedral despite seemingly barely being able to walk in between whistles…Has played JV soccer at NHS the past two years, and came out for the softball team this season where she is starting at third base…Figures to become the 12th athlete in Norwell history to surpass the 1,000-point mark next year; she already has nearly 800…Norwell head coach Bruce Emerson: "She was always double- and triple-teamed, and she still got her points. She scored against a lot of bigger teams, too; she's just a really good athlete."

Shawna Carroll - Junior
Forward - Rockland

Making yet another appearance on the All-Scholastic squad, this talented forward just gets better with age…Was the second-leading scorer on the Rockland team this season with an average 11.5 points per game, despite missing two games due to illness…A member of the varsity squad since the eighth grade, Carroll has amassed 735 career points…One of those players who can do it all, Carroll was among the team's leading rebounders and had her fair share of steals, helping the Lady Bulldogs win the Patriot League West Div. (8-0) and qualify for postseason play with a 19-3 record…Excellent at finding the open man, Carroll also compiled a great deal of assists with newcomer Jackie Bohenek taking some of the heat off her…The three-time Patriot League All-star also has a great 3-point shot…Just a junior, Carroll still has another year to play hoop at RHS. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "Shawna is the leader out there. She works so hard on the court and wants to win. She's going to step up even more next year as a senior."

Jackie Bohenek - Freshman
Forward - Rockland

Jackie Bohenek

Well, all we can say is this talented newcomer is having a terrific freshman campaign… The best female runner on the RHS cross country team in the fall, Bohenek quickly made her presence known on the basketball court this winter…The tall, long-armed, and deadly quick forward emerged as Rockland's leading point-getter with an average 12.3 points per game…The Patriot League All-star revived the Lady Bulldogs' transition game with her speed and scored many fast break points in the process…A solid rebounder as well, Bohenek's play in the paint helped Rockland win the PL West Div. title with an 8-0 record…She helped guide the team to the quarterfinals of the Div. 3 South Sectional, where the team finished the winter at 20-4…Also competes in the 400 meters for the outdoor track team in the spring and advanced to the New England Championships as an eighth grader…Bohenek will be one to watch for many years to come. Rockland coach Mal Lannin-Cotton: "Jackie is just so athletic. She has the ability to run and her long arms give her great rebounding ability. She can only get better."

Kate Carlezon - Junior Forward - Scituate

Mariner All-Scholastic, Patriot League All-Star and PL Most Valuable Player, all for the second straight year…Averaged over 13 points, seven rebounds and four blocks per game this season…Again led the league in scoring…Points were down nearly four a game from last year, but that was mainly due to her unselfish willingness to be part of a team concept that looked to spread the ball around more…Virtually unstoppable one-on-one in the post, and can pass very well out of the double-team…Can also step out and make the 18-foot jumper…Has some of the best shot-blocking instincts you can expect to see from a high school player…Playing AAU ball this spring for the Atlantic Bells…Will co-captain the soccer team in the fall, where she will start at sweeper for the third consecutive season…An honor roll student, and is hoping to play basketball at the college level…Scituate head coach Brian Buckley: "Kate is a tremendous all-around player, not only on the post. She took the ball out-of-bounds, is a great shot-blocker and has good instincts on the press. She was the foundation of the team this year."

Kate Carlezon

Casey Devane - Senior
(Capt.)
Forward/Guard - Scituate

Casey Devane

Also a Patriot League All-Star and Mariner All-Scholastic for the second straight year… Averaged over 10 points and five boards a game, both second on the team…Did many things that doesn't show up on the stat sheet…One of the team's better outside shooters…Solid on the defensive end all season, despite having to play multiple positions, a testament to her versatility…Scored 14 points in a huge league win over Rockland, including a late tie-breaking three and a few huge free throws to ice the four-point win…Also a superb student: 28th in her class of 217, and is a member of the National Honor Society…Was named last weekend to the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association All-State Academic Basketball Team, one of 10 girls in Massachusetts to be selected to the first team for their "excellence of performance both in basketball and in the academic field"…Also an accomplished soccer and softball player at SHS…Will be attending Eastern Connecticut State University, where she will play basketball and study physical education and sports management…Scituate head coach Brian Buckley: "Casey is very versatile; she gave us a good all-around game every time out."

Kendall Carlson - Senior Center - Weymouth

Bay State League first-team averaged 14 points, 8.4 rebounds per game … K.C. helped lead the sunshine band back to the South Section playoffs, where Weymouth (12-8) fell to eventually champion Dartmouth … Remarkably consistent all season long … At 5-foot-10, she has the size to post up smaller opponent and the quickness to spin past taller ones … Improved her 15-foot jumper, which opened the middle for her teammates … A great athlete who excels on the soccer field as well … A leader on an off the court.

Kendall Carlson

Kathleen Kennerley - Senior Forward - Weymouth

Kathleen Kennerley

Picked up where she left off the previous season … Averaged 14 points per game the last month of her junior season and remained a consistent performer all-season long … Earned Bay State League second-team honors in an ultra-competitive year … A tremendous athlete, she used her size and speed to clog the middle defensively … Her contributions went beyond the score sheet … She set screens, blocked out, dove for loose balls, all the little things that makes a coach happy … She'll be missed at Weymouth.

How do you spell Christina Pinkus? Try Christina Pinkkkkkkkkkkkkkkkkkus.

Count 'em, that's 17 K's, the same number of strikeouts Cohasset's sophomore lefty had in her team's 5-2 win over Mashpee on Tuesday.

Pinkus, who throws a fastball, slider and curve, had all of her pitches working on this day. She had a no-hitter through six innings, but the Falcons looked as though they planned to start a miraculous rally with a couple hits and runs in the top of the seventh and final inning.

Pinkus would have none of that, however, striking out the final two batters to pick up an impressive win.

Skippers head coach Deb Bostwick complimented her ace for how she kept it together after letting Mashpee back in the game.

"Her composure was nice to see. She was in control, focused and real smooth out there," Bostwick said.

The Cohasset coach certainly is glad to know that she has Pinkus for another two years after this one, a fact that is not quite as pleasing for her counterparts.

"The Mashpee coach said to me after the game, 'She's a senior, right?'" Bostwick said. "When I told him she's just a sophomore, he just said, 'Oh no.'"

Junior Erin Liddell led the offensive attack for the Skippers, going 2-for-3 with two doubles and two RBI. Sophomore Laura Campedelli also knocked in two runs as part of Cohasset's four-run first. Second baseman Virgina Spofford set the table at the top of the lineup, going 1-for-3 with two walks and two runs scored. Freshman shortstop Anna Hagerty also got on base a couple times, including a double to lead off the second inning.

Senior catcher Casey Anderson "did a great job behind the plate" in the words of her coach.

The girls opened their season on Monday at home against South Shore Christian. The visitors are a very inexperience club, and Cohasset won in five innings via the mercy rule (a deficit of 15 runs or more).

Third baseman Katie James was one of many offensive stars on the day for Cohasset, going 5-for-5 with two triples and two doubles.

Sophomore Virginia Spofford started on the mound and went four innings, giving up no hits and striking out five. She did walk six, but Bostwick said her pitcher settled down nicely after some jitters at the start.

"Once Virginia got going, she was great," said the coach.

Junior Emily Savage pitched a scoreless fifth for Cohasset.

The Skippers faced a daunting challenge yesterday in defending South Shore League champion and state title contender Abington. Games are scheduled this Monday and Tuesday against Carver and Harwich, respectively.

Cohasset Road Race

The 29th Annual Cohasset Road Race by the Sea was held Sunday, April 3.

Over 860 runners registered for the race and 719 recorded official times. Race Director Brad Goodwin commended the "exceptional help" from the Police, Fire, and Public Works Departments, as well as many volunteers, townspeople and businesses.

"We appreciate the support of the Cohasset Rotary Clubs efforts to help raise funds for many organizations supported in part by Rotary International and Cohasset Rotary," Goodwin said.

Cohasset runners did very well in this year's race, highlighted by Joseph Carroll Jr., who finished 5th overall with a time of 35:06. Results are available online at www.roadracebythesea.com, and the Mariner will run a more thorough listing of Cohasset finishers next week.

The Fran Coffey Memorial Walk was a huge success with many walkers doing the 4.5mile and 10K routes...a great day for remembering the efforts and spirit of Franny Coffey with walkers from all over the South Shore and as far away as Connecticut, California, and even visitors from Ireland who commented that the walk was a "smashing way to see the area."

The Rotary Club will donate the proceeds from the walk to two causes very dear to the Coffey family, "People in Need" at St. Patrick's in Roxbury, and the Bishop Ruocco House for Girls in Lakeville.

Candy Angle of Weymouth is the first woman to cross the finish line.

Amby Tierney, 5, of Cohasset, checks out the action while playing with his umbrella.

Molly Driscoll, 10, and Zoe Ryan, 10, both of Scituate, weather the storm as they head for the starting point of the race.

Cohasset's Brent Daly catches his breath after finishing the race.

It was a struggle for Canton's Barbara Buckley, but she made it to the finish line.

Jay D'entremont of Boston celebrates the achievement of finishing the Cohasset Road Race.

bounce back from a 21-3 season-opening loss to defending state champ Duxbury last week.

"This was not textbook, but a win is a win," said Cohasset head coach Stu Curran. "We were certainly better today then we were in our first game."

Curran got nice games on defense from Crandon Leahy and Casey Coleman, both leading a strong effort in keeping Scituate's top offensive threats, Ben Brigham and Hawkins, relatively at bay.

Scituate head coach Rick Bagby was rather direct in his postgame assessment of his team's performance.

"I think we played real dumb," he said. "We need to get the ball, settle it down and get into our offense. We're running around all the time, and it gets us tired."

The Sailors did a lot of chasing in the first half, as Cohasset demonstrated a patient offense and worked the ball in and around the crease area. It took almost a full period for that to result in a goal, as Durkin's score from 15 feet out negated O'Brien's score for Scituate a few minutes earlier. The game was tied at one after the first period.

It was a see-saw battle for the next two periods, as Cohasset pulled ahead only to have Scituate tie it back up on two separate occasions. Hawkins' first goal of the game with five minutes to go in the third period tied it at 6-6.

Cohasset goals by Grimm and Previte came on either side of the break between the third and fourth periods. Dawson found an open Hawkins in front of Cohasset goalie Eric Libby's net, and Hawkins finished to bring Scituate back within a goal with 12 minutes to play.

The Skippers went back to their passing, ball-possession game after that, and would reap the benefits with four minutes left when Buick scored the first of his two goals. The Cohasset junior scored again two minutes later off a nice pass from classmate Trevor Brady to make it 10-7.

A goal by Cohasset's Michael Bunstein with seconds to go accounted for the final score.

A rather interesting running altercation took place during the fourth period, as Scituate defenseman Brendan Laffin did all he could to, shall we say, annoy Previte. The Cohasset senior was able to keep his cool and let Laffin hear about it as Cohasset was putting it away with their late goals.

"They were torturing Jake and trying to take him out of his game, because as a lacrosse player they know they can't stay with him," Curran said.

The loss was letdown from Scituate's 13-5 season-opening win over Weston last Friday. Ben Brigham and Hawkins scored five and four goals, respectively, in that contest. Bagby said Laffin and Bernie Carroll for their "outstanding" play defensively.

Scituate will host Marshfield tomorrow and Falmouth on Tuesday. Cohasset, meanwhile, hosts Falmouth tomorrow and Catholic Memorial on Tuesday.

Baseballers' rally falls just short

scrimmages before that."

The Skippers got in only one scrimmage, and Gallotta said the lack of practice against live pitching may have hurt his team against Mashpee.

Cohasset did get a couple solid performances at the plate from senior catcher Luis Blanco (two doubles) and senior second baseman Tim Pilczak (two hits, including a triple, and an RBI).

Ace Ted Straughn got the start on the mound and, by his own admission afterward, did not have his best day. He tossed five innings, gave up eight hits and took the loss.

Gallotta knows that better things are in store for Straughn, who joins Blanco as a team captains this season. Straughn finished last year with a flourish, including a no-hitter against Holbrook. For the season, he struck out 62 batters in just 35 innings. He will also likely hit third in the lineup.

Blanco will bat behind his classmate in the cleanup spot. A three-year starter and South Shore League All-Star last season, Blanco hit a remarkable .436 last year.

Pilzcak will bat second and will be joined in the middle of the infield by sophomore shortstop Nick Zappolo, who was the second-leading hitter on the JV squad last season.

"I'm very pleased to say he's looked good defensively," Gallotta said of Zappolo. "It's good to know we have a possible three-year starter at that position."

Senior first baseman Jim DeGiacomo and junior Chris Bryan at the hot corner will round out Cohasset's starting infield for most games.

Bryan was set to get the start on the mound yesterday against Abington, as Gallotta has him pegged as his team's No. 2 starter. Juniors Stefan Parnell and Brian Straughn, along with freshman Brian Hill, round out the pitching staff.

The only freshman on the 14-man roster, Hill pitched a scoreless inning of relief against Mashpee, and Gallotta says it is possible he will find his way into the rotation during the season.

Parnell will play a lot of right field when he's not pitching, with senior Andrew Lovallo and junior Chris Ofsthun joining him in the outfield. Brendan Barrett, who led the JV team in hitting as a sophomore last season, will start most games at designated hitter.

Backup infielders John DeWaal and Will Pinkus round out the roster.

Attention all Cohasset Baseball and Softball coaches and parents

There will be a mandatory coaches' clinic for all individuals interested in coaching in the Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association program.

To accommodate each of our busy schedules, interested individuals have the option of attending one of two required scheduled clinics. Parents who are interested in learning appropriate baseball/softball instructional techniques are also welcome to attend these sessions.

Even the most astute coach always picks up a pointer or two. These meetings are scheduled at the Cohasset High School gym on either Saturday, April 9 from 9 to 10 a.m. or Thursday, April 14 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. (please note the date change).

The CYBSA is fortunate to have Lou Rettman, minor league scout and local baseball instructor, conducting the April 9 session. In addition, we're also lucky to have Frank Niles of South Shore Baseball attending the April 14 session.

Immediately following the Saturday, April 9th clinic, there will be player drafts for the softball, American and National league baseball and Farm league divisions. In addition, divisional schedules, Little League and local CYBSA rules and other helpful coaching material will be distributed on that day.

Little League now requires background checks on all league volunteers to ensure the safety of the children entrusted to our care. Should you be interested in coaching and have not already done so, please bring a photocopy of your license to the clinic where you will be asked to fill out the necessary forms. Individuals, however well intentioned, not complying will not be allowed to coach. Questions regarding this requirement may be confidentially directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538.

Any questions concerning these coaching sessions may directed to Mark Chase on (781) 383-9122. Questions regarding the League draft may also be directed to Liam on (781) 383-9538.

COASTAL STARS

Mite B

The first place STARS got a bye in the first round of the playoffs. Cape Cod won their first game 1-0 vs. Westwood in overtime and less than 24 hours later, they were in the quarter finals vs. the Coastal STARS. When the battle tested team from the Cape got off the team bus at Hobomock arena in Pembroke, they had a swagger in their walk, a hot goaltender and they were clearly unimpressed with the 35-3-2 Stars. The STAR studded cast of the Mite B team thought their name was already on the Stanley Cup. This proved to be a mistake when the Cape Cod team jump out to a 2-0 lead over the STARS. At this point, Declan Leahy called a team meeting on the ice and then called on his defensive core of Patrick Graham, Jack Evitts, Joey Redfearn and goalie, Kal Maier, to shut down the high scoring offense from Cape Cod.

That solved the defensive issue but the STARS entered the 2nd frame with a two goal deficit and facing one of the hottest goalies in the league. Put your seat backs and tray tables into their upright positions because this game is about to take off! Triple B, Big Bryan Bowman, set the tone when he banged the boards and crashed the corners. Sam Rice displayed Terry O'Reilly style hockey and Tucker Ambrose showed finesse and speed. But today's scoring belonged to the smurf line - big things come in small packages when you're referring to the front line of Cu-Jo (Curtis) Golden, Michael (TNT) Lund, and Robert (talk quiet and carry a big stick) Reidy.

At 11:09 of the 2nd frame Golden received a pass from Reidy, who then crashed the net and left the rebound for Michael Lund - Lund buried his shot to make it a one goal game! With the score 2-1 and a crowd noise level that matched the decibels of the Lakers/Celtics 1983 Boston Garden game, the STARS weren't taking prisoners.

With 4:09 to play in the 2nd period Brendan (Prime Time) Evitts and Big Cat (Matt Doyle) put enormous pressure on the Cape Cod goalie only to be denied on countless attempts. The Cape team refused to quit despite all sorts of adversity and worked the clock down the close the second frame 2-1.

To start the 3rd period the STARS' coaching staff called on the smurfs once again. When the crisp passing combo of Reidy - to Lund - to Golden worked their magic, Golden blasted the tying goal- five hole! With the game tied, the STARS relied heavily on great two way hockey from veterans Jeffrey Powers, Declan Leahy and Capt. Patrick Graham. In addition to this, there was the usual outstanding goal tending of Kal Maier. The 3rd period ended in a tie (2-2) and this game was headed into over time.

Aiden Beresford and Brendan Evitts put on a forechecking clinic in overtime which help spring Jeff Powers in the offensive zone. Powers had a clean lane to the goal when he was tripped from behind and what should have been a penalty shot, the referee swallowed his whistle. This game was not going to be decided on a penalty. With 2:09 to play in over time, Michael Lund won the face off in the offensive zone, shifted past the Cape Cod Defenseman, head-faked the goalie and back handed the winning goal! Game, set, match - make that 36-3-2!

Next up for the STARS - NORWOOD. The excitement for this game should prove to be on par with Game 7 of the Red Sox-Yankees 2004 ACLS series, as 2 of the Stars 3 losses came against Norwood. Wake the kids, phone the neighbors, and call WEEI, because this is going to be a match made in heaven!!

Squirt C1

After finishing the regular season with an impressive 17-3-4 record, the STARS lost their opening playoff game to Hanover. Next up, the STARS faced a feisty Pembroke Python team, desperately needing a win. Playing in front of a sell out crowd with an electrifying playoff atmosphere, the STARS scored early and often. At 9:34 of the first period Chase Sheldon carried the puck coast to coast and fed a text book pass to a streaking Jack Condon in the slot. Condon whistled his signature wrist shot past the out stretched Pembroke goalie. Then at 4:56, Chris Lund dug the puck out of the corner and made a brilliant pass to Jack Condon. Condon then sent a "one timer" 5-hole! Trailing 2-0 Pembroke refused to quit and mounted several aggressive attacks, only to be shut down by tremendous defensive efforts from Robbie Bertone, Christopher Lund, Sam Asnault and Jason Tolman. The final line of defense - the absolutely phenomenal Mike Soucey playing between the pipes, would not be permeated. Soucey, having a monster season (including 5 shutouts), knows hot goalies win playoff championships. At 14:07 of the 2nd frame, Pembroke cut the lead in half and the score was 2-1.

The STARS quickly regained the 2 goal lead when Kevin Friedland stole the puck in the neutral zone. Friedland shifted from left to right and sizzled a lead pass to Jack Condon - Condon lit the lamp for the 3rd time when he roofed a missle for his 4th career hat trick. Pembroke was the "scary monster" that wouldn't go away when, at 10:03 of the second period, they cut the score to 3-2. The action was intense when veterans Max Montgomery and Mark McGoldrick played great two way hockey and had several scoring opportunities only to be denied by an acrobatic Pembroke netminder.

The third period mirrored the first two when Jack Condon struck again, scoring his 4th consective goal. Assists on the goal were from Robbie Bertone and Adam Haskel. A relentless Pembroke team wouldn't fold, and with 8:05 remaining in the contest Pembroke cut the lead to 5-4. At this point Captain Brian Craig put the final nail in the coffin scoring the 5th and final goal. Craig, the team leader and top goal scorer, finished the season with impressive MVP credentials. 5-3 in favor of the STARS! Next up for the STARS is a feisty Norwood team on April 16, 6:50 A.M. at Pilgrim. Bring this article and receive free admission!

Squirt C2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 had a wild playoff game that ended with the Stars on top 4-3.

The game started off with a bang early with Duxbury beating Star's goalie, Alec Hurd for 2 goals. Duxbury then had another breakaway against Hurd when a Duxbury player broke free from the Star's defense. The player had Hurd beat and the scorekeeper had just about made the game 3-0 when Hurd dove to his stick side and "stoned" the Duxbury player going for his hat trick. That save motivated the Stars.

Coleman Hernon then broke away from his defensive position and scored first on Duxbury to make the game 2-1. Jack Kuppens tied the score with time running out in the second. The score remained tied until an errant shot went off a Stars player to break the tie and give Duxbury a lead 3-2.

The Stars defense of Chris Bjorkman, Coleman Hernon, Jake Denton and Adam Jackson kept the score 3-2 until Jack Kuppens again shot the gap and scored to even the score 3-3.

Nick Mulrey, Nate Morse, Brendon Queenan, Colin Bell, Jake Timcoe, and Mick Barry continued to apply pressure on Duxbury. The Duxbury goalie wasn't giving an inch. Then with the third period more than half over, Ethan Maher, the little engine that could, held the puck in the zone, stepped up and shot a blistering wrist shot on the ice to beat the Duxbury goalie and make the score 4-3 Stars. The stands erupted and so did the Stars' bench.

Duxbury, however never gave up and pulled their goalie with 2 minutes left. Alec Hurd and the Stars' defense repelled countless shots and the game ended 4-3. The Stars are 1-0 in the playoffs and have a bye this week.

Boys tennis starts with three wins

Nils Sceery and Blain Morin are off to undefeated starts for the 3-0 Cohasset boys tennis team.

At first singles, Sceery has been dominant, losing only five games combined in his three matches. Morin has yet to lose a set, and defeated a solid Mashpee opponent on Tuesday, 7-5, 7-6 (7-5 tiebreaker).

Cohasset coach Kent Parrot said both athletes worked hard in the winter to prepare for tennis season, and it has showed.

"Nils spent a lot of time indoors at the Y, as did Blain at the Cohasset Indoor Tennis Center," Parrot said. "They have both really raised the bar this year over last year."

Dan Sullivan has won two of this three matches at second singles, with his one loss being a highly competitive three-set match against Hanover where the third set was decided in a tiebreaker. Sullivan recorded an impressive 6-1, 6-0 win Tuesday against Mashpee.

As for doubles, Parrot says there are as many as nine boys that are competing for four slots in those positions. Brendan Michaud, Chris Pescatore, Chris Donze, Owen Stevenson, Kyle Dattola, Ryan Crough and Josh Dupre have all seen action thus far.

Parrot said Pescatore and Donze may be the top candidates. The duo played together a little bit last year, and looked solid in a 6-4, 6-4 win against Hanover on Monday.

The coach also called Crough a "very good prospect" who also may be playing his way to the top of that list.

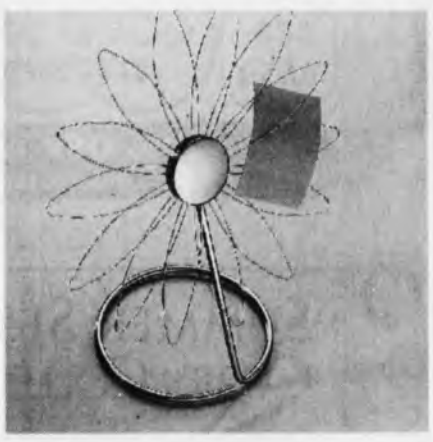
team, a pair that played together last year at second doubles.

"They're both seasoned players, and they play together very well," Boles said. "Alex got off to a bit of a slow start for us [Hosea plays basketball for HHS in the winter], but she will only get better as the season wears on."

The two teams were able to get some of their non-starters onto the court for exhibitions, including the doubles match of Casey Cavanaro and Katherine Whoriskey for Cohasset and Hingham's Caitlyn Bardsley and Ally DaSilva.



The teams conclude their season against one another on May 24 at Cohasset.

Historical society spring dinner Apr. 24

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Spring Dinner on Sunday, April 24, at the Cohasset Harbor Resort on Elm Street in Cohasset. The featured speaker for the evening will be character actress Joan Gatturna performing "Petticoats at Sea." Joan will portray Johanna Sears Burgess, a character representative of the 19th century women who experienced the romance and peril of life at sea. Johanna tells of her first trip to China and of family life afloat on a Gold Rush clipper.

Joan Gatturna will perform 'Petticoats at Sea' at the historical society spring dinner.

The evening will begin with a cash bar starting at 5:30 p.m. followed by dinner. The menu choices are Roasted Baby Cod or Chicken Francaise with Caesar Salad to begin and Berry Shortcake for dessert. The deadline for reservations is April 16, and can be made by sending a check ($31 for members and $36 for nonmembers) and choice of entrée to The Cohasset Historical Society, P.O. Ensemble Chaconne concert is Sunday Ensemble Chaconne (Peter H. Bloom, baroque flute; Carol Lewis, viola da gamba; and Olav Chris Henriksen, baroque lute and English guitar) performs "A Musical Portrait ~Thomas Gainsborough and His Circle" at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., on Sunday, April 10, at 3 p.m.

Created for the Boston Museum of Fine Arts as part of their landmark exhibition of Gainsborough's paintings in 2003, the concert celebrates the great English painter's passion for music. The program features works by leading European composers who were colleagues of Gainsborough in mid-18th century London: Johann Christian Bach, Carl Friedrich Abel (the last great viola da gamba virtuoso), Italian violinist Felice de Giardini, lutenist and harpsichordist Rudolf Straube (a favorite student of J. S. Bach), and oboist Johann Christian Fischer, who eloped with Gainsborough's oldest daughter.

The concert also includes music of African composer Ignatius Sancho, who was born on a slave ship and rose to become a London composer and a man of letters. Like all of the other composers on the program, Sancho had his portrait painted by Gainsborough.

Performed on historical instruments, the concert showcases the seldom-heard English guitar along with baroque flute, viola da gamba, and baroque lute. Selections include "Che ciascun per te sospiri" by J.C. Bach, "Sonata I, Opus 6 in C major" by Abel, "Trio V in C major" by Giardini, "Sonata IX in d minor" by Fischer, "viola da gamba solos" by Abel, English guitar solos by Straube, and "Sweetest Bard" by Sancho.

RECREATION NOTES

Cheerleading clinic — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the three day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Dog obedience — The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer throughout the summer, dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School. Classes will be held on Wednesday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Wednesday, May 4, for Beginners at 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. class also for Beginners. Distractions classes will begin session two on June 15.

For both the beginner class and the obedience with distractions classes, dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6 to 7 and 7 to 8 p.m. The other sessions will be held during June, July and August.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five-week, one-hour per-week program.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Dogs need to be 3 months of age and over to quality for training classes and have up to date shots.

Spring programs — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in or drop off registration for Spring Recreation Programs for children ages 4 and 5 and grades K-5. Continuing for 5 weeks; May 2, through June 2. Except Monday programs which ends June 6, due to Memorial Day Holiday. Programs are as follows, with all events held at Deer Hill/Osgood Fields:

- On Mondays, grades K-2 will play T-Ball and low organized games, starting right after school until 4:15/4:30 p.m.
- On Tuesdays, ages 4 and 5 will play T-Ball, Games and Sports, 3:15 to 4:30 p.m.
- On Wednesdays, grades K-2 will play Sports and low organized games, 3 to 4:30 p.m.
- On Thursdays, grades 3-5 will play Kickball/Sports/Games, starting right after school until 4:30 p.m. Each program meets once weekly for a 5 week period.

Children should bring snacks/drinks to programs and all children must be picked up either prior to, or promptly at the concluding program times. Children may stay after school to participate once parental permission is given on the registration form.

Complete registration form, calculating appropriate fee and make checks payable to: Town of Cohasset, checks and forms may either be dropped off at the Recreation Office or mailed to: Cohasset Recreation Department - 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

The fee for one child in any 5 week program is $50. The fee for one child in 2 one Day Programs is $90 per child.

The rainy day site will be at the Osgood School gym. Pick up for programs is at 4:15/4:30 p.m. left side of Osgood School.

Registration materials will be coming home via school or available at the Recreation Office, First floor, Town Hall.

• 'Boot Camp' fitness training — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for adult 'Boot Camp Fitness Training' to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, April 5, for 10 weeks through Thursday, June 9, on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

'Howling success' at Red Lion Inn

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue's second annual Barkitecture was a howling success at the Red Lion Inn. The auction featured 14 designer doghouses and cat condos built by architects, designers and builders, raising the group over $24,000.

Martha's Vineyard auctioneer Trip Barnes left the crowd panting for more—"Fenway Bark", a replica of the famous 2004 World Series' home, built by Roberts Dinion Architects with Ken Vona Construction, was such a hit with the crowd, the architect-builder team offered to create a second doghouse. Each garnered the shelter $2,100!

The Barker Awards first place prize for Best in Show went to MCDC Design for the Dog's Alpine Dog Chalet. First Place and Second Place Barkers were awarded to Fenway Bark by Roberts Dinion Architect with Ken Vona Construction, and Hacin & Associates' Barkelona Pavilion.

HSAR President and Barkitecture planner Pamela Loring thanked the crowd, saying "your help is a gift of hope to so many who find themselves at our doorstep—helpless, hopeless and without a voice. Their desperate days are over—you are all architects of hope."

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a no-kill non profit organization. For information, call 1-877-378-1195.

Daffodil Days celebrated at King Jewelers

Children visit with state pageant winner

By Mary Jane Hanron
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The 2005 Spring Jewelry Preview at King Jewelers was held Wednesday, March 23 as the store hosted its second annual Daffodil Days Celebration.

For several weeks, the store had accepted orders for bouquets of flowers from customers and supporters. All money collected through this endeavor was donated to the American Cancer Society (ACS).

Children of all ages chatted with the pageant winner sharing accounts of their efforts to help others.

Guests and clients claiming flowers were invited to a day long preview of the season's newest jewelry collections. An atmosphere of warmth and generosity was evident as people arrived to partake in the event. The store's showroom overflowing with cheery daffodil blossoms evoked thoughts of spring despite a bitter chill outdoors and a weather forecast predicting yet another overnight snowstorm.

Funds raised by this charitable venture at King's far surpassed the donations of the previous year and would support programs of the American Cancer Society. The ACS is available 24 hours a day seven days a week to patients, survivors, caregivers and family members of those touched by cancer. Telephone access, online information as well as countless community activities and services provide referrals, comfort, direction and guidance to anyone in need of assistance.

While supporting the ACS, guests at King's enjoyed the jewelry on view throughout the day. The couture designs of Jarretiere, an innovative and award winning Italian jewelry collection were presented by Michelle Termine of Boston. Magnificent estate jewels, ekdesigns Spring 2005 creations and a brilliant array of fancy yellow diamonds dazzled the guests.

Joining the Kings as hostess for the afternoon was Alison Cronin of Weymouth, Miss Teen Massachusetts USA, and a high school senior who will represent the Commonwealth at the Miss Teen USA pageant in August. Her presence at the event launched King Jewelers' ongoing theme that "Kids Can Change the World." As a youth "goodwill ambassador", Alison visited with local youngsters invited to the party.

Cohasset, Scituate Weymouth and Hingham were among the towns represented by students motivated by benevolence and dedication. Their presence that day represented appreciation for the many ways they are involved in community service and encouragement for them to continue along these paths. Children of all ages chatted with the pageant winner sharing accounts of their efforts to help others. Alison, a supporter of cancer related charities and drug resistance causes conversed with the youngsters about topics such as "Locks for Love", walkathons for various causes and the Cohasset Relay for Life. A donor to "Locks for Love" herself, Cronin had much in common with girls growing their hair so that it may be cut and donated for the creation of wigs for kids in need.

Relay for Life participants discussed their past successes and their efforts to encourage other kids to join them for the event to be held this June at Cohasset High School. "It's great to see so many kids involved in helping people in the community," stated Cronin.

King Jewelers plans to expand its venture to encourage youth to join in charitable projects within the surrounding communities.

The day ended with a visit to Cohasset Knoll to deliver daffodils to the residents there. At the event's conclusion, all involved, young and old were reminded by the joyful yellow daffodils and the sweet aroma of spring to keep hoping, keep helping and to believe in miracles.

For more information, please call King Jewelers: 781-383-1755. The American Cancer Society can be reached at: 1-800-ACS-2345.

Hingham Public Library to host 'Sisters in Crime'

The American Association of University Women - Hingham Area Branch (AAUW) is proud to host "Sisters in Crime - It's a Mystery to Me." Mystery writers, Hallie Ephron Touger, Roberta Isleib, and Kate Flora, will discuss the development of the mystery novel from idea to finished book, Wednesday, April 13 from 7-9 p.m. at the Whiton Room, Hingham Public Library.

Earth Day essay deadline is April 30

The Aquarion Water Company, which supplies water to Hingham, Hull & Cohasset, is holding its annual Earth Day essay contest for high school seniors graduating in June of 2005 in these service towns.

The theme is: "Why is water conservation important and what significant role can we can play in improving the quality and protecting the quantity of our water resource?"

One essay from each town will be chosen to win a scholarship which will be paid directly to the college the student will attend. The contest deadline is April 30.

Essays should be no more than 500 words, typed and double-spaced. Entries will be judged on clarity, punctuation, accuracy, creativity and adherence to topic. At least two sources should be cited.

All entries must have a cover page with the essay's title and the writer's name, telephone number, school and home addresses, teacher and grade level.

Essays should be submitted to the Aquarion Water Company, Aquarion Water Company, P.O. Box 336, Accord, MA 02018-0336. ATT: Martin Cohn. For more, call Martin Cohn at 781-449-5600.

New director is at the Harte of Wellspring multi-service agency

Puts his energy into fundraising

By Constance Gorfinkle
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Twenty years ago probably no one thought that Wellspring, a small thrift shop at 814 Nantasket Ave. in Hull, would one day emerge as a major multi-service agency providing financial, educational and emotional support to thousands in need across the South Shore. Neither perhaps, could one imagine Wellspring becoming a community center, where staff, volunteers, clients and customers, in many cases, would form an extended family.

That can be seen in the crowded aisles of the Thrift Shop, where mothers with children in strollers, men trying on warm jackets and salespeople busily accepting items from donors, talk to one another with the ease of old friends.

All that has come about due to the vision of its founder, the late Rev. Diane Edson of Hingham. A strong advocate for those in crisis and a tireless worker in their behalf, Edson, most appropriately, has been honored by Wellspring with a fund, 100 percent of which goes toward providing immediate support for qualified clients of the organization who are in need of direct crisis intervention. Last year, the fund got under way with a handsome donation of $3,000 from a couple within Wellspring's inner circle. The organization then reached out to businesses and churches, which added another $3,000, explains Executive Director Vinny Harte.

A general appeal for this year's Edson Fund will be launched later this month. But two major fundraisers – a Christmas concert performed by the Broad Cove Chorale and an appeal made by Harte at an Old Ship Church Sunday service – already have raised $9,000 for the fund.

(Contributions can be by cash, check or charge [Visa/MC], made in person, via mail, over the phone: 781-925-3211, or online at www.wellspringhull.org).

Sitting in Wellspring's spare offices, through which staff members pass as they go about their vital tasks, one is buoyed by the enthusiasm displayed by Harte, who came to the organization just a little over a year-and-a-half ago after having run a successful program that provides housing for people with family members in Boston hospitals.

A large, cheerful man with graying blond hair, Harte has continued the extraordinary fundraising efforts of Wellspring that have resulted not only in its being able to fulfill the goals set forth by Edson but have given the organization a reputation for running glamorous, must-go-to fundraisers.

Glamour, however, isn't what comes to mind when one stands outside the undistinguished row of storefronts that house Wellspring's offices and stores. No splashy signs proclaim their existence, no flashy window dressings invite the passerby inside. In fact, except for a few people going in and out of the thrift shop, there's little to indicate the beehive of activity taking place behind those plain exteriors, as staff members, volunteers, clients and customers take part in the daily work of Wellspring.

That work includes running an adult education program for those seeking GED certificates or high school diplomas, providing crisis counseling and community outreach, running a domestic violence intervention program, and manning a bookstore and food pantry, as well as the ongoing thrift shop. Indeed, Wellspring is a helping hand that's always extended for the main purpose of getting people back on their feet. As its creed states: Wellspring offers a hand up, not a hand out.

Obviously, maintaining all those programs costs money, roughly $460,000 annually, a figure that only will grow with the advent of Harte, who, in his first year — assisted by the board and consultants — identified new areas of need.

"One was transportation; one was case management," he says.

"Those already have been adopted and accomplished." Evidence of the former is the blue-and-white van that sits in Wellspring's driveway, a gift from the Hingham-Hull Rotary that has made possible a means of getting clients to and from their various programs.

Harte and his colleagues continue to look for different ways to provide help. "In less than a month, we're going to revisit what we did and identify more needs," he continues. "One of those needs – that we know is going to come up – is housing: Do we want to be involved with affordable housing? Do we want to look at a safe house for women in crisis? Do we want to look at housing for specific populations — single women, single men? All that's on the table."

But the table can only be set with great infusions of money. Some of that comes out of creative collaborations with other agencies, such as the Hull school department, with which it has partnered for educational programs. And it has been able to secure many grants for particular projects. But a good deal of Wellspring's financial support comes from individuals' donations, such as the $473,000 raised in a capital campaign that made possible the purchase of its building on Nantasket Avenue.

But, of course, there's no better way to raise money than to give a great party or run a fabulous event. For ingenuity in that area, the Wellspring folks have few peers. A long-running event is Drowned Hogs, the annual January swim in which hundreds take part, including the intrepid Harte.

Last year, the organization added two new fundraisers to its calendar: The Taste of the South Shore — participated in by 26 area restaurants — which it shared with the Hull Lifesaving Museum, raising in total $14,000, and The Fashion Plate, for which volunteers modeled clothes from the thrift shop.

Early this month, another new event was held, a wine-tasting at the Atlantica Restaurant in Cohasset. And, later in the year, Wellspring will hold its most ambitious fundraiser to date: a dinner and auction at the River Club in Scituate.

"There will be 15 high-end, very attractive items in the live auction and 50 items in the silent auction," says Harte. Some of those already have been promised, even though the fundraiser is seven months away.

"We're hoping to raise $40,000," he adds confidently.

Those plans sound grand and should attract a large and generous crowd. But amid the fun no one will forget what it's all for: the single mom who will learn how to use a computer, the families who will get rental and heating assistance, the holiday happiness that will be enjoyed by those who otherwise would have none, the adult who will be able to finish his or her education, the out-of-work man who will learn how to land a job, the battered woman who will find a safe haven.

Wellspring has become a beacon for those who need help and those who want to help. It's a collaboration that benefits everyone.

WELLSPRING

Career development program that includes the following:

• Computer Training - Participants will work towards and receive a Microsoft Office certification in Word. The most important computer knowledge you can have when looking for employment is Microsoft Word. By the end of this course, you will be certified as a proficient Word user.

• Career Counseling - Resume and cover letter, job search skills, interview techniques are taught during the sessions and support and referrals for job opportunities are all included.

• Dress For Success - Clothing and accessories are available in Wellspring's shop to all participants enrolled in the program.

Round trip transportation is available at no additional cost. Enrollment for spring classes begins April 11. Classes will be held Tuesday and Thursday from 6-8 p.m. and will begin May 3. Course fee is $160 and financial assistance is available. Wellspring does not deny services due to an inability to pay.

Lee recently returned from active duty and visited with the girls from Troop 4788 to thank them for their kindness while he was away. Lee shared his story of what it was like to be over in Iraq, and taught them about the Iraqi culture. The girls celebrated Lee's homecoming and thanked him for taking the time to visit, with a cake in the shape of the American Flag.

Lt. Christopher Lee from the 94th Military Police poses with girls from Cohasset Girl Scout Troop 4788. Lee was there to present the girls with their own Certificates of Appreciation as well as Military Certificates of Appreciation for troop leaders Mary McKelvey and Arlene Fiori, for their kindness. The girls sent him and his division care packages filled with cards, candy, cookies, and letters of encouragement while serving in Iraq. Lee spent 16 months in Iraq and an additional six months activated in the states before leaving for duty.

Kids helping kids at Derby Academy

By Carl Schwaber
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

In the mild afternoon sun on the first day of April, some 400 Derby Academy students, teachers, and parents participated in an all school walk-a-thon, the culminating event in this year's community service project titled "Back to Back: Kids Helping Kids."

The students solicited pledges from family and friends before walking multiple perimeters of a quarter mile course on Derby's campus. The aim of this collective effort was to raise funds to benefit Supply Sacks and Children's Hospital.

Walk-a-thon a big success

Supply Sacks is an organization that provides duffel bags filled with clothes, personal care items, school supplies, playing cards, and more to children who have been abruptly removed from their homes due to abuse or neglect and placed into foster care without any personal possessions. Students from Derby's Upper and Middle Schools are combining their earnings from the walk and other sources (jobs, chores, etc.) to fill approximately 25 duffel bags.

In similar fashion, Lower School students are pooling their combined earnings to fill individual backpacks for young patients staying at Children's Hospital in Boston for an extended period. Backpack items include books, crayons, stuffed animals, games, and activity kits. In all, about 100 backpacks will be supplied.

The Back to Back project is being spearheaded by Derby parents Bev Koswick and Emily Brown, both of Cohasset. Media Forms Group has provided Derby with the backpacks. VF Corporation has donated 100 pairs of jeans.

Walkers from the Derby Academy middle-school walk past the sign with the school's seal while raising money to help fill backpacks through "Supply Sacks" with personal care items, clothes, school supplies and more for children placed in foster care due to abuse or neglect.

Third-grader Charley Michalowski, 8, holds the hand of his little sister, Margaret, 4, during the walkathon at Derby Academy last Friday. Fati Namazi, a parent volunteer, is walking behind the kids.

The Derby Academy Rugby team leads the start of the upper school's two-mile walk Friday. Students were raising money to fill backpacks with personal care items, clothing, school supplies and more for children who suddenly find themselves in foster care because of abuse or neglect.

John Lowe, at right, leads the chain as his son, first-grader Zachary, 7, and first-grader Graham McOsker, 7, at left, follow him along the walk around the Derby Academy campus Friday to raise money to fill backpacks with activity items for kids at Children's Hospital.

HELP WANTED

Part-time news gatherer wanted

A 20-hour per week news gatherer is needed to join our award-winning editorial team. We're looking for an energetic self-starter to coordinate and deliver news content for a new publication in Plymouth, the Plymouth Bulletin. This is an entry-level position that calls for a confident person with strong reporting and writing skills who can find stories, pitch good ideas to editors and meet deadlines. Person would be responsible for coordinating police news, interviewing interesting and prominent people in the community, coordinating town government news, as well as producing local real estate features. Good typing and computer skills necessary. Contact Mark Skala at (781) 837-4574 or email a résumé to mskala@cnc.com

Part-time photographer wanted

We're looking for someone with a sharp eye to capture Plymouth's beauty. The 20-hour per week photographer will be concentrating on the Plymouth area for a new publication, the Plymouth Bulletin. Candidate should be comfortable going into social settings to photograph community events, as well as being comfortable taking feature photos of people and places in Plymouth. The goal is to get as many Plymouth faces in the newspaper each week as possible. Flexible schedule, that would include some nights and weekends, as well as daytime hours. Candidate should be computer savvy, skilled at working with digital photography and able to meet deadlines. Candidate should also be conscientious and detail-oriented and able to provide correct spelling of names and relevant information about the photograph in a caption. Contact Mark Skala at (781) 837-4574 or email a résumé to mskala@cnc.com

Youth drinking evident in break-in

One local teen is facing serious charges following an alleged break-in of the soccer storage shed on Milliken Field Saturday night.

Responding to a call from a neighbor, police were able to apprehend one of the suspects, a juvenile (meaning the teen is under 17). Police do not release the names of juveniles arrested.

Police Chief James Hussey said alcohol played a role and likely emboldened the teens to allegedly commit criminal acts.

"It appears the break-in was not motivated by an intent to steal but by alcohol," said Hussey, although the teens did remove some items, including soccer balls and game shirts, which were later found scattered around the neighborhood.

He said a call came in about 10 p.m. Saturday regarding youths behaving suspiciously on Milliken Field near the soccer shed. Officer Edward Bagley responded and talked with the caller, who provided a description of four white males. Officer Jeff Treanor and Sgt. Bill Quigley also responded to the scene.

A neighborhood dog that was barking led the to the apprehension of one suspect, who was charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime; malicious destruction of property over $250; minor possession of alcohol and larceny from a building.

"There is a possibility of more arrests," Hussey said, adding there were at least four teens involved. He said he believed the parents of the juvenile who was arrested have contacted the soccer club to make restitution.

Hussey said the juvenile smelled of alcohol and police found beer cans.

"Alcohol and youth is something we have to do a lot of work on," Hussey said. "It has a negative impact on the community; a negative impact on the victim; and a negative impact on youth.

"It's something we need to get a grasp on as a community and do everything in our power to have a positive influence with the kids."

Hussey said he wanted to thank the people around Milliken Field who helped the officers.

Discover how the rich get richer, even when the market falls.

THE SECRET IS OPTIONS!

Options are an investment tool created many years ago by the wealthy to protect their money in the stock market. Like the wealthy, you can ALWAYS protect your investment in the market, up or down, if you know how to put options to work for you. Optionetics® will give YOU that power!

Let's face it. For most people, buying stocks is a one-way street. You only profit if your stock goes up. But many people are making money right NOW using options to profit when stock prices go down. While you're watching your stock prices fall, they actually see the value of their portfolios go up. Why? Because they exploit the power of options in their investment strategy!

IT'S ALL ABOUT LEVERAGE

The wealthy know how to get the same investment presence you have, but at a fraction of the cost. You see, for every $1,000 you put in stocks, they only put in $150 – $200 to achieve the same investment muscle. How? Because they use options to leverage or control a stock rather than buy it, extending the power of their investment dollar. That's how the wealthy play the stock market, without the risk of actually buying the stock.

SO WHAT CAN YOU DO ABOUT IT?

Now, with Optionetics®, you can learn the same simple strategies and techniques used by the wealthy to leverage their investment dollars using options, and put them to work for YOU.

DISCOVER THE POWER OF OPTIONETICS®

For a limited time, you're invited to attend the award-winning Optionetics® Workshop FREE. It will change the way you look at the stock market forever and give you the tools you need to protect your investment the same way the weathly do.

- See how the rich think about stock market opportunities differently than the common investor.
- Discover investment systems once reserved for the wealthy and the industry elite.
- Understand the market's hidden factors better than many current options traders.
- Learn to control stocks without the risk of buying them.
- Discover more practical techniques for making money than you ever would studying on your own.
- Use time-tested formulas in "real-market" option trades to make big profits IMMEDIATELY.
- Learn options trading in just DAYS instead of YEARS.
- Control your financial future with proven moneymaking techniques.

Look what happens when you find out what the insiders don't want YOU to know!

5 Things Wall Street Insiders Hope YOU Never Find Out

1. Stocks are NOT the only way to make money in the market.
2. You DON'T have to buy stocks to profit from them.
3. You DON'T have to lose money if the price of your stock falls.
4. You CAN make profits no matter which way a stock goes.
5. You CAN control stocks for a fraction of their purchase price.

Find out more about the secrets of America's wealthiest investors, and then use them yourself! The FREE Optionetics® Workshop series is coming to your area. Don't miss it!

Norwell Theatre presents classic Sondheim musical

The musical "Company" — Stephen Sondheim's paean to personal relationships — opened on Broadway 35 years ago. According to Weymouth's Michael Joseph — music director of the Company Theatre's current production of the 1970 Tony Award-winner for Best Musical — the show remains as relevant today as when it premiered.

"With all the examination of marriage going on these days, this is a perfect time for this show," Joseph explained by telephone recently. "There's a big emotional ride, provided by George Furth's book and Sondheim's music, that everyone will be able to relate to in their own lives."

The story of Bobby, a 35-year-old bachelor whose friends are either married or in serious relationships and whose own search for the perfect woman seems destined to remain open-ended, is told through some of Sondheim's best-known songs including "You Could Drive a Person Crazy," "Ladies Who Lunch," and "Side by Side by Side." Along the way, Bobby watches as his friends fight, plan affairs, contemplate divorce and dull their emotional pain with booze and drugs. Bobby wonders whether he will ever walk down the aisle, before deciding there is no point to "Being Alive," if you're alone.

Joseph isn't alone on this production's creative team. He is joined by directors Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerman and choreographer Sally Ashton Forrest. "This musical has 35 years of history, so we have a lot to live up to, but our cast is an A+ group of South Shore actors and performers who are more than up to the task, including John King; Sarah deLima, Paula Markowicz and Ann McCoy."

If anyone in Company's company of "Company" goes up on a line or lyric, they need look no further than Joseph.

"I've known this show since the cast album first came out in the 1970s. I was in high school and I played the album so often that, to this day, my kid sisters know the words to every song," he says with a laugh.

"Company" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through April 24. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com

Ricca salutes Sondheim at Scullers

Michael Ricca

Singer, actor and Quincy native Michael Ricca brings his solo cabaret show, "Take Me To The World" to Scullers Jazz Club for one performance only on Tuesday, April 12, at 8 p.m. Ricca will perform the music and lyrics of Stephen Sondheim, presenting his own unique interpretations of the legendary composer's best-known Broadway music. Ricca will also pay musical homage to Leonard Bernstein and Rodgers and Hammerstein.

The show will also take a look at what influenced Sondheim musically and dramatically, particularly his relationship with Oscar Hammerstein. Ricca will present some of Stephen Sondheim's most famous songs, including "Send in the Clowns" and "Losing My Mind," as well as some of his lesser-known works.

South Shore audiences will remember Ricca for his appearance in the acclaimed "At The Movies" musical revue at the former Raffael's Dinner Theater in North Quincy. Ricca has also appeared as an actor in productions at leading theatres including Huntington Theatre Company, New Repertory Theatre and SpeakEasy Stage Company. Ron Roy - pianist, accompanist and musical director - will be at the piano when Ricca takes the stage at Scullers.

Scullers Jazz Club is located in the DoubleTree Guest Suites Hotel, 400 Soldiers Field Road, Boston. For tickets to see Michael Ricca in concert, please call (617) 562-4111 visit or www. Scullersjazz.com

Music the star in 'On the Record'

The musical revue "On The Record," now at Boston's Colonial Theatre, features a company of performers with Broadway and television credits. With more than 60 classic Disney songs ("When You Wish upon a Star," "A Spoonful of Sugar," "Can You Feel the Love Tonight") as its score, however, the show's real star is its music.

Set in a modern-day recording studio where performers have gathered to lay down the ultimate Disney collection, the new musical - directed, choreographed and co-conceived by Robert Longbottom - boasts 64 of the most beloved songs ever written from some of the most popular Disney movies of the last 75 years, including one first made famous by a parental pachyderm. In "Dumbo," the title character's mother sings "Baby Mine" as a lullaby. She isn't the only one.

"My mom used to sing it to me when she put me to bed at night. It's always been my favorite Disney song," recalled "On The Record" cast member Kaitlin Hopkins by telephone recently. "It's such a lovely, lovely song with a heart-stoppingly beautiful arrangement by David Chase for our show. It's done more as a torch song, and given a more weighty treatment than it had in the movie."

Hopkins, 41, the daughter of acclaimed film and stage actress Shirley Knight and known in her own right for her work on Broadway and the now defunct NBC-TV daytime drama "Another World," says that the familiar Disney music is used in new ways without sacrificing any of the original meaning.

"Our entire show features beautiful new arrangements, and because the songs (including nine Academy Award winners for Best Song) are done out of context - and by real people and not animated characters - you hear them in a whole new way. We do the great Peggy Lee song 'He's a Tramp' from 'Lady and the Tramp' as a duet. You hear the familiar tune, of course, but in a new, different way. No matter how it's done, this music always has great hope. It makes you believe that if you wish upon a star, it will come true."

"On The Record" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through April 10. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.broadwayacrossamerica.com

BIKERS BEWARE!

If you ride a motorcycle, you may want to do more to protect your well-being than wear a helmet. According to researchers at the University of Florida, when throttled up, the 33 motorcycles tested produced noise levels above 100 decibels. That is the equivalent of the noise of a rock concert or chainsaw. Exposure to noise at 100 decibels is safe for only fifteen minutes. Permanent hearing loss can occur with prolonged exposure to noise levels of 85 decibels or higher. The loudest of the motorcycles tested measured 119 decibels with the engine revved, and the recommended exposure time at that level is only 11 seconds. Potentially, the vast number of motorcyclists could be exposed to dangerous noise levels.

Two important steps you can take to protect your hearing are wearing ear protection during loud, noisy activities and having your hearing checked regularly to stay on top of possible hearing loss. Hearing tests are easy, comprehensive, painless ways of evaluating this precious sense. If you've never had a hearing test, or if it's been awhile since your last one, take the time today to call us at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER 781-337-1144. We'll arrange a free hearing consultation for you at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth.

P.S. While motorcycle helmets do not offer any significant protection against noise, inexpensive foam earplugs can reduce sound levels by 20-25 decibels.

DESTINATIONS

Sedona's Mii amo

By LAUREN BECKHAM FALCONE

SEDONA, Ariz. — So, here I was, 2,600 miles from my husband, baby and a 10-inch snowstorm, lying face down on a massage table at Mii amo spa, covered only in a very small towel, trying to relax.

Breathe. It doesn't matter that you might look like Frederika Bimmel in "Silence of the Lambs." Breathe. The curling iron is not on. Breathe. I wonder why Denise Richards and Charlie Sheen really broke up?

This was going to be harder than I thought.

But I was on a mission, by God. I didn't board a plane (which I am loath to do), sit next to Latka from "Taxi" (I swear, they had identical voices) for almost six hours and drive two more north from Phoenix to Sedona (Sedona is about half way between Phoenix and the Grand Canyon) to remain uptight. Mii amo, a destination spa adjacent to the very popular Enchantment Resort, is a respite for the seriously stressed out, myself included.

Set among the awe-inspiring red rocks of Arizona's Boynton Canyon, Mii amo's promise to guests is a "life-enhancing experience of achieving a transformation in physical health, emotional well-being and spiritual renewal."

Which sounded lovely but I had one question: Do they serve wine?

Yes, and much more.

Mii amo, which is Native American for "can I get a massage" — just kidding; it means "journey" — is an exclusive destination designed with the unique environment of Sedona in mind. Stone walkways lead to and from the adobe, wood, indigenous stone and brick main building and guest rooms.

The soothing sound of running water greets guests at check-in and huge windows allow for clear views of the buttes. Spa guests can relax in one of 16 casitas (rooms) with private courtyards and beehive fireplaces.

But outside the privacy of your room is an equally contemplative setting. The outdoor pool and whirlpool have a spectacular view of the red rocks and mountains. I spent most of my down time — when I was not getting a spa treatment — sitting on a chaise lounge, drinking in the sun's rays and ordering organic meals from Mii amo Cafe.

Mii amo's outdoor pool and whirlpool have a spectacular view of the red rocks and mountains. When guests are not in the pool many enjoy sitting on a chaise lounge, drinking in the sun's rays and ordering organic meals from Mii amo Cafe.

Okay — confession: I know I was here to think about my inner self, to become one with the sacred surroundings of Sedona, but can I just say that the food was beyond delish? From sushi to Asian chicken salad to pan-seared venison, every menu item had a breakdown of fat, calories, sodium and other naughty little numbers, but was practically guilt-free and bursting with Oriental and southwestern flavors. Note to chef: Create a cookbook. Please.

Travelers can choose from three-, four- or seven-night packages, with gratuities and three daily meals included in the price. My three-night relaxation vacation, packed with two 90-minute and four 60-minute treatments, began Thursday night with a Milk and Honey bath and massage. I was buffed with a honey scrub, then took a dip into a hydrotherapy bath filled with — guess what? — milk and honey — for 30 minutes, followed by a 60-minute massage on the table.

After all that I had the best night's sleep I can remember.

The next morning, I began the day with blue corn waffles, coffee and a shot of wheat grass — when in Rome! — followed by a gathering in the Crystal Grotto, considered the heart and soul of Mii amo.

The kiva design of the Crystal Grotto, featuring a skylightlike opening in the ceiling and sun shining down on a crystal altar, is inspired by traditional American Indian rituals. Staff and guests are encouraged to come here each morning to set their individual intention for the day while breathing in some cleansing sage (which made me a little asthmatic) and listening to the high-pitched sound of a wooden object rotating inside a crystal bowl (reminiscent of a car alarm.)

My intention for the day was to embrace meditation. Already I was on rocky ground.

But I rallied and took the Vortex walk around the canyon, and it was one of the highlights of the trip. Our guide was calming yet enthusiastic, explaining the sacredness of the canyon to American Indians, the history of the area and the awesome geological formations. If you looked hard enough, they appeared human. Our guide said the American Indians thought so, too, which is why Sedona is such a revered area. The tour was awe-inspiring, but may I suggest skipping the wheat grass shot? I felt like I was burping up astro turf all day.

The rest of the day I spent at the pool or in treatments. I got the Blue Corn Vichy, a scrub/rinse under seven showerheads. When the therapist walked in wearing a waterproof apron, pants rolled to his knees and a hose in his hand, he looked more like zookeeper about to give a rhino an enema than a relaxing masseuse. But after a few minutes, I knew I was safe. The treatment left me totally blissed out.

Later during my stay, a nice woman gave me a lymphatic drainage facial, "the answer for puffy eyes and chin." It was fairly typical facial fare, until she started pressing on my neck to drain my lymph nodes. I didn't mind, but it's a strange feeling, so be warned.

Other treatments I tried included Reiki energy healing, which I swear took me to another place; a Psychic massage, during which the therapist rubbed me down while explaining that I carry so much tension in my back because I don't realize my inner core is strong.

The best session of all was the Ayurvedic Herbal Treatment, a 90-minute scrub, massage and wrap. It's based on ayurveda, a traditional health-care system of India that dates back 5,000 years and operates on the premise that health is achieved through an individual's unique balances of energies or "doshas." The blurb in the spa menu said after the treatment I would be "escorted to a lounge chair for a cup of balancing tea and some time to meditate on the perfection of your life."

Indeed, I felt dosha-licious, and though I myself wasn't quite perfect, Mii amo spa is as close as it gets.

Three-night spa packages are priced from $1,650 to $2,850 per person (depending on when you travel and which accommodations you choose). Included are all meals, lectures, fitness classes and six treatments. For more information, call 888-749-2137 or go to www.miiamo.com

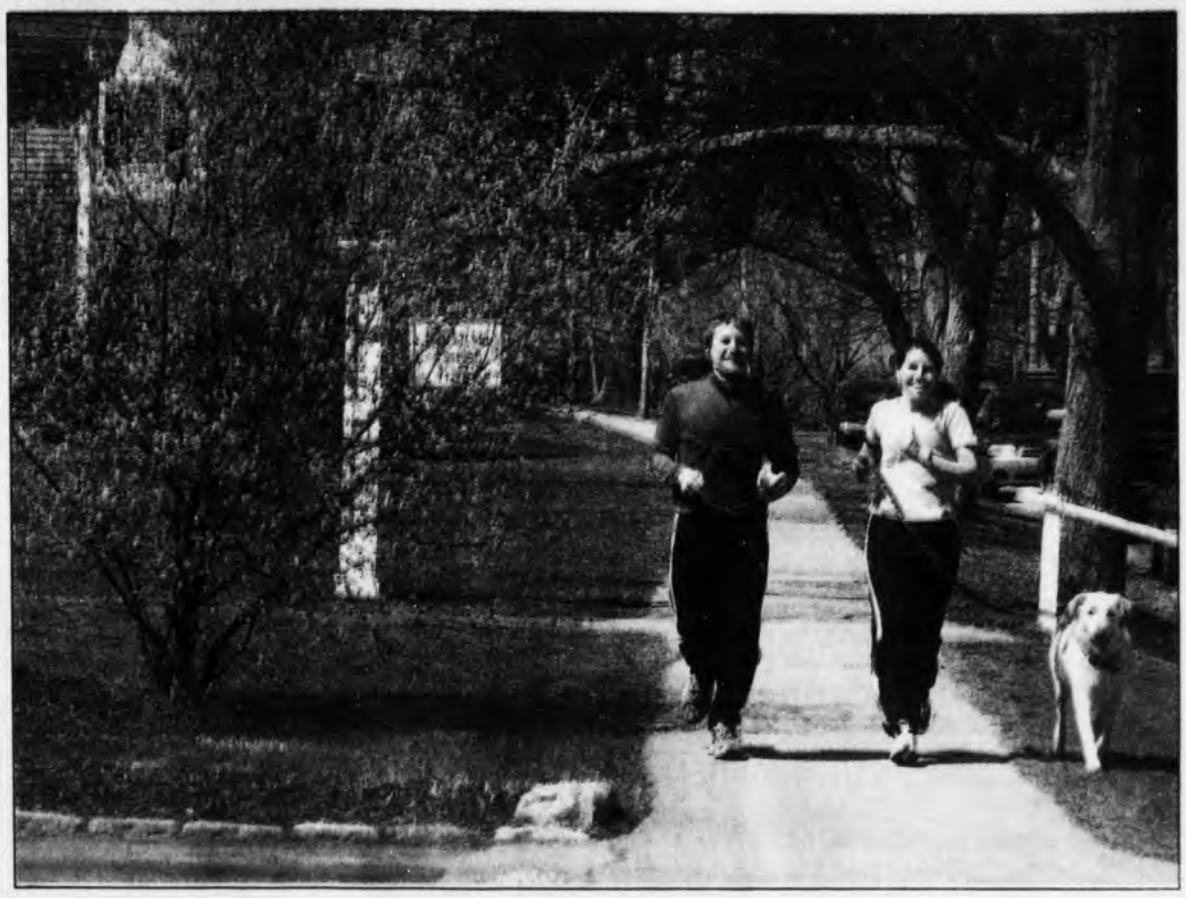
'See-through' harbor fence tops the list

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Wanting to keep the view, yet being impeded by safety concerns, selectmen were having trouble finding a replacement fence to be installed along Cohasset Harbor. However, a new alternative could be on the horizon which will be both functional and attractive.

Christine Player of Vine Associates was back before selectmen this week. The company is designing a new "harbor seawall-scape" for the town.

Player presented three new renderings of fence treatments drawn for the town's consideration. Only one was completely compliant with state building codes and the other two — which were preferable for the town — would require variances: one for the width of the spaces between vertical rails that are too large and the other for having horizontal rails akin to the rungs of a ladder, which are similar to what is in place currently.



"It's somewhat traditional and allows people to look out onto the ocean."
— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

After viewing the new renderings and hearing what it would take to receive a variance from the state for a non-compliant fence, Selectman Michael Sullivan said the town wants something which is as close as possible to what it already has, but that was proving difficult.

However, Player had contacted some of her "architect friends" and had found a fence that might serve all of Cohasset's needs while providing the safety required by the state, if the town was willing to stray from the designs which had been present-

Fred Koed may be the happiest man in town. The two-term incumbent selectman received a vote of confidence at the polls last Saturday where he handily won reelection for a third term.

"I'm surprised," Koed said when the vote totals were announced. "I've given up predicting elections, especially my own.

"I felt good this morning, doubtful by mid-afternoon, and by the end of the day – I had no idea who would win."
— Fred Koed

"I felt good this morning, doubtful by mid-afternoon, and by the end of the day – I had no idea who would win," he said, adding he appreciated the vote of confidence and he looked forward to tackling the issues facing the town.

Gary Vanderweil, a former long-time sewer commissioner, came in second in the three-way race for two seats. He said the election could have gone either way.

"Any two out of three of us might have won," he said. "All three candidates had good, active election committees and it was an exciting run."

Essays focus on stopping bullies

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Three Deer Hill students were called to the office Wednesday morning by Principal Keith Gauley — but not because they were in trouble. The students were being commended for a job well done as essays they wrote were chosen as being the three best out of the entire student body.

Third-grader Eric Weinstein, fourth-grader Caroline Lengyel, and fifth-grader Ben Curley, were the winners of the first ever "Helpful Hank" contest, which asked students to respond in writing to a "Dear Abbey-type" question about bullying.

"You will know it was worthwhile when you see how happy your friend is that he or she is not being bullied anymore."
— Caroline Lengyel, fourth-grader

The contest was an experiment on health education teacher Jane Gregory's part to find out how kids felt about bullying. She said it is a school-wide issue and noted that while some kids are bullies and other are the ones being bullied, "Everyone at some point hears about it, so everyone is involved."

The entire school participated so "it was really tough to come up with just one winner for each grade level," said Gregory.

Students were asked to respond to a letter which asks for advice in dealing with a

Selectmen reorganize

Votes have been tallied and Selectman Fred Koed has retained his seat on the Board of Selectmen for another three years, alongside new member Gary Vanderweil. As is customary after the election, the board voted in a new chairman, and Koed was chosen to replace Michael Sullivan as chairman. Ralph Dormitzer was appointed as vice chairman.

Sisters to sing at Fenway Park

Cohasset residents Abby, Sarah, and Audrey Brown are sure to be the talk of their classmates Monday morning as the three are slated to sing the national anthem Saturday, April 16 at Fenway Park. The three sisters, who have performed at many town functions including the South Shore Arts Festival on the Common, PSO fund-raisers, baseball fund-raisers and the Appalachia Service Project Festival, received word Wednesday morning they had been chosen to kick off Saturday's game when World Series Champions the Boston Red Sox will face off against the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beginning at 7:05 p.m.

Cook Estate meetings

The April 30 deadline for the Cook Estate is fast approaching and selectmen have some important decisions to make. As a result, a meeting of the Cook Estate working group will be held Thursday, April 21 at 4 p.m. The group will report back to selectmen Tuesday, April 26, with its recommendations for a wastewater solution for the site. That selectmen's meeting will be held for the sole purpose of discussing the Cook Estate. The board hopes to be able to schedule a meeting with the Cook heirs for either Thursday, April 28, or Friday April 29, and could ask for another extension of the purchase and sale agreement.

Last day of school set

The school committee voted to approve June 28 as the last day of school for students and June 30 as the last day for teachers — assuming Mother Nature cooperates and doesn't send any more snow to Cohasset! Students are required to attend school for 180 days per year, while by contract, teachers are required to attend for 184. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she knows the late release date will affect summer programs which are held in the schools. She will provide more information on the status of those programs as it becomes available.

Boston company buys Cedarmere for $17M

Firm's V.P. has local connection

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"This is a very exciting project and one we're very enthusiastic about."
— Bill Gause, Leggat McCall Properties

The owner has changed but the plans have not for the proposed Cedarmere senior housing project.

As of this week, Leggat McCall Properties LLC has become the new owner of the 41-acre parcel off Beechwood Street, taking over for Cohasset residents David and Kelli Calhoun and their business partner Tom Ragno of Lexington.

"It was such a terrific opportunity for us, Leggat, and the town," said Kelli Calhoun. "They are a great company with Cohasset connections and this is what they do. They build high-end housing."

Boston-based Leggat McCall Properties has been operating since 1965. As a private real estate company, Leggat buys and develops properties in the Boston-to-Washington, D.C. corridor for its own account and on behalf of its partners and clients.

The company has partnered with many local organizations to complete some high-profile projects, including renovations to Brandeis University, the restoration of the Trinity Church in Boston, and the expansion of the Boston Children's Museum.

Senior Vice President for Leggat McCall, Bill Gause, who went before the planning board Wednesday (April 13) for an informal introduction, said he is excited to be involved with the project on both a personal and professional level.

"My mom grew up in Cohasset," he said, and his grandfather Dan Cotton is currently a King Street resident. As a result, Gause has been spending time in town his whole life.

"Cohasset is a very desirable community," he said, adding however that senior housing is a product that has been lacking. "I think this is a great opportunity to meet the needs of seniors that may not have the need for a larger home," he said. "This is a very exciting project and one we're very enthusiastic about."

The property was sold by CB Richard Ellis commercial real estate brokers for a total purchase price of $17 million. Leggat not only purchased the property, it purchased all approved plans and permits secured for the project. Gause said the plans will be brought up to the level of construction documents, and everything will be built in accordance with what has already been approved.

"We'd like to start construction as soon as possible," said Gause, which he believes will be this summer. The company's goal is to deliver units in the spring or summer of 2006.

Along with inheriting the plans and permits, Leggat McCall will become the new owners of the lawsuit filed by Cedarmere for sewer access. The sewer commission will not allow the project to connect to the municipal sewer due to capacity issues and the fact the project is located outside of the Central Sewer District. Gause said the lawsuit is still in effect. Until the lawsuit is resolved, the project can move forward as planned with an on-site wastewater system which was approved by the Department of Environmental Protection.

Flashback: Cedarmere developers brought forth plans to build the proposed senior housing project roughly two years ago. The project is slated for the former Hayes Estate off Beechwood Street on the east side of 3A, and is planned to consist of a mix of 105-units of affordable and market-rate apartments and condominiums for seniors 55 and older.

The project was the first to file under the town's Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which was adopted by Town Meeting. There is a 25 percent affordability requirement for projects built under the Senior Overlay bylaw.

Override election is set for May 21

Church hall to host polls

$400K override and $13.2 debt exclusion on ballot

The board of selectmen voted Tuesday to set the special town election date for Saturday, May 21 to be held at the Second Congregational Church instead of Town Hall, where it is usually held. Voters will be asked to voice their opinion on both a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override that would be used to subsidize the school budget and a debt exclusion override which will ask voters to support a "50/50" taxpayer subsidy for the Little Harbor sewer project.

Town Manger Bill Griffin said in order to call a special election, a minimum of 35 days is necessary to allow for voter registration, absentee ballots, and ballot preparation. Under Massachusetts law, an override or debt exclusion election arising out of an annual town meeting must be held no later than Sept. 15.

The reason for the change of venue comes down to timing. The Cohasset Dramatic Club is using Town Hall the weekend of May 21, which is the first weekend the election could be held and still meet requirements. The following two weekends are Memorial Day weekend and high school graduation. Rather than wait until June to hold the election or hold the election on a Tuesday, which was suggested, Griffin looked into alternate sites.

The Second Congregational Church is located next door to Town Hall and Griffin said it seems to be the best alternative. In fact, he said the election has been held at the church once before when Town Hall was having some trouble with lead paint.

All registered voters will be notified via direct mail 10 days prior to the special election of the change of venue.

Affordable units should 'count'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The state allows "local initiative" projects as a way to resolve a community's affordable housing shortage.

While there had been some question regarding whether the affordable portion of the Cedarmere development complied with state regulations and could be "counted" toward the town's affordable housing stock — a recent Department of Housing and Community Development letter states plans will likely receive approval.

This is good news for Cohasset which is trying to get out from under the state's 40B requirements.

Chapter 40B is the state affordable housing law that allows developers to skirt local zoning regulations in exchange for providing affordable housing. Cohasset is vulnerable to 40B projects because it has so little affordable housing by state standards, far less than the threshold of 10 percent of its total housing stock.

The state allows "local initiative" projects as a way to resolve a community's affordable housing shortage.

The town, via the selectmen, filed an application to the DHCD for "Local Initiative Program Units-Only" approval for the Cedarmere project.

Questions raised in the application appear to answered.

The DHCD had been concerned the project's affordable units were isolated in a rental building set off from the rest of the site, which would not have met LIP guidelines that require integration of affordable housing.

But LIP staff member Erin Bettez stated in a recent letter, after speaking with developers David and Kelli Calhoun, she now understands the building will contain 31 for-sale condominiums, including some market-rate units. Its exterior will be in keeping with the other buildings on the site, and it will be fully integrated into the overall site plan through walking paths and overall landscape design. In addition, the building will not be the only large building on the site, as the Manor House, which is centrally located on the site, is larger.

Bettez said the DHCD expects an updated application will confirm the design. As long as the application meets all other program guidelines, the units should be approved as a LIP Units-Only and included in the town's subsidized housing inventory.

Cedarmere has filed under the town's Senior Overlay District bylaw, which requires the project to have an affordable component.

School board meets May 5

The school committee had planned to hold its next meeting April 28, but with Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh at a conference, the committee has agreed to hold off on meeting until May 5.

Members of the board thought taking that extra week would provide time to reorganize and provide new school committee members with background information before their first meeting.

New school committee members elected April 9 include Alfred Slanetz for the three-year term, and Pam Wilson for the one-year term.

FAST FACTS

The last time the board of selectmen was all male was in 1980 when the board consisted of Arthur Clarke, Henry Ainslie and Rocco Laugelle.

Legal guardian speaks out about SPED tuition charges

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Former Town Moderator George Marlette, left, congratulates newly elected Town Moderator Dan Evans after election results came in Saturday night. In an interview this week, Marlette, who is an attorney, explains his role as a legal guardian for a young woman with special needs and the effect on the school budget.

Out-of-district special education tuitions took center stage during this year's school budget process when it was found the costs for two students, who are not residents, were being charged to the district because their legal guardian lives in town.

A tight budget made for a tough situation for the school department, which was being asked to pay $195,000 in combined costs for the students.

However, the matter is working its way toward a resolution, due in large part to the guardian involved in the cases, George Marlette of Rustic Drive. Marlette served as Town Moderator for 12 years, making him somewhat well known around town.

A longtime resident, Marlette is an attorney who specializes in fiduciary law, which is the reason he has chosen to serve as guardian for many young adults with special needs over the years. He says he does all the work pro bono.

Marlette said this is the first time the tuition charges for one of his wards have been forwarded to Cohasset. He said in the past, the town where the student was living picked up the cost. In fact, he said he served as guardian to a young man who moved to at least three different towns during his guardianship, and the charges always went with him.

In his opinion, Marlette said the issues which arose in Cohasset are the result of a misinterpretation of the Department of Education Special Education Regulations, and its understanding of the term "guardian."

"I didn't know the regulations would be interpreted this way," he said.

While in most cases, a guardian is someone a child lives with, Marlette said guardianship can take many shapes and forms. "There are all types of authority and I've held them all," he said. In his opinion, the way the regulation was interpreted in Cohasset's case assumes the student lives with Marlette, which is not the case.

Marlette is currently the "guardian of the person and estate" of a young woman who resides in a rehabilitation facility in Brockton. In 2001, the woman, who at that point lived in Norton, sustained a head injury in an automobile accident which changed her life forever.

When the woman turned 18, she was legally considered an adult, but Marlette said she does not have the full capacity to make decisions for herself. The young woman's parents had divorced and both were seeking custody, and when it was determined they could not come to an agreement, Marlette was appointed by the court to serve as her guardian.

"I accepted the appointment not having the slightest inkling it would affect the town," he said, adding "The court needed to appoint someone to make legal and financial decisions, and I'm considered an expert."

Marlette said part of his role is to work with the treatment center as well as the parents to come up with the best educational plans and therapeutic treatments for her.

A second case of guardianship, which Marlette has recently stepped down from, involves a young woman who is residing in a mental health facility. Marlette was serving as her guardian in order to establish a trust for her and complete her estate planning.

Marlette said it has been frustrating to hear about the charges as a problem that "has come up at the 11th hour," as well as the many rumors around town. "Not only is a lot of the information erroneous, I've taken steps that have saved the day," he said.

Marlette said he tried more than one year ago to bring the matter to the attention of the school district when he heard rumblings that charges related to his situation may fall on Cohasset's shoulders.

Marlette said he tried to contact former Supt. Edward Malvey to tell him about the situation and its potential problems, "But throughout his entire tenure, he never returned my phone calls," Marlette said. From there, Marlette went to the special education office and said he did receive a call back from former Director of Student Services Karen Watts, and he had assumed the matter was going to be cleared up.

However, the Department of Education charged Cohasset and sent the school committee into a panic. "I was surprised at how little information the school committee had," said Marlette, adding once he sat down with former School Committee Chairman Rick Shea and explained the situation, he as well as Supt. Denise Walsh were very helpful in trying to bring the matter to a resolution.

Since then there has been much correspondence between the town and the state, and Marlette has used his legal expertise to help the town with its case. He said he stepped down from his position as guardian in order to help the town in the case of the young woman in the mental health facility. He said the role he played in her case was strictly as financial planner, and any other lawyer could have done the job.

The judge said in this case, the Department of Mental Health will be responsible for paying for the woman's treatment, which would have cost Cohasset $10,000.

However, in the case of the woman with the more significant needs, Marlette said he knew he would not step down from serving as her guardian as it would not be in her best interest. To remedy the situation, he filed a motion to appoint her father as co-guardian of the person, which will give him some level of authority, although not as much as Marlette. It will however put the charges for her treatment, which total $185,000, back on the town of Norton, which is where the woman grew up and was living at the time of the accident, and is where her father lives now. "She's never even been to Cohasset," Marlette said.

Marlette said he has been told a ruling will soon be made official that the town will not be charged for any prospective or retroactive costs associated with either of the young women. The town has not and will not be responsible for paying for either student, he said. Marlette said in addition, he has been informed that the Board of Education is changing its regulations as a result of the case in Cohasset, which could be done as early as May. Cohasset's case has grabbed the attention of the state legislature as well, he said.

As a result of the likely favorable outcome for the town, the school committee was able to reduce its budget by $195,000, therefore decreasing its requested override to $400,000.

Finally ... success! Every time I walk in the door at Fitness Together I feel energized. When I walk out, I just feel good. It doesn't get any better than that! It did not over-sell - it did not make a promise. But it did offer me an opportunity to work with someone to create the personalized program that I had always tried to create on my own. Sure, I went to the gym, and I also have a shelf of books and videos with all the promises that scream from every headline... you know the ones I am talking about. I felt that I must be the only person who failed at all these self-structured programs. The one dimensional approach never worked beyond a week. I realized that if I was going to win at this game, it would take a plan.

ART IN THE BRANCHES

An "Artist in Residence" program, sponsored by the Rockland Trust and offered to local elementary schools, has encouraged a series of art exhibits in seven branch offices of the bank. Art in the Branches features artwork from third and fourth graders in seven South Shore towns and will be on display through April.

Cohasset Deer Hill School work will be shown at the Shaw's branch. Rockland Trust will partner with the South Shore Art Center through July 2005, supporting Art Center events, outreach programs and initiatives.

A great partnership, indeed!

SWIM-DIVE TEAM SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2005 season sign-up for returning swimmers and divers will be held on Saturday May 14 from 9 a.m.-noon at Town Hall.

In addition, The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team is also seeking a highly motivated, responsible individual to assist the coaching staff in swim practices, swim meets and general organization of the swim team. Interested individuals should send qualifications to PO Box 651, Cohasset, MA 02025.

BC HIGH HONORS

Boston College High School announced that the following Cohasset students received honors. Andrew J. Flynn '05 and Thomas J. Chase '08achieved High Honors for the third quarter. For High Honors a student must have at least a 3.80 quality point average.

Christopher P. Barber '05, Patrick T. Kelly '05, Patrick B. Flynn '07, Alexander G. Hunt '07, Alan T. Kershaw '08 and Clifford J. Musto '08 achieved Honors, receiving a Q.P.A. of at least 3.2.

Fantastic work to all of you!

MS WALK, A SUCCESS

According to preliminary estimates from the Central New England chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, the more than 300 participants in last Saturday's Cohasset MS Walk raised in excess of $100,000 to support the fight to end the devastating effects of Multiple Sclerosis.

In addition to hosting the event, Cohasset was well represented in the fund raising effort. Chase's Green Team wishes to thank its Cohasset Corporate Sponsors: Chris de Murrains, Adrian Morris Salon, Richard Striker, M.D., Edward Jones, Flamingoes, Ports & Company, Dean & Hamilton Real Estate, Goodwill Graphics, James Kearney, CPA, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, Village Wine & Spirits, Beauty & Main, Karen Kirkendall, Realtor, and Rawson Merrigan & Merrigan, LLC.

PSO TELETHON

Mark your calendars for Wednesday, May 4 at 7 p.m. on local cable channel #22 for the Second Annual Cohasset PSO LIVE Telethon. This year, the Cohasset PSO will be adding an on-line auction component to compliment the Telethon. The on-line auction will run from May 1-6You can go to www.psotelethon.cmarket.com . Keep checking for all of the latest information regarding the Telethon!

PROJECT SAFEGUARD

The Cohasset School Department and Project Safeguard announce that the 2005 Spring Summit for seventh-graders and their parents will be held on Wednesday May 4, in the middle-high school auditorium from 7:50 to 11:50 am.

Results of a recent survey of Cohasset Middle School students examining student pressure and risky behavior will be addressed by health-care professionals. Motivational speakers, health professionals, educators, and special drug ambassadors will present at this event. The day will also include role-playing and workgroup sessions to help students and parents gain hands-on experience in addressing current pressures. Valuable, practical information will be provided to both students and parents to help support our students in making productive and healthy choices in their lives. For more information about the event, contact Nancy Oddleifson, fiveodds@aol.com or Sheila Toomey at toomey@comcast.net.

SOARING TO EAGLE

Brian Pratt is going for his Eagle rank in Boy Scouts which is the highest rank in Boy Scouting. Brian would like to thank all of the people who have made donations to his project to date but he needs more donations. His project is to improve the Beechwood ballpark by repairing and repainting the existing benches, as well as adding new benches so the whole team and spectators will be able to sit. As many of you know first hand, there isn't much room for parents to sit. Brian is looking for donations. They can be mailed directly to him with checks made out to Brian Pratt/Eagle Project 541 Beechwood St. Brian can be reached for comments and/or questions at 781-383-2675 or 339-788-0317.

POST PROM UPDATE

Parents are planning the Class of 2005 Post Prom Event which we be held on Friday, May 27 at the CMHS directly following the senior prom. 'See-through' harbor fence tops the list ed to date.

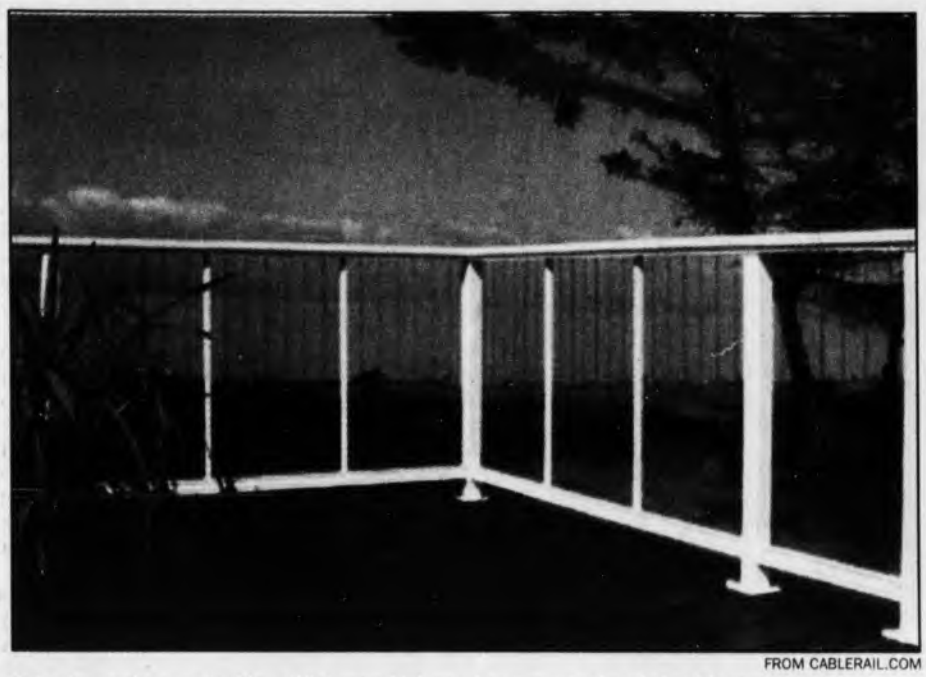
She said a cable rail fence with vertical steel cables, which against a seascape are almost invisible, could be the answer. The posts can be made of a variety of materials and can be painted various colors and will be highly visible, but the cables between the posts will look like open space while providing a barrier.

"It's somewhat traditional and allows people to look out onto the ocean," said Ralph Dormitzer who liked the new fencing.

Player said the cost for the new fence would be comparable to the fencing options the town had looked at before, which would be roughly $150 per foot to install. When it is all said and done, Player said the project would cost the town roughly $45,000.



Dick Karoff, 19 Border St., said he would like to see a rendering of the proposed fence presented to the public to give people a real feel for what it will look like.

Sullivan took that idea a bit further and asked Player if she would be able to bring in two sections of fence to be put on display at Town Hall. Player said she would make some phone calls, but the company is based out of California and it may cost money to obtain samples.

Player said if this is the direction the town wants to go in, variances will not be needed and construction can begin in the fall. That would mean the project would go out to bid this summer and construction would begin after Labor Day, providing there are no objections from the conservation commission.

"This fence would avoid a long process," she said.

Flash back: The fencing along Border Street is taking center stage because the seawall and walkway that run along the harbor from the Atlantica parking lot to the Mill River Marine Boatyard site need to be refurbished. Pedestrians heavily traverse the walkway along the top of the stone seawall, which has begun to fall apart. Temporary repairs were made to the seawall in the 1990s but more needs to be done. Past Town Meetings appropriated a total of $40,000 for studies and preliminary engineering and design; last fall's Dec. 6 special Town Meeting appropriated $600,000 for final engineering, design and repair.*

The stretch of harbor fence along Border Street between the Atlantica parking lot and the Mill River Marine boatyard has to be replaced. But town officials want to make sure the new fence doesn't alter the character of the area.

"SHE THINKS I'M FUNNY AGAIN"

I used to really crack her up with my jokes. But, over the years, my comic routines seemed to get a little tired with her. She did ask me to repeat a lot so we went to Mass Audiology for a free hearing test. Before the exam, they asked her lots of questions. Come to find out, she was having trouble hearing a lot of things! Who knew that she couldn't hear my great punchlines? Now, she hears great! And, I seem to be funny again.

Pam Wilson secures the canine vote, as Phoenix, shows his support for her school committee candidacy, while Maria Kennedy talks with fellow Wilson supporters.

Koed, Vanderweil, Wilson win

first time in recent memory, the board of selectmen — that also includes Michael Sullivan, Rob Spofford and Ralph Dormitzer — will be all male.

Debbie Shadd finished with 1,115 votes, 164 behind Vanderweil's 1,279 and 311 fewer than Koed's 1,426. Ronnie McMorris did not seek a fourth term.

Pam Wilson edged out Leonara "Lee" Jenkins by 33 votes to fill the remaining one-year, unexpired term on the school committee. (Chartis Tebbetts resigned from the school board in February with one year left on her term).

Wilson said this was her first try for elective office and she found the process to be a fair and open one.

"I am very excited about my new position, and look forward to having a positive impact on our schools," she said.

Jenkins said while she was disappointed to have lost, she felt her candidacy made a difference. Two citizen petition articles that she backed at Town Meeting passed and will require regular reports on all budgets and funds.

The dearth of races didn't diminish excitement in this election which drew roughly 43 percent of the town's 5,136 registered voters to the polls.

"My candidacy changed the tenor of this season's campaign dialogue," she said, noting it brought attention to "glaring problems in the budget." She said positive changes can be affected within the school committee and she hopes this opportunity is not missed with a return to "business as usual."

"The taxpayers and students deserve better than that," Jenkins said.

Alfred Slanetz, who ran unopposed for the three-year school committee seat, took a sample ballot home Saturday night as a souvenir. He said he was looking forward to working with Wilson and the rest of the school committee.

He also praised Jenkins, whom he said ran an "excellent campaign." "I hope we have her helping us as we try to improve the schools," Slanetz said.

Ted Carroll won the most write-ins (131 votes) for an open seat on the recreation commission.

The remaining offices on the ballot were uncontested.

Nevertheless, the dearth of races didn't diminish excitement in this election which drew roughly 43 percent of the town's 5,136 registered voters to the polls, although some citizens thought the ballot would also include an override vote.

This week selectmen set a special election for Saturday, May 21, for a $400,000 override to cover a deficit in the fiscal 2006 school budget and $13.2 million debt exclusion for sewers.

The tension in the air was palatable Saturday night, as Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, hosts of the local cable-TV show "Our Town," provided live coverage of the results from the selectmen's office upstairs at Town Hall where the cable feed is located.

The write-ins for recreation commission held up the final tally giving time for "Our Town" hosts to interview a range of town officials and local citizens to get their sense on the election and upcoming override votes. At that point the results were still anybody's guess and the room was jammed with candidates and their campaign workers, including about a handful of kids wearing T-shirts backing Wilson, one of the school committee candidates.

But Town Moderator George Marlette, who did not seek reelection, put to rest any speculation when he read the results and swore in those who were elected including his successor, Dan Evans.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

'Our Town' is a hit

Election night hasn't been this exciting in years.

When you think about it, April 9 could have been a real "yawn" with only two races for public office and no override on the ballot.

But on the contrary, the turnout at roughly 43 percent, was pretty good. Admittedly, a small percentage of that may have been due to a handful of uniformed voters who came to the polls thinking there was an override question but, nevertheless, they participated and that's a positive.

The "frosting on the cake" for us as the polls closed Saturday night was the live coverage provided by the "Our Town" team: hosts, Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo, and Derry & Jim Schwantner, who work behind the cameras.

What a wonderful thing!

We can't think of another town in the area that can boast "play-by-play" coverage on election night. In Cohasset live TV coverage was a regular occurrence during the 10 years that Wigmore Pierson hosted "Pierson to Person." When "Wig" decided to call it a day – his absence from our TV screens created a real vacuum. I'm not sure we realized the gift that program was until we no longer had it.

Now, Our Town has picked up the baton. The new local, cable-TV program provided an invaluable service this election season by inviting all the candidates to appear in the weeks leading up to April 9 and answer some pretty tough questions.

The program's hosts and camera crew – who are all volunteers – were at Town Hall on Saturday as a crowd gathered to hear the results. The write-ins for the recreation commission delayed things for about an hour, so as good TV personalities always do, Mark and Pat "ad-libbed" and called various audience members (including yours truly) to the microphone.

It was fun and we all owe Our Town a big "thank you" for the energy and enthusiasm, the show has put into the election and Town Meeting, which the program also covered live.

We also want to thank George Marlette for his years as moderator and for being such a huge proponent of "live" local coverage.

Too often "media" is a catch-all word encompassing everything from supermarket tabloids to "bloggers" on the internet to the entire spectrum of talk radio.

We're proud to be part of the "local" media that now includes Our Town.

In a related matter, we'd like to thank the candidates who participated in our Question of the Week. It's a service we started about 15 years ago. That year Ellery Clark, who ran for library trustee, was the only candidate who answered our questions and he lost! Nevertheless, we stuck with it and can proudly say here at the Cohasset Mariner, we've had 100 percent participation from candidates in contested races ever since.

We congratulate those who won or lost in Saturday's election. We hope Debbie Shadd, candidate for selectman, and Lee Jenkins, who ran for the school committee, will continue to stay involved. They both ran excellent campaigns, and judging from the number of their votes, a lot of people liked what they had to say and believed they could make a difference.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Shadd appreciates support

TO THE EDITOR:

Congratulations to Fred Koed and Gary Vanderweil on their election to the Board of Selectmen. I wish them success as they confront the many difficult issues facing the Town.

I want to thank the citizens of Cohasset for their support of my candidacy. Although I fell short on election day, I enjoyed debating and discussing the issues with the many townspeople I met during the course of the campaign.

Thank you also to the organizers of two wonderful Town election traditions, the Beechwood Church Election Supper and the Luncheon at the Council on Elder Affairs, for providing a forum for the candidates to meet voters.

I am grateful to Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo and their crew at Our Town cable TV show for sponsoring the Selectmen's debate this year, and to the Cohasset Mariner for providing a forum for written debate on the issues.

Finally, I would like to thank my campaign chairman, Sam Pease, my treasurer, Nan Roth, my entire campaign committee, and the many other wonderful supporters who worked tirelessly on my behalf.

Walkers and joggers

TO THE EDITOR:

Kudos to Police Chief Jim Hussey for his column on pedestrian safety. Here are some comments: there are three kinds of pedestrians:

- The first kind walks or jogs on the left of the road, facing the traffic, as recommended by the authorities. They can see oncoming traffic and take evasive action if a vehicle seems threatening
- The second kind walks or jogs on the right, back to oncoming traffic, blissfully unaware that some drivers have poor vision, are under the influence, are easily distracted, are talking on their cell phone, may be blinded by the sun or (at night, by oncoming lights), may be poor judge of side clearance, are inclined to pull to the extreme right when faced with an oncoming vehicle, etc. A few compound the risk by walking or jogging in the dark while wearing dark clothing.
- The third kind , a variant of the second, walks or jogs on the right, back to traffic, but senses that this is unsafe. Some keep glancing nervously behind them, but haven't the cognition to figure what to do about it (which is to cross over to the other side, and walk or jog facing the traffic)

The first kind benefits from the fact that their faces are more noticeable to oncoming drivers than are the backs of those who walk or jog on the right with their back to traffic, and of course they are in a position to see a threat from an oncoming vehicle and to do something about it. But it is the second and third kind that generate the most statistics about injury and fatality.

'A note of thanks'

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Mariner for providing a forum to discuss the pertinent issues and illuminate the different perspectives of the candidates. Thanks to the staff of Our Town for the opportunity to reach the residents in a different milieu. Thank you to the 1,028 people who voted for me.

I want to offer a special thank you to those who had the courage of their convictions to have a sign in their yard, advise me, endorse me and be at the polls making phone calls and holding signs. And I am especially grateful to Dick Barrow, Mary Edmonds, Edythe Ford, Alex Koines, Karen Quigley and my husband, Leland, who stood by me from the very beginning.

Cohasset teachers make the grade

By Rachael Brewin
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Members of the Cohasset Teacher's Association gathered at the Plymouth County Education Association Annual Awards Banquet Monday to recognize fellow colleagues for their outstanding commitment, dedication, and service to teaching. More than 500 teachers from Plymouth County attended the banquet. Anne Waas, vice president of the Massachusetts Teacher's Association, was among the attendees acknowledging these distinguished professionals. Each year the Plymouth County Education Association receives hundreds of nominations for teachers who have demonstrated first-rate qualities above and beyond the responsibilities in the classroom. This year, nearly 30 members of Cohasset Teacher's Association celebrated and recognized the efforts and commitment made by their colleagues.

Anthony Rolfe, seventh-grade social studies teacher and head football coach of the Cohasset Skippers; William Kite, high school English teacher; Allison Sullivan, first-grade teacher; and Anne McCarthy, the librarian at the Joseph Osgood Elementary School were presented with the Honor Award in recognition of significant service, commitment to the profession, community, and the association. Each of these teachers has shown extraordinary command of their subject matters, as well as devotion to the community and to the students they teach.

The Rookie of the Year award, presented to individuals with one-to-five years teaching experience who have implemented particularly innovative ideas and programs in the classroom, was awarded to two science teachers. These two teachers engage students in critical thinking skills as they present challenging laboratory experiments and new learning experiences. These well rounded rookies also work with students in extra-curricular activities and are currently pursuing degrees in higher education. This year's Rookie of the Year Award was presented to seventh-grade science teacher Lisa Mullen, and to high school science teacher, David Ames.

The P.C.E.A. also presented seventh-grade English teacher Marie Schleiff and seventh-grade math teacher Elizabeth Beatson with Honorary Life Membership Awards for 30 years or more of service. High school English teacher William Kite who will retire in June, was also honored with this award.

Maura Devin, Marie Schleiff, Elizabeth Beatson, and William Kite were also recognized with Retirement Certificates for 25 years of service in teaching.

Rachael Brewin, who submitted this article on behalf of the Cohasset Teacher's Association, is an eighth-grade special education teacher.

Juvenile Court public awareness night

Chief Justice Martha P. Grace of the Juvenile Court Department announced on Wednesday, May 25, a statewide public awareness night will take place. The Juvenile Court Department consists of 11 divisions with 42 juvenile court sites throughout the Commonwealth. Each division of the Juvenile Court will sponsor an awareness night at one of their local juvenile court sites.

The purpose of the program is to give an opportunity for the citizens of each county to learn about the mission of the Juvenile Court, case types and conduct of juvenile court proceedings. Chief Justice Grace states, "that the very nature of the work that is done in the Juvenile Court is confidential and limits the openness of conducting juveniles court proceedings. The Juvenile Court Department's Public Awareness Night is an effort to reach out to the public so the public will have an opportunity to learn and acquire a better understanding about the work that is done in the Juvenile Court."

The program begins at 7 p.m. and ends at 9 p.m. on May 25, at the Norfolk County Juvenile Court, 55 Allied Drive, Dedham. There is no cost to the participants. All residents of Norfolk County are welcome to apply. Class size will be limited to 40. Presentations are made by Judges, Magistrates, Probation Officers, Court Officers and representatives from the District Attorney's Office and the Norfolk County Bar Association.

Applications are available at: Juvenile Clerk's Office, Quincy District Court; One Dennis Ryan Parkway, Quincy, MA 02169, 617-376-7505.

Applications are due by Wednesday, April 27, at the Juvenile Court Clerk Magistrates' Office, 55 Allied Drive, Dedham, MA 02026.

For more information call James Poirier, Clerk Magistrate at 781-329-1500.

Tree flagging along the right-of-way

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

The flagged trees, marked with black and red plastic tape, will not be cut. Only the trees in the right-of-way between the flagged trees will be removed.

News flash — On Friday, April 7 the MBTA notified the Town that it was going to begin flagging trees along the right-of-way immediately. This is in preparation for the clearing that will follow. Originally, the MBTA was going to wait until May 1 for tree marking, since they cannot do cutting in most of Cohasset until after the Spring vernal pool season ends. By marking the right of way trees now, rather than waiting, the MBTA gets a jump on the marking process. Tree clearing will not begin until after May 1.

Remember, the way in which the MBTA will mark the trees is very different from what you might expect. The flagged trees, marked with black and red plastic tape, will not be cut. Only the trees in the right-of-way between the flagged trees will be removed. So, if trees that you believe are on your property are flagged, that's OK – they are on your property and will not be cut.

In the same vein, at each railroad crossing the trees and underbrush will be removed in a wider swath for increased visibility. It is very important when cars approach each grade crossing that drivers are able to see clearly down the tracks as an added safety measure. So, when the MBTA does mark the areas for clearing, the width of the clearing will be much wider at the crossings than at other places along the right of way. This will affect all residents with properties adjacent to a railroad crossing.

If you have any questions after the trees are flagged, or for any other reason, please give us a call or send an email to us.

Town parking lot —You have probably noticed that the MBTA's work to excavate and document the 1800's vintage roundhouse / turntable has been complete for several months now. However, the area has been only temporarily backfilled. Unfortunately, the spring rains have not been kind to the backfill and there are numerous ruts. When it rains it gets very muddy. The dirt from the area washes over the balance of the parking lot and makes the whole area look awful. It doesn't make much sense to have the DPW sweep the lot knowing that the next rain will only mess it up again. We have asked the MBTA to at least do a temporary paving job. We hope to have this resolved shortly.

HEALTH NOTES

The flu and other potential threats

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Some defibrillators have never left their shipping cartons and a program for Town-wide training to use them is not in place.

As a part of their effort to protect citizens from the common flu strains, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) is trying to determine what it would take for the avian flu to become a super bug that could kill millions of people.

According to Betsy McKay of the Wall Street Journal, the Atlanta-based agency has launched a series of risky experiments to simulate the mixing and matching of genes from the H5N1 avian flu virus that public-health experts fear could turn avian flu into a pandemic, and H3N2, a common human flu virus, the strain behind most recent human flu outbreaks.

In a laboratory even more secure than the CDC's anthrax labs, CDC scientists hope to find out how dangerous such a so-called reassortant virus might be. Many health authorities say that an outbreak of flu similar to the Spanish flu pandemic in 1918, which killed over 45 million people worldwide, is only a matter of time.

Flu is only one of the threats to our town. It's been noted that over 40,000 aircraft fly over Cohasset per year in a flight path from Logan. It is estimated that a breach in the earthen Aaron River dam would cover North Scituate waist high with water. These threats, and those like the Blizzard of '78, although remote are not sufficiently rare that they can be completely ignored.

Accordingly, the Town has an Emergency Plan. Oh, yes, the Emergency Plan. What's happened to the emergency planning that was so important and touted after September 11? Well, like most problems, the solution for which has been to throw money at it; we've seen posturing, politicking and a paucity of progress.

The State supplied us with several enormous documents requesting data about personnel and their duties in the event of an emergency. We, as a Town, have dutifully responded and placed these documents on the shelf. In order for this activity to pay off for towns like Cohasset, officials in Town need to use a small amount of time to consider what actions are needed in an emergency and how they should participate. The plan should then be evaluated in an exercise.

Subsequently, in a continuing series of meetings, emergency management designated officials should discuss their proposed activities with those responsible for coordinating emergency threats. If changes are needed, they must assign personnel within their area of responsibility to tasks to develop or obtain these changes and transmit them to the emergency planners. It's difficult to provide even a small amount of continuing effort, but very necessary. Otherwise these tons of paper sent out by the State become just boilerplate.

With the Town Meeting, and the recent elections, a number of agencies in Town have been provided with new leadership. Now is the time for all organizations to respond with more enthusiasm to the Town's potential needs in the event of an emergency. An example of where more attention is needed is defibrillators. Some defibrillators have never left their shipping cartons and a program for Town-wide training to use them is not in place. Nor has any listing of defibrillators been circulated. Also, attendance at emergency preparedness meetings has been sporadic, and delegate response to attend has not always been forthcoming.

It's not a huge effort to identify a preparedness network and put it in place, and the payoff may never come. But it still needs to be done, just in case.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

LIBRARY CORNER

Patriots' Day — The library will be closed Monday, April 18.

Book Discussion Group — Join us Friday, April 29 at 10 a.m. for coffee and discussion of "Truth and Beauty" by Ann Patchett, the author of "Bel Canto." Registration in advance is required. Call Judy Simons at 781-383-1348.

Upcoming Author Events —Reserve these dates: May 5 and June 21. Richard Marinick, author of "Boyos" will discuss and sign copies of his book on Thursday, May 5 at 10 a.m. in the library's Meeting Room. Marinick grew up running with the Southie gangs during the Whitey Bulger era and learned to write during a 10-year prison stretch. The event is sponsored by Buttonwood Books.

On Tuesday, June 21 at 10 a.m., author Margaret McLean will discuss her book, "Under Oath," a swiftly-paced, first-degree murder and conspiracy trial in Charlestown, Massachusetts. All are welcome.

Independent Film Series —Mark your calendars for the May 26 film night featuring "Wilby Wonderful." Scandal rocks the quiet town of Wilby Island threatening to change life for the residents forever. The film will be shown in the Meeting Room at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Artist Exhibit — Nancy Sargent Howell's paintings will be on display in the library until April 30. Her works are included in the collections of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston and the Brigham and Women's Hospital, as well as in numerous private and corporate collections throughout the U.S. and Europe. She says of her work, "Although much of my work is painted outdoors with the goal of capturing the beauty of nature...after I have gathered information "en plein air," I frequently go back to my studio to work on ways of putting my personal experience into the subject. These paints often evolve with simpler shapes, less texture and brighter colors, giving a more abstract feeling to the work."

Becky Haletky of Pembroke is celebrating her 25th year as a professional artist with a retrospective exhibit at the library from May 1 to June 30. Known primarily for her realistic watercolors, Becky has also worked in several other media over the years. The show will include hand-tinted photographs, photo collages, acrylics and watercolors. An opening reception will be held on Sunday, May 1 from 3-5 p.m. in the Meeting Room.

Identity Theft —Visit the Federal Trade Commission's Web site "Take Charge: Fighting Back Against Identity Theft" at www.ftc.gov/bcp/conline/pubs/credit/idtheft.htm for consumer protection information on identity theft.

For children:

Drop-in Music with MamaSteph —Drop-in Music is a lap-sit program held in the Meeting Room, inviting all ages and communities. Children must be accompanied by a caregiver. The dates are on the following Mondays from 10:30-11 a.m.: April 25, May 2, May 9 and May 16.

Story & Craft —Story & Craft is a four-week program for Cohasset children, ages three-to-six and requires registration. Register now, telephone registrations accepted: 781-383-1348. All Story & Craft events will take place on Thursdays at two different times, either 10 a.m. or 1 p.m.

Pizza and Books —This is a book discussion group for students 10-13 and requires registration. This month's Pizza and Books group will be held Tuesday, April 26 from 5:30-6:45 p.m.

Cohasset Dramatic Club: "Annie" — On Thursday, April 28 from 4:30-5:30 p.m., in the library's Meeting Room, the Cohasset Dramatic Club will perform selections from their spring musical, "Annie." Light refreshments will be served.

More information on events, times and registrations is available by logging on to www.cohassetlibrary.org—check the Events Calendar or contact Mrs. Moody at smoody@ocln.org or by calling 781-383-1348.

A pope named Joan

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I read the other day that the late Pope John Paul II was the first non-Italian pope in 455 years so, of course, I had to look him up just for kicks.

In case you're interested, he was Adrian Florensz Dedal, a Dutchman from Utrecht, who took the name Hadrian VI, and spent his whole term fighting a losing battle with Martin Luther on one hand and the Moslem Turks on the other.

Italians hated him for not being Italian. His cardinals hated him probably because each one of them felt he should be pope in his stead. He served one year, eight months, five days before he died — before his time, some theorized.

More importantly, in the process of chasing Hadrian, I came across Pope Joan, who for a number of years was actually thought to have been the first and only woman pope.

I'm sure that I'm not telling many of you guys something new. Pope Joan already appears on at least 970,000 web sites on the rapidly expanding Google search engine and the Catholic Encyclopedia devotes four full pages to "Popess Joan."

J. P. Kirsch, who apparently wrote the article in the Catholic Encyclopedia, thinks the story is a "fable," and so do I. But I'll pass it on anyway.

The definitive version of the Pope Joan story seems to have been written by one Martin Von Troppau, a papal chaplain, who placed her reign in the year 855. He was writing 400 years later which makes it hardly an eyewitness account.

"John the Englishman," he wrote, "reigned for two years, seven month and four days.

"This man, it is claimed, was a woman and when she was a girl, had been taken to Athens by one of her lovers who had dressed her in men's clothing.

"In this fashion she made progress in various branches of knowledge, to the extent that her equal could not be found . . . and because of in Rome a high opinion of her life and erudition, she was elected pope with general approbation.

"But during her papacy she was made pregnant by her companion, and because she did not know exactly when the birth would take place, she produced in a narrow lane between the Colosseum (sic) and San Clemente while she was making her way from St. Peter's to the Lateran.

"It is said that when she died she was buried at that same spot.

"She is not included in the list of holy pontiffs as much for the disgrace as for the fact that she was a woman."

Problem is there was no Pope John until the year 872 and he was not English, but Italian. The first and only English pope, Nicholas Breakspear or Hadrian IV, didn't come along for another 250 years.

An earlier version of the Pope Joan story by a Dominican chronicler named Jean de Mailly placed her reign about the year 1100 and she didn't just die but was tied to a horse by an angry mob, dragged around the city and finally stoned to death.

"In the 14th and 15th centuries," says the Catholic Encyclopedia, "this popess was already counted as an historical personage, whose existence no one doubted." And today? "This alleged popess is a pure figment of the imagination."

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Seeking items for benefit yard sale — The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee hopes that, once again, generous donations to its fourth annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh, III Memorial Scholarship Fund are waiting to be discovered in attics, basements and garages.

The committee has been awarding this scholarship to a deserving Cohasset graduating senior since 1978. Several years ago, committee members held their first yard sale to held finance the scholarship fund. Because of the tremendous amount of community-wide support they received, the Cohasset Democrats have made their yard sale an annual event. This year's yard sale will be held on Saturday, April 30 and, as always, all proceeds go towards the scholarship fund. Everyone is asked to find something to donate that may be sold.

"We so much appreciate the great support we've received from the entire community. The people of Cohasset have always been so generous and this is a very worthy cause," said Agnes McCann, chairman. If you have donations, wish to volunteer some time, or want further information, call McCann at 383-0222.

TOWN MEETING

Demolition delay bylaw falls flat

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Preserving the town's character," has become one of many slogans for Cohasset, and proponents of a Town Meeting article that was intended to protect historic buildings believed it would have helped that mission along.

But for the second year in a row, a "demolition delay" bylaw floated at the Annual Town Meeting did not pass muster with voters.

Last year, the historical commission presented the bylaw to Town Meeting as a non-zoning bylaw. The bylaw is similar to one currently in place in Hingham, which can put plans to demolish a structure on hold for six months to allow time to consider whether a building can be restored and see what other alternatives to demolition are available. However, after some discussion, voters chose to stop discussion and indefinitely postpone the article which would allow it to be brought back in the future.

This year, the bylaw was on the warrant as a citizens' petition, and as a zoning, rather than a non-zoning bylaw, to allow the Building Inspector to legally enforce it. However, discussion yielded essentially the same results, as the April 2 annual Town Meeting defeated the article.

Proponent, Rick Swanborg of the master plan committee, reminded voters that 75 percent of those who responded to a survey sent out by his committee said they "strongly agree" historic buildings should be protected. He also said the train will add to development pressure.

The Historical Commission had intended to submit the article again this year but when the citizens stepped forward, the commission found it was not necessary to present an article because they both intended to accomplish the same goal.

Nathaniel Palmer, a proponent, said the bylaw would only stop demolition for a time to encourage homeowners to work with the historical commission to preserve the structure.

"Just as the name implies, this is a delay," he said. While demolition is on hold, the historical commission can inform owners of the benefits of preservation, including receiving tax credits, he said.

Peter Pratt said the majority of the planning board recommended the bylaw as well.

"It's time to start thinking of protecting our historical assets outside the common district," he said, adding right now, any homeowner "Can take anything and knock it flat with a permit Monday morning."

However, planning board member Bob Sturdy, who represented the minority vote of his board, said he and chairman Al Moore believe, "This is well-intended, but it's a real burden to the homeowner."

"If you own a piece of property, you have the rights to it," Sturdy said.

Sturdy said this year, his house will turn 100 years old and he has lived in the house for one-third of that time. He said one of the previous owners of his home was listed on the social register at one time in Cohasset. "Is that historically significant? I don't think so," he said, but the bylaw leads itself to interpretation. "This creates a problem, and it's unnecessary delay and obstruction," he said.

However, Palmer said the bylaw is not intended to "Put any undue burden on a homeowner," and said "Most people who own a historic home know it."

"We're looking to avoid teardowns without notifying anyone but the building inspector," Palmer said.

Murray Campbell, 75 Old Pasture Road, said while he supports the article, he believes Sturdy has a good point. "Not all 100-plus homes are significant. In fact, some of them are just junk," he said.

However, Don Evans, 72 North Main St., said, "I do believe it's well intended, but we all know the road to hell is paved with that."

Evans, who lives in an older home, said, "We don't contemplate taking our house down, we love it, that's why we're there," but added he doesn't think it is sound policy to have a bylaw like the Demolition Delay bylaw in place.

Nan Roth, 7 Highland Ave., agreed with Evans and said in the end, if a homeowner wants to tear down their house, they can do so after six months, and said she doesn't see how the bylaw would accomplish anything "except costing the homeowner money."

Town Meeting agreed and the motion was defeated.

Zoning debate ties up Town Meeting

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Earth removal, land clearing and alteration bylaw

The bylaw sought to regulate clearing, grading, and earth removal associated with residential development

- by restricting the amount of the lot that could be cleared
- by limiting the amount of excavation of soil, gravel or ledge
- by preventing alteration of exposed ledge face
- by restricting the amount of elevation change due to filling

Earth removal and zoning definitions are not usually high on the list of sexy subjects.

But that wasn't the case at the April 2 annual Town Meeting, when debate over two proposed zoning amendments raged on for roughly 2-1/2 hours.

At the crux of the issue, according to the articles' proponents, is the preservation of Cohasset's small-town character which is being forever changed by "McMansionization."

But opponents, who ultimately prevailed, saw the articles as adding unnecessary complexity and bureaucracy to the zoning bylaw.

Mark DeGiacomo, 59 Beach St., one of the citizen proponents, said the combination of high land value and one of the least restrictive zoning bylaws in the area have resulted in land being built on that "no one ever thought would be."

He noted with more sewer projects and the Greenbush train coming through town, development pressures would only increase.

"The face of Cohasset is changing," DeGiacomo said. "If you care about the character of the town, I ask your support for this narrowly drafted bylaw that is minimally restrictive."

DeGiacomo pointed to a mailing by developer David Walsh, who is trying to build a home off Beach Street, as an example of an out-of-town developer "who doesn't love Cohasset for the reasons we love Cohasset."

He explained the new bylaw would only affect two areas: the building of a residential home on a vacant lot and tearing down an existing home to build a new one. It would send those projects – if they exceeded certain limits – to the planning board for a special permit. That way, the abutters would have a chance to weigh in early in the process.

DeGiacomo said this bylaw would help prevent situations, such as 3 Jerusalem Lane – a huge house that replaced a ranch and dwarfed other homes on the street.

He said the bylaw would not affect a homeowner who wants to blast ledge, fill or grade, or put an addition on their existing home. It would also not affect commercial buildings.

"That's it – it affects vacant lots and rebuilding of teardowns," he said. "We need to adjust the bylaw with the times."

But opponents said the wording was too vague and would add unnecessary regulation.

While a majority of the planning board supported the article, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore and member Bob Sturdy did not. Moore said he didn't feel comfortable with the bylaw and thought it might "have unintended consequences."

Woody Chittick, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, said the language was too vague and that bylaws need to be "terribly precise."

"This is solving a problem with a baseball bat that could be accomplished more delicately," he said.

A majority of the advisory committee agreed with Chittick but selectmen supported the article 4-1.

Tom Callahan, a former selectman and conservation commissioner, supported the bylaw change.

"There's no such thing as a perfect bylaw," he said. "This would not stop development. This will result in better projects."

Opponents expressed worry they wouldn't be able to take down trees or build a garden without a special permit from the planning board.

Diana Kornet said the special permit would be triggered by removal of 10 cubic yards of soil – roughly the size of a 9-foot long by 10-foot wide by 3-foot deep basement. "This could have big ripple effects," she said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan, who had the minority opinion on his board, said the bylaw was "not good policy."

"Let's make sure we're not taking rights away from ourselves, to impose restrictions on developers," Sullivan said.

The article failed to get the two-thirds vote needed for bylaw changes.

In a telephone interview this week, DeGiacomo said people have approached him asking the article be brought back next year. He said some voters at Town Meeting "were clearly not listening." "The bylaw would not prohibit building, it would only set forth some guidelines."

'Housekeeping' article fails to pass

A related citizens petition that also didn't pass muster would have amended the zoning bylaw by adding some specific language regarding building on preexisting, non-conforming or "under-sized" lots.

Preexisting means the lot size was OK before the town adopted its zoning bylaws.

Essentially the amendment would have triggered a special permit hearing for construction on preexisting, undersized lots. Tom Callahan, one of the proponents, noted this amendment would prevent cases such as 3 Jerusalem Lane. The bylaw would require a special permit for expansion/extension or enlargement that increases the size of the footprint, width or bulk of an existing building or structure.

Building Commissioner Robert Egan, who opposed the article, said most Cohasset homes are on non-conforming lots. "That's nothing to be ashamed of," he said. "It simply means your home was built to conform to the rules in place at the time."

Egan said if the amendment passed he estimated 15-20 applications for special permits a month. He said in the 1980s, the town decided a homeowner could change non-conforming structures by right, as long as they didn't increase the non-conformity. "If this passes today, I predict we'll be back here a year from now rescinding the bylaw," Egan said.

Proponents said the amendment would reduce hassles for developers and neighbors and cut down on legal fees. They said the change would make the current bylaw clear in light of existing state law, so there would be no misunderstanding as to what could be built on non-conforming lots minus a special permit.

After considerable debate from opponents and proponents, the article failed to win a two-thirds majority.

Village revitalization project could become a reality at last

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After years of discussion surrounding the Village Revitalization Project, the town may be ready to take action and put a "solid" project out to bid. Much money has been spent with redesigns, causing changes along the way, but selectmen voted to move ahead with a phased construction schedule.

"Obviously it's less than people wanted, but nevertheless, it's a good project," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who is also on the Cohasset Revitalization Review Committee. "I think it'll be very attractive."

The revitalization review committee held a public hearing April 7 to solicit input on the project, and as a result, Dormitzer compiled a list of recommendations for selectmen to consider.

At the forefront of the discussion was the importance of taking action soon as the PWED grant (Public Works Economic Development) for the project is slated to expire May 30. The town will be asking for an extension, but it can only receive that extension if a firm schedule for construction is in place. The town must prove it needs the additional time for completion of the project, not planning.

To ensure the project comes in on budget, it will be completed in phases. The "base project" will be completed first, which includes making improvements to Depot Court at Pleasant Street to South Main Street, and then South Main Street south to approximately Attorney Henderson's office. The second phase would include Elm Street from South Main Street to Brook Street. The third phase would include South Main Street from the end of the base project to the Cohasset Historical Society building. Phase four would cover Ripley Road from the end of the base project to past the post office.

> "Obviously it's less than people wanted, but nevertheless, it's a good project."
> — Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

There is roughly $1.35 million in grants remaining for the project which includes about $1.2 million of the $1.5 million PWED grant and a $165,900 transportation grant for the "St. Stephen's sidewalk" at the foot of the ledge outcropping at the top of South Main Street. The town has spent upwards of $300,000 in design fees. It hired the Waterfield Design Group for the project and the company has submitted several "redesigns" ranging from bump-outs at corners and crosswalks to no bumpouts, depending on direction from selectmen.

Other modifications to the plans which will ensure the project comes in on budget include:

- Using bituminous asphalt for sidewalks
- Using pressed concrete for crosswalks and eliminate speed bumps and pavers
- Elimination of the bump-out on South Main Street opposite the pump site
- Elimination of the Red Lion Inn stone wall from project scope
- Elimination of bollards at the pump site and pocket park at the corner of Depot Court and South Main Street
- Using brick in the pocket parks at Depot/South Main and Elm Street/South Main
- Shortening the crosswalk from the pump site across Elm Street

Dormitzer said DPW Superintendent Carl Sestito, who was present at the hearing, was happy to see the bituminous asphalt sidewalks from a long-term maintenance standpoint. Both Police Chief James Hussey and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said they were satisfied from a safety standpoint as well.

Flashback

The $1.8 million Village Revitalization project is being paid for through grants, not local property taxes. Streetscape improvements have been sidetracked over the years due to disagreement over how much and exactly what should be done to revitalize the village area. The project was put out to bid last winter, but only one company responded and the bid was too high.

The review committee has been charged with looking over and "tweaking" plans for the downtown area, submitted by the Waterfield Design Group, consulting engineers based out of Winchester. The Waterfield engineers were hired by Former Town Manager Mark Haddad in the spring of 2002. The goal of the project is to update the streets and sidewalks of the downtown area, making the Village more aesthetically pleasing.

Former Cohasset teacher gets nod as CMHS principal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

This fall, students at Cohasset Middle High School will have a new captain at the helm as Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh has appointed Joel Antolini to serve as the school's new principal.

Antolini, who currently serves as principal of Holbrook Junior-Senior High School, will replace Jack DeLorenzo. Although a contract had not been signed at the time of the announcement, Walsh said Antolini is slated to come on board July 1. She added she hopes he will be able to attend the next school committee meeting, slated for May 5.

Walsh gave Antolini high marks, and said the district is very fortunate to have him back in Cohasset. Antolini served as a technology education teacher as well as track coach in Cohasset from September 1991 through June 1995. "He looks forward to 'coming home'," she said.

Walsh announced the new appointment at the April 7 school committee meeting and outlined the search process which began in January. Although the search process is finished for the position of principal, there is still an opening for a full-time assistant principal for the middle school and a full-time curriculum coordinator. Search committees for each of the three positions were appointed and Walsh served as chairman of all three.

Walsh said the principal search committee first met Feb. 14 to screen candidates, and interviews were conducted Feb. 28 and March 1 & 2. The weeks of March 7 & 14, site visits were conducted and reference checks were completed. Members of the principal search committee included Walsh; Assistant Principal Mike Gill, who served as co-chairman; Athletic Director Ron Ford; Director of Special Services Linda Gill; parents, Joan Allen and Elaine Breslow; and teachers, David Magnussen and Maureen Duffy. Walsh said student representatives were present when the candidates visited the school, "but we didn't want to take away from their night commitments," so the students were not required to attend committee meetings.

Walsh said from the pool of roughly 19 applications, the field was narrowed down to nine, and then to three. Candidates visited Cohasset, and committee members visited the towns where candidates currently work. After the information was collected, "They felt very strongly we would have been lucky to have any one of them," Walsh said.

Walsh said while it was a difficult decision, she felt Antolini was the best suited for the job. She said he will become an active participant in the search for a new middle-school assistant principal and possibly the curriculum coordinator.

Makes waves

Longtime resident and member of the Cohasset High School class of 1968 Edward Goff, 4 Ledgewood Dr., attended the April 7 school committee meeting to voice his displeasure that interim Principal Jack DeLorenzo, who did not attend, was not appointed to the permanent post.

"I'm perplexed at why we're looking for a new principal," he said, noting Walsh had said she was pleased with DeLorenzo's performance. Goff sent his three children through the Cohasset school system and in that time he has gotten to know DeLorenzo well. He said DeLorenzo worked closely with two of his children — one served as Student Council president and the other was class president — and he doesn't understand why a search was conducted for a new principal, when DeLorenzo is doing a great job and wants to stay. "We shouldn't be at this point," he said.

Goff asked — with the school budget turmoil, a school committee member's resignation, and recent changes in administration including a new principal at Deer Hill, a new superintendent of schools, and changes in administrative positions, "Where's the continuity?"

"Jack's been here 19 years and he's thrown out like the trash. I find it offensive. Truly offensive," he said.

School committee member Rick Flynn agreed DeLorenzo has done a terrific job for the school department, but said it is important to understand the history of how the new appointment came to be.

Flynn explained last year, former Supt. Edward Malvey spoke to DeLorenzo, who was slated to retire in June, and asked fi he would be willing to stay in Cohasset and take over as principal because Michael Jones' resignation came at such a late point in the school year. (Jones accepted a job in Lexington).

Flynn said DeLorenzo knew the position was going to be an interim position and a search would be conducted for a permanent principal. "The plan all along was to find a replacement for Dr. Jones," he said. He said a search committee was formed as has always been done, "and they did their job. They found a candidate who can move us forward," he said.

Flynn said while DeLorenzo has been in the school system a long time and is someone "we all know and like," the superintendent has made her decision.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said while other residents have also come forward to support DeLorenzo, said it is Walsh's decision to choose whomever she would like. "It's her turn to start a playing field for her team," she said.

Members of the search committee are prohibited from sharing names of the applicants who participated in the search process, and DeLorenzo, who has been with Cohasset schools for 19 years, was unable to be reached for comment before the Mariner went to press. He did, however, say in a prior interview that he was very disappointed he was not given the chance to continue on in his role and would have made the long term commitment Walsh is looking for.

Although DeLorenzo may have had the option of being "put in the pile," Goff said with everything he has done for the district, "He should have been offered the job."

Emergency plan prepares town well

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Situated directly under a flight path for Logan Airport, Cohasset has recognized the need to be prepared for the emergency situation that would arise should a plane ever crash. In fact, the town is prepared for many different emergency situations including everything from biological attacks to the more mundane coastal flooding and snowstorms.

Thanks to the town's Office of Emergency Management, which has done everything in its power to ensure the town meets safety directives put forth by the Department of Public Health and the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency, Cohasset is prepared for whatever might come this way.

The town has had a plan for emergencies in place for many years. However, in December 2003 a new, updated version of a Comprehensive Emergency Management Plan was submitted to the state. In fact, the town's plans were so good, an official from MEMA contacted then Town Manager Mark Haddad to inform him Cohasset's report was so impressive, the organization plans on using it as a model for other communities. Before that time, the town's emergency plans had not been updated since 1999.

Since the new plans were submitted, members of the town's Office of Emergency Management, including Director Arthur Lehr, Deputy Director Glenn Pratt, as well as Health Agent Joseph Godzik, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln and Police Chief James Hussey, have been meeting every two months to discuss ways to improve upon the town's plans, such as applying for grants and investigating training opportunities for emergency responders.

Pratt said the committee looks forward to working closely with the school department and getting its plans up to date and detailed.

"There are so many things that can happen," said Pratt, adding investing in a plan to ensure the safety of the town is like buying insurance. "You never know when you're going to need it." That is why his group has continually been researching ways to improve the emergency services it could provide, if necessary.

Pratt said this year, the town received a $12,800 grant which was used to purchase radiation detection equipment for the fire department. He said although the government has allocated money for homeland security programs, a town like Cohasset never receives much because it is so small. He said usually, funds are allocated in a way that can have a regional impact, such as purchasing a piece of heavy equipment that can be used by many towns, and he said that type of funding typically goes to a town similar in size to Quincy, rather than a town like Cohasset.

"Cohasset is so small, we don't get much," he said.

But that doesn't discourage the group from trying to obtain any and all funding possible. "We apply for everything that comes along," said Pratt.

In addition, Pratt said the Board of Health has been applying for grant funding and it received two this year alone. Pratt said some of the money was used to purchase defibrillators and the money which was left over will be used for various emergency training for town employees.

Along with the grants, for the first time this year, the town budget has a line item to cover expenses related to emergency preparedness. Pratt said the town has allocated $5,000 to the cause, "which is a pretty big increase from zero."

"We actually have money like any other town department," he said, which he believes is a great step in the right direction.

Pratt said a large portion of the planning necessary for any town safety program relates to its schools. He said Cohasset relies heavily upon its schools not only for transportation, as using school buses might become necessary in the case of a large evacuation, but the school buildings and large cafeterias are a benefit to the community as well.

"The schools are a big piece of the plan," said Pratt, adding due to the large amount of people who are in the buildings on a daily basis, "it is one of the most likely places where something would happen." In addition, he said because the large majority of people in the school buildings are children who cannot fend for themselves, it is extremely important for set emergency procedures to be in place.

Pratt said the committee looks forward to working closely with the school department and getting its plans up to date and detailed. "It hasn't been done well over the years and in some ways, they're still behind," said Pratt.

But nevertheless, Pratt said the emergency management office is "very anxious," to make sure the schools have the most up-to-date emergency plans, which will make it easier for those responding to know what is expected of them.

Pratt said going forward, one of the larger goals the committee hopes to accomplish this year is to have an emergency training session in the early fall. "We want to see if all the things we think and talk about," really work when tested, he said. "There are all kinds of issues that come up and Pratt said, "You never really know until you try it."

SPORTS

Coming next week...

While the kids are out on April vacation, the Mariner will feature in-depth reports on the CHS baseball and tennis teams, as well as continuing coverage of softball and lacrosse.

In addition, we will be coming out with our All-Scholastic wrestling team. Cohasset will surely be well-represented.

Fit to be tied

Lady laxers come back against Falmouth, hold on for draw

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Things were looking dire for the Cohasset girls lacrosse team in the second half of last Thursday's game at Falmouth.

After being down 5-4 at halftime and 8-5 with 10 minutes to go, the Skippers went on a run to take a 9-8 lead.

After Falmouth tied it at 9-9, Lauren Rizzotti (who, along with Lisa Spirito, scored two goals each in the Skippers' 4-0 run) put Cohasset ahead once again.

After Falmouth again drew even with a minute to go, Cohasset nearly escaped with a victory, but instead had to settle for a 10-10 tie on the road against a solid team.

"We had a couple good opportunities to retake the lead, but Falmouth's goalie made two great saves," said head coach Torin Sweeney.

Spirito (four goals), Rizzotti (three goals, assist), Lindsay Durkin (two goals, assist) and Mackenzie Holway (goal, assist) accounted for the Cohasset scoring. Holway earned the praise of Sweeney for playing "a great two-way game."

The coach says his team came out a little flat (as many teams in these parts do after making the infamous bus ride down the Cape), but showed some fortitude as the game wore on.

"They really dug deep to make that comeback," Sweeney said.

Although it came to a different result, the Skippers again played a strong second half Tuesday against Duxbury. Cohasset lost to the powerhouse Green Dragons, 13-3, but it could have been far worse.

The score at the half was 11-1, but the blue and white made some adjustments during the break and turned things around.

"The girls definitely played well in the second half," Sweeney said. "We went man-to-man and managed to tie them, 2-2, in the second half. That was definitely encouraging."

Holway scored two goals and again played well defensively. Rizzotti scored the other goal and also had an assist.

The defensive effort in the second half was led by strong efforts from Molly Kirk, Miranda Lanzillotti and Danielle Hajjar.

After a game yesterday against Barnstable, Cohasset (1-2-1) does not play again until the 26th when they host Hanover. After that is a road game at undefeated Norwell on the 28th.

Correction

The Mariner erroneously reported last week that Mackenzie Holway scored one goal in the team's win against Cape Cod Academy. She had three.

Buick's last minute goal nets win over CM

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

It was an afternoon of solid efforts all around, and junior Aidan Buick provided a nice finishing touch.

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team was tied with Catholic Memorial Tuesday afternoon with under a minute to go when Buick worked some magic.

Making a great run up-field after a nice clear-out and working himself some space to get off the shot, Buick put in his third goal of the game with 28 seconds left to give the Skippers (2-2) a hard-earned 7-6 victory.

Jake Previte also had three goals, and Jake Kovach had one. Buick, Previte, Joe Durkin and Sam Steele all had assists.

Cohasset head coach Stu Curran said opponents will likely focus more on Previte (the Skippers' leading returning scorer), which should allow Buick to continue to shine offensively.

"He's doing what I fully expected him to do," Curran said. "He's becoming more of a focus in our offense. He has a remarkable ability to break free from defenders and create separation for himself."

Cohasset's Jake Kovach (23), shown here in action last week against Scituate, scored a key goal at the end of the first half of his team's 7-6 win over Catholic Memorial on Tuesday.

Defensively, Cohasset's three long-sticks - Crandon Leahy, Casey Coleman and Kevin Dinsmore - played a great, physical game that wore down CM over the course of 60 minutes.

"By the latter part of the fourth quarter, the CM attackers didn't want to handle the ball," Curran said. "It was because of the way our defenders were working them over the whole game."

Curran also credited sophomore Ryan Kucinski and senior Matt Casey for their play on defense. Casey had what his coach described as a "bone-jarring" hit that caused a turnover and led to a Skippers goal.

Teddie Straughn represents Cohasset

Hockey could very well be Teddie Straughn's third best sport.

The CHS senior was an excellent starting fullback for a football team that won its second straight South Shore League title last fall.

Straughn is also a talented pitcher on the baseball diamond, and will continue that craft at Boston College next season.

But winter is a time for hockey, and in that endeavor, Straughn makes his second consecutive Mariner All-Scholastic team.

Cohasset's Conor Holway and Brian Straughn (Teddie's younger brother) are among several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" who received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of 24, and after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top hockey players in Marinerland for this honor:

Teddie Straughn - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Cohasset

A South Shore League All-Star this season, Straughn was the leader of a team that made a remarkable season-ending run to come within one game of postseason qualification Scored seven goals this season, and led the Skippers in assists (18) and points (25)...A great passer who knows how to use his 6-foot-2, 200-pound frame...A good two-way player, particularly in neutral ice, where he anticipated opponents passes and was consistently able to disrupt them...Even played a little defenseman when his team needed it...President of the CHS student council this year...Played a leading role in the school's production of "Grease" last fall...Also a co-captain of the football and baseball teams...Cohasset head coach Ben Virga: "Teddie is the dictionary definition of a captain and a leader. This was as much Teddie's team as it was mine. He's a great all-around hockey player and person."

Reality check for softballers

Abington shows why they're the defending league champs

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

It seemed almost too good to be true.

After the April showers subsided, the Lady Skippers floated with ease past their first two opponents of the softball season.

The initial outing came and went with the South Shore Christian Academy bowing to Cohasset under the slaughter–rule victory provisions. Then, the Falcons of Mashpee fell prey to the Lady Skipper spell. The Red Sox and David Wells could have borrowed some of this Cohasset luck.

April 7 marked the end to the two-game euphoria. As soon as the Lady Skippers got off the bus in Abington, things didn't feel right. The clouds rolled in, the winds picked up and the temperature dropped.

But the Abington bats heated up like there was no tomorrow.

The Green Wave looked every part of their defending league champion status. The Green Wave beat the Lady Skippers in a 14-0, one-hit shut out.

No matter how bad the shutout may sound, it's all relative. Last year, the Skippers fell to Abington in a game that ended in the 5th inning due to the slaughter rule. At least this time around, Abington had to work harder for its victory.

Abington entered the game with some striking advantages. First, the Green Wave squad included six seniors compared to two for the Lady Skippers.

"Our new pitching machine should help make the girls more consistent and confident at the plate."

Head coach Deb Bostwick
Lady Skippers

Second, Abington showed up with tremendous depth, not surprising for a team with years of experience. Cohasset, on the other hand, started its team from scratch only four years ago.

Virginia Spofford pitched for Cohasset and struggled against an offensive powerhouse. The Green Wave banged out 13 hits on top of 8 walks and 6 passed balls.

Defensively speaking, co-captain Erin Liddell showed focus at second base while freshman Anna Haggerty fielded very well at shortstop. Melissa Crowley-Buck and co-captain Cecelia Chapman played with intensity in the outfield.

Said Co-captain Casey Anderson, "Our defense maintained its steadiness. But this tough Abington team came out swinging. We need to do the same."

"Hitting remains our weakness. We realize that," she said. "Our new pitching machine should help make the girls more consistent and confident at the plate."

Chapman says she also sees potential among her teammates.

"Compared to last year, we have exhibited much more energy and intensity," she said. "Once we get some power in our bats, our record should improve significantly."

Cohasset had three games on their schedule this week: Monday against Carver, Tuesday at Harwich and Thursday at Hull. Reports on these games are forthcoming in next week's Mariner.

After that, the Lady Skippers do not play again until after April vacation, when they travel to Norwell on the 26th.

Goalie – Scituate

Bob Dillon

Dillon emerged as one of the top netminders on the South Shore this winter to key the Sailors to a South sectional…was named co-team MVP along with Chris Travis…compiled 8-4-1 regular season record while notching a Patriot League best goals against average and an outstanding save percentage of 92.1%... extremely steady, Dillon always made the saves he was expected to and often came up with great ones as well…not as large as most netminders, Dillon compensates with superior instincts and quickness…plays the angles well…extremely quick with his pads...plays hockey year round…name WATD Player of the Week once this season… played very well in state tourney wins over Blue Hills and number one seed Harwich, as well as in 4-3 loss to Bishop Stang…used to play in the elite Bay State Sharks program…currently a pitcher/outfielder for the SHS JV baseball team…good student…hopes play college hockey…undecided on a major…enjoys fishing and surfing…Scituate coach Mike Breen: "I can look back now and say he really bailed us out of some big games this season. And he seemed to get even better in big games when we needed him most. What's really amazing is he's just a sophomore. I just smile when I think of how we've got him for another two years."

Gordie MacFarlane - Senior (Capt.)

The talented senior and two-time Mariner All-Scholastic finished the year as the team's second leading scorer…MacFarlane scored 14 goals, while adding 23 assists for 37 points…He finished his four-year MHS career with 39 goals and 58 assists for 97 total points…A two-year Old Colony League All-star, MacFarlane's aggressive and smart play helped Marshfield (18-4-1) win its first OCL title in several years with a 5-1 mark…His successes continued in the postseason, where he guided the Rams to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional, where they fell to the eventual state champs, Boston Latin…MacFarlane is an honor roll student who also played golf at MHS…He was very active in the hockey community service projects as well.

Ryan Warsofsky - Junior (Capt.)
Defense - Marshfield

For the second year in a row, this talented junior was the Old Colony League's leading scorer as a defenseman, tallying 16 goals and 17 assists for 33 points this winter…In his three-year career, Warsofsky has racked up 70 points…A two-time Old Colony League All-star, Warsofsky is making his first appearance on the Mariner All-Scholastic squad after earning an Honorable Mention last year…One of the team's purest passers and hardest shooters, Warsofsky scored some huge goals for the Rams this season…Tallied the game-winning goal against Mansfield to notch a triple-overtime victory in the quarterfinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional, sending the team to the semis…Also scored a game-tying goal against Silver Lake with 2.4 seconds left to save the Rams from a loss…Helped guide Marshfield (18-4-1) to its first OCL title in several years…Warsofsky also plays baseball at MHS.

David Warsofsky- Freshman - Forward - Marshfield

This talented freshman certainly made a big splash this season as he led the Marshfield squad in scoring with 40 points on 22 goals, 18 assists…Made an already productive offense even more so this season as the Rams trounced their competition in the Old Colony League and won its first title (5-1) in years…Cited by his coach Dan Connolly as being "the most dynamic player" he's seen and "a magician with the puck", Warsofsky's speed and skating skill was virtually unmatched…The OCL All-star helped guide the Rams to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where they fell to eventual state champs, Boston Latin…The freshman scored a pair of goals along the way, including the game-tying score against Mansfield that later resulted in a triple-overtime Marshfield victory in the quarterfinals…Was also named the MVP of the Gould Tournament, which the Rams won via a 3-2 victory over Scituate.

Joe Gauvin - Senior
Goalie - Marshfield

Literally the best goaltender in the Old Colony League this season, Gauvin led the conference in goals against average, boasting a nearly untouchable 1.87 mark…Anchored the team in 17 wins this season, compared to only four losses…The senior OCL All-star posted a pair of shutouts this season and did not allow more than three goals in games during the regular season…He was "one of the reasons we did so well this year," according to coach Dan Connolly…Helped guide the team to an OCL title, its first in several seasons, and to the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where he had a 30-save effort in a triple-OT win over Mansfield in the quarters…Was named co-MVP of the MHS hockey squad…Gauvin also plays varsity lacrosse at Marshfield.

Brian Buckley – Senior (Capt.)
Forward – Hingham

This two-year starter was among the leading scorers on the team this season, racking up 23 points on 14 goals, 9 assists…His speed and skill on the front line helped the Harbormen reach the Super 8 tournament for the fourth-straight season…Not big, Buckley's trademark hustle made him a tough opponent to stop in front of the net, according to coach Garret Reagan…Chipped in several big goals this season, helping Hingham get through a very difficult regular season schedule to finish 15-8-2 overall this winter…At the team's annual banquet, Buckley received a memorial scholarship award and earned a nod for his Team Contribution in the form of the Brian Doyle Memorial award.

Mike Genovese - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

Talk about a challenge…This two-year captain entered the season coming off a broken leg sustained during the summer baseball season and still was among the leading scorers on the Harbormen squad…Genovese racked up 29 points on 12 goals, 17 assists…His hard-nosed play on the front line helped Hingham compete in the elite Super 8 tourney for the fourth-straight year…Skillful and talented with the puck, Genovese was named one of the Super 8 tourney MVP's by his coaches and teammates…He also earned the Frank Ayers Memorial Scholarship…Guided the Hingham team to a 15-8-2 record, playing the entire season against only the area's top hockey talent…Also a talented baseball player at HHS.

Pat McGuirk – Senior
Forward – Hingham

Also a two-year starter on the Hingham team, McGuirk was much like Buckley in that his hustle on the front line stymied opposing defenses…McGuirk contributed 19 points this season on 8 goals, 11 assists, helping the Harbormen reach the private-school loaded Super 8 tourney for the fourth-straight season…Cited by his coach Garret Reagan for "working so hard at all times", McGuirk was one of the team's best penalty killers…For his efforts in guiding Hingham to a 15-8-2 record with one of the toughest schedules around, McGuirk was awarded the Brian Doyle Team Contribution Award at the team's annual banquet.

Mike Quinn – Senior Defenseman – Hingham

This senior not only shines in the sport of hockey, but in all three sports in which he plays at Hingham High…After helping to guide the HHS football team to an appearance in the Div. 4 Super Bowl at quarterback this past fall, Quinn was the hockey team's standout defenseman…A two-year starter Quinn's confidence and leadership shined brightly on the ice as he racked up 12 points on two goals, 10 assists…His tough play on the back line helped Hingham qualify for the Super 8 tourney for the fourth-straight season and help the team survive one of the toughest schedules around with a 15-8-2 record…For his efforts in the postseason, Quinn received the team's tourney MVP award…"To be one of the top guys in not just one sport, but all three is really something," said coach Garret Reagan….Quinn is also captaining the lacrosse team this spring.

Bob Ainslie - Senior (Capt.)
Forward- Hanover

Veteran Hanover coach Jim Sylvia called Ainslie the "heart and soul of our team… played with relentless style that seemed to rub off on teammates…though average-sized at best, he was one of the most punishing hitters in the Patriot League… tied for the team lead in scoring with 22 points (10 goals, 12 assists)… Patriot League all-star…directed the Indians to a surprising PL title (10-1-1) and an overall record of 12-8-2… also a Patriot Ledger and Brockton Enterprise All-Scholastic…two time WATD Player of the Week…a regular on the Honor Roll…won Hanover Hockey Leadership Award… recipient of John & Abigail Adams Scholarship for MCAS, making him eligible for free tuition at any state college…plays a lot of off season hockey in various leagues…sophomore brother Bill appears to be following in Bob's footsteps…his father ,Bob Sr., also starred at HHS in hockey. In fact, he played for Coach Sylvia...has been accepted at four colleges, but is leaning toward Salve Regina, where he'd likely play hockey... undecided on major… Coach Jim Sylvia: "Bobby's wheels just never stopped going. He set the tone for hustle on our team. I'm really going to miss him. He set a great example."

Bill Jackson - Sophomore Defense - Hanover

Plays with a calm and confidence that belies his age…was considered by many the best rounded defenseman in the Patriot League…sees the ice very well and moved the puck out of the zone as well as any defenseman in the PL…also a strong skater and puckhandler…led Indians in assists with 17…also added a goal during the season…a good decision maker who seldom got caught out of position…rarely came off the ice in special teams situations (power play of shorthanded)… Patriot League all-star...Honor Roll student…twin brother Mark, and Honorable Mention selection here, led the team in goals scored (12) and tied for team scoring lead (22)…Bill and Mark also play varsity golf and lacrosse at HHS…the twins helped direct golf team to third place finish in state Div. 3 tourney this past fall…both are leaning more toward playing college golf than hockey…Bill is leaning toward majoring in Economics or Business…Coach Jim Sylvia: "Bill has a lot of natural talent. He was very important in all areas of the game for us this year, but I think we'll be looking for him to take on an even bigger role next year. I think he can handle it."

Coming to his team's Aid

FROM TEAM'S AID, PAGE 15

Senior Chris Sims played in net, and had a very nice game with 14 saves.

The game was a defensive battle, particularly in the first half, where the teams combined for only three goals heading into the last minute. That is when Kovach struck for what Curran said was a very important goal.

"After a long drought, Jake made it 2-2 at the end of the half," said the coach. "It was a good, solid bounce shot that completely baffled their goalie."

A Div. 2 tournament team last season, CM played a zone defense that forced a slow-paced game. The Skippers had to be patient on offense, and they eventually came through, starting with the Kovach goal.

About the only complaint Curran had was his team's occasional inability to clear the ball, which he says cost them a couple goals. Overall, however, it was a nice way to come back from a tough 11-8 loss to Falmouth last Friday.

Buick, Previte and Steele played well on offense, combining for all eight Cohasset goals (with Buick adding three assists). It wasn't enough, however, to beat a deep, talented Falmouth team that consistently qualifies for the Div. 1 playoffs.

Cohasset was ahead 6-4 at the half, but Falmouth's depth became the deciding factor down the stretch, as the visitors scored five goals in the fourth period.

"Early on, we were moving the ball well and playing some good defense," Curran said. "But we just didn't have enough bodies. We grew weary, and we starting swinging out sticks instead of playing sound, positional lacrosse."With a little bit more depth, I think we would have been in the win column."

Yesterday, the Skippers took on a Barnstable club that advanced to the Div. 1 semifinals last season.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse

Boys:

U11 – Blue Team at Home against Hull

On a glorious spring afternoon that almost made us forget what a long winter it has been, the Boys U11 Blue squad opened up their 2005 lacrosse season with a terrific game against Hull this past Sunday at Milliken Field.

Though our youngest laxers haven't had much practice time outdoors, they came out full of smiles and eager to get the game on. The contest was evenly matched throughout, and at the end the home team managed to squeeze out a victory.

But the real success was seeing all of the kids come together as a team and play the game with enthusiasm, excitement, and sportsmanship. There were some great performances worthy of mentioning - Cole Kissick manning the goal in one quarter and then relentlessly battling for face-offs in another; end-to-end runs by Christian Davis and Evan Yeager to set up scores and keep the game moving; fantastic late-game defense by Ryan MacCarthy and Axel Seppala; strong play on both sides of the ball from John Mills and Nick Tangerlini; and lastly, spectacular goaltending by Brendan Queenan in the second half that made him look like a veteran "between the pipes" and secured the win.

All in all, it was a great opening day for Cohasset Lax and for everyone lucky enough to be out on the fields to bring in another season.

U13 – White Team at Home against Duxbury

U13 White faced a talented Duxbury squad, ultimately succumbing to their potent attack.

Willy Brown and Kyle Healy split the goaltending duties and did a great job, keeping the game close. The defense of Geoff Swain, Will Tetrault, Dean McNary, Ben Curley and Brennan Bukowski were solid as well.

Derek Youngman, Jon McGoldrick, Kyle Healy and Mitch McNary contributed goals and played well on both ends of the field. Patrick Kearney led a hustling midfield of Danny Barnes, Kyle Livingstone, Peter McKenna, and Charlie Neaves. The attack was led by Danny Czerkawski and Greyson Elkins.

U13 - Blue Team at Home against Hull

U13 Blue opened their game slowly through the first half as the boys relied more on running the ball downfield rather than passing. Several timely possessions from face-off by Thomas Flibotte rallied the boys in the second half, combined with the strong middie presence of Jack Carrier, and Morgan McCarthy playing his first game ever. Chris Murphy in goal was instrumental to the win, fending off numerous shots. Goals by Allard (2), Flibotte, Grasz, Hurd (2), Neaves (2), and Richardson yielded a 9-4 win.

U11 – White Team at Home against Duxbury

The boys showed a lot of hustle and determination against a tough Duxbury team last Sunday, but for all of their efforts, it was not enough to overcome the strength of the all 4th-grade Duxbury rivals.

As a team, Cohasset White showed both a great attitude and desire. Most importantly, all the players had fun playing the game while their families enjoyed a great day at Milliken. Many of the returning players came ready for lacrosse with notable efforts by a number of fourth graders. Sarah Brown at middie showed the boys a thing or two about the word "hustle" with a few great fast breaks across the midfield line.

Andrew Fontaine drove the ball into our crease to our dismay (he and two others volunteered to join Duxbury for the day) and we can't wait to have him back next week. It was also exciting to watch the Nahill boys make outstanding plays at both ends of the field.

Blair McGowen showed his skill while on defense by clearing the ball across the midfield line three times and while in the goal with excellent saves. Zack Strecker was our goalie in the first half and made the crowd gasp with a fantastic save to deny a goal by Duxbury.

Third graders also showed great efforts, starting with Will Golden, who found ground balls and the light of day for a few great fast breaks. Henry Brown also showed some "Brown Brothers" magic at the midfield line while Colin Whelan was making plays for Duxbury (we won't let you go next time, Colin!).

Max Montgomery also wowed the crowd with two great shots and excellent play in close. Lastly, Tommy Powers showed not only strength but speed as he denied the offense and reversed play more than once for a great first game showing. In all, everyone had a great day, and if the 2005 Farmers Almanac is right we will not only win next week, you can also count on another great day for lacrosse.

U13 – Silver Team at Falmouth

The opening game on the Cape turned out to be high-scoring and physical, with Falmouth winning 12-6.

Chase Murphy and Chris Wilson did a great job in goal for Cohasset, while keeping the Falmouth offense at bay for most of the game. The coaches rotated people throughout a number of positions in order to give everyone an opportunity to try their skills in different positions.

The Cohasset defense with Mark Dick, Patrick Dunn, Adrian Dunne, Alex Evans, Alexander Everett, Derek Froio, Robbie Mahoney, Ben Pratt, and Scott Wilson worked hard to keep the Falmouth offense in check and keep scoring to a minimum. The Cohasset team really gelled in the fourth quarter and outscored Falmouth 3-1. Unfortunately, it was little too late in the game to pull off a win.

The midfield and attack lines really cranked it up in the fourth quarter with crisp passing and strong shots. Chris Brash, Chris Carpenter, Patrick Dunn, Adrian Dunne, Jeff Durkin, Alex Evans, Alexander Everett, Derek Froio, Patrick MacCormack, Robbie Mahoney, Chase Murphy, Ben Pratt, Matt Swanborg, and Chris Wilson moved the ball around looking for scoring opportunities.

If the Cohasset Silver team can keep the teamwork and momentum that they showed in the fourth quarter, then it will be a rewarding season for all of them.

Girls dominate Duxbury to open season

The Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams opened the 2005 season in dominant fashion, playing four games against rival Duxbury on April 3 and winning all four by a combined score of 40-5.

The 13-and-Under girls (grades 5-6) Blue team opened the season in style, getting an early lead against the Duxbury 1 team on a goals from Olivia Murphy and Anna Michalowski to jump ahead 2-0. Hope Kissick scored two successive goals before Lindsay MacNaught took charge and registered a natural hat trick, with her third goal assisted by Sarah Evans. That had Cohasset up 7-0, until Duxbury potted a goal just before the half.

In the second half, Cohasset slowed the ball down and worked on movement and control. Kissick completed a hat trick and Murphy scored again, and the defense – led by Megan Green and goaltender Molly McElgunn – kept Duxbury at bay for the entire second half, so that the game closed at 9-1 in favor of the visitors.

Not to be outdone, the Cohasset White U-13 team defeated Duxbury 2 by the exact same score later in the day. Bridget Cahill opened the scoring, and Kaci Kucinski notched two scores as Cohasset got off to a fast start. Missy Sease and Anna Michalowski added solo scores, and goaltender Ellie Tedeschi stuffed several Duxbury scoring opportunities, so that Cohasset could cruise to a 5-0 halftime lead.

The second half was equally impressive, with Cohasset again slowing things down to work on fundamentals. Claire Oswald blasted home a goal, Michalowski scored on a long dash to the net, Paige DeSisto scored her first-ever goal in her first game and Kucinski finished her hat trick to get to the final score. Tedeschi finished with five saves in the net.

At the 15-and-Under level (grades 7-8), Cohasset has been the dominant program in the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse Leagues South Division over the last two years, compiling a record of 21-1-2. The girls – playing on two teams so thin on rosters that a few players will have to double up every weekend – sent a message that it would be more of the same this year, pounding two Duxbury squads.

Cohasset Blue gave up the first goal against Duxbury 1, and then locked down the Dragons for the rest of the day. After Cohasset had one goal disallowed due to a crease violation, Isabelle Franklin tied the score on a direct-free position. Kaley Madge then scored her first goal of the game by finishing a feed from Gabriella Flibotte, and Flibotte then scored a solo marker for a 3-1 lead. Save for another disallowed goal, Cohasset was in control with a 3-1 halftime lead.

The second half belonged to Madge, who in this game would match her scoring total for her first two seasons playing lacrosse. Madge scored a second-half hat trick, with her goals wrapped around markers from Kayla Farren, Lindsay Allard, and Flibotte, who converted a beautiful feed from Maddy Altholtz. Franklin then finished the scoring, as Cohasset rolled to a 10-1 win.

Thomson Jaffe made three saves in the Cohasset net.

Not to be outdone, the Cohasset White U-15 team jumped all over Duxbury 2 and never looked back.

Nine different players scored goals in the game, and the outcome was never in jeopardy.

Gabriella Flibotte, Katie Gaumer and Madeline Leahy each scored twice, and Flibotte added a slick feed to Johanna Regan for her first goal of the year. Maura Barnes had a goal and an assist, while Amy Meikleham, Isabelle Franklin and Kaley Madge all had single scores. Lindsey Hill added an assist.

Thomson Jaffe and Flibotte split the goaltending duties; each made one save against one goal.

Girls roll on against Cape teams

Cohasset's girls youth lacrosse teams hosted their first home games of the season at Deer Hill School on April 10, and finished the season's second week of competition still unbeaten, but with one minor blemish on the record.

That mark came in the first game of the day when the Cohasset Blue 13-and-Under girls (grades 5 and 6) squared off against a much bigger team from Sandwich.

The visitors got off to a fast start, and the Cohasset kids didn't seem to have an answer as Sandwich raced off to a 3-0 lead. Cohasset wasted one scoring chance after the next with shots directly at the Sandwich goalie, but eventually clawed back into it. Kaci Kucinski scored twice to draw the game to 3-2, and the teams traded goals to the half, with Sarah Evans and Kathleen Kelly getting the Cohasset scores.

The back-and-forth contest continued in the second half as the teams continued to trade goals. Sandwich answered goals by Kucinski and Hope Kissick, until Kucinski's fourth score of the game notted things at 7. From there, Anna Michalowski converted a direct-free position to give Cohasset its first lead of the day at 8-7. With several opportunities to run out the clock, Cohasset lost the ball and surrendered the tying goal with under a minute remaining, as the game finished in an 8-8 tie.

Molly McElgunn stood tall in the net with nine saves, and the defense of Ellie Tedeschi, Dylanne Axelson, Cally Altholtz, Taylor Kennedy and Stephanie Brierly adjusted to Sandwich's much larger team to help turn the tide and get Cohasset back into it.

The day's next three games all proved to be blowouts, with the Blue U-15 team (grades 7 and 8) jumping on Sandwich early and never stopping en route to a 16-1 blowout.

Kaley Madge continued her hot scoring pace with three goals and two assists. Lindsey Allard and Gabriella Flibotte each added hat tricks, while Caitlin Mahoney and Isabelle Franklin added two goals each. Katelyn Ryan and Maddy Altholtz had solo markers, and Amanda Masotta closed the scoring with her first-ever goal. Polly Murray picked up her first point of the season with an assist.

Cohasset's defense – particularly Natalie Hunt – never allowed a stronger-than-the-score-shows Sandwich team to get to goaltender Thomson Jaffe, who finished with two saves.

Next up at Deer Hill, the Cohasset White U-13 (grades 5/6) team faced off against Bourne, a team Cohasset had never beaten in girls lacrosse before.

This time was different, as Cohasset raced to a six-goal lead before Bourne was able to dent the net. Bridget Cahill scored twice, and Molly McElgunn, Anna Michalowski and Paige DeSisto had solo scores. Alison Whelan scored her first goal of the season when she was denied by the Bourne goalie, who then dropped the ball into her own net.

McElgunn added two more goals in the second half, DeSisto added a second goal and Jessica Fusco converted a Claire Oswald feed to close out a 10-1 win.

Ellie Tedeschi and Stephanie Brierly split netminding duties, each making one save and seeing little action due to the efforts of Charlotte O'Callaghan, Zoe Whilton and Lauren Hayes.

The White U-15 team closed out the day by matching its sister team with a 16-goal effort against Bournes seventh and eighth graders. Gabriella Flibotte's five goals led the way, but Katie Gaumer added a hat trick and Maura Barnes, Amy Meikleham and Isabelle Franklin scored two goals each. Katelyn Ryan chipped in with a goal and an assist and Olivia Sullivan scored her first on the year.

The Cohasset squad moved the ball fast and often, and tied its record high for assists in a game. In addition to Ryan's helper, Leigh Collins, Jenny Cahill, Madeline Leahy and Polly Murray all picked up assists.

Dominique Rioux, Lauren Blaze, Kate O'Callaghan and Lesen Haracz led a defense which took most of the pressure off Thomson Jaffe, who recorded five saves in the win.

Cohasset's 15-U girls will play next in an exhibition game at Boston University on April 17. All four girls teams return to Deer Hill on Sunday, April 24 playing a total of five games against Falmouth and Marshfield.

COASTAL STARS

Mite C1 wins championship game

The Coastal Stars Mite C1 team won the conference championship last week in an association match up against the Coastal Stars Mite C 3 team. It was a hard fought battle with several lead changes but the C-1 team persevered with Scoring by James Dietrich and Jack Conlon assisted by Joe Deyeso and Hugh Healey.

Tyler McKinnon stepped up as a volunteer goalie and was awesome in net.

The defensive lines of DJ Cronin, Sean Feeney, Joe Proctor, Chris Bertone, Tommy Prendergast, and Jack Shaw were all over the opposing offense never letting them get their game in high gear. The offensive lines of Daniel Cronin, Ben Swim, Jake Moore, Joe Deyeso, Cam Mastrangelo, James Dietrich, Tommy Prendergast Jack Conlon and Liam Manning all did a great job pulling out the win at the end.

The Stars C-1 team had a great year showing much improvement by going all the way after a slow start. We wish all the players luck next year. Whether they are on Squirts or Mites they should prove to be just as entertaining next year as they were this year.

It was a wonderful year for the Stars and much thanks to Coaches Healey, Prendergast, Mastrangelo, Dietrich and McKinnon for the great job they did with the kids.

Squirt C-2

The Coastal Stars Squirt C-2 hockey team won their second playoff game last week against the Coastal Stars 3. In a battle for bragging rights in the Stars' Squirt C division, both teams played an even game the whole first period with C-2 scoring late in the period to take a 1-0 lead. Both teams had pucks go off the post and out. The first goal being scored by Jack Kuppens.

The C-2 defense of Chris Bjorkman, Colin Bell, Coleman Hernon, and Jake Denton worked hard so that Alec Hurd, C-2 goalie, had few shots on him. There was only one blemish in the second when a C-3 player beat Hurd for the only goal they would score.

The Stars C-2 came alive in the second period with 3 goals. Jake Timcoe, Mick Barry, and Jack Kuppens provided the firepower. Nick Mulrey, Tim Cavanaro, Ethan Maher, Nate Morse, Brendon Queenan, and Adam Jackson all made sure their goalie didn't have to work hard for the rest of the second period.

The third period was a great one for Queenan who scored to put the game out of reach. This makes the Stars C-2 , 2-0 in the playoffs and will look to make it 3-0 this weekend.

Mite B

August 21 2004 was a warm summer day, I was enjoying the sun and sipping an adult beverage poolside when the phone rang: Ring, Ring... "Hello this is Coach Joe, your son needs to be at practice tomorrow morning 5:50 AM at Hockomock Ice rink - try to get there 45 minutes early so we can introduce the coaching staff!"

Fast forward to April 8th, 2005. Ring, Ring... "Hello this is Coach Joe, we're playing Norwood tomorrow morning 5:50 AM at Bridgewater - try to get there 45 minutes early - we're in the semi finals!" Nine months later; that's full term and carrying triplets!!

Facing Norwood for the 3rd time and having lost the first two, this was the match the STARS were salivating for. Norwood is fast, ferocious, and most certainly the best coached team on the east coast. The STARS were ready for "Rocky 3" and it showed. At 13:05 of the first frame, a tenacious Robert Reidy dug the puck out of the offensive corner and sizzled a lead pass to a streaking Michael Lund. Lund then feathered a room service feed to Cu-Jo (Curtis) Golden. Golden, in the slot, buried a snap shot, top shelf, to give the Stars the 1-0 edge. Then at 3:02 "Triple B" (Big Bryan Bowman) gained the blue line and zipped a text book pass to Brendan Evitts. Evitts, a goalie's worst nightmare, hammered a wrist shot to the back of the net to give the STARS a definitive two goal lead to end the 1st period.

Norwood kept their composure and the STARS cushion evaporated quickly. Norwood scored two quick goals to tie the score 2-2 before the midpoint of period number 2. This game would only be won with great two way hockey and outstanding teamwork. That's exactly what the STARS got from a fired up "SIX PACK ON ICE" Capt. Patrick Graham, Declan "The Destroyer" Leahy, "Smoking" Joey Redfearn, "Action Jackson" Jack Evitts, "A-Train" Aiden Beresford, James "the Crusher" Hussey and a battle tested goalie named StoneWall Kal Maier were all for one, and one for all in protecting the net. The Department of Defense had tasted defeat from Norwood in the past and like a bad oyster, they didn't like it.

The third period opened with outstanding hustle from the line of Sam Rice, Tucker Ambrose and Jeffrey Powers. All three players showed why they were top picks in the 2004 draft. With Kal swatting shots on net like King Kong swiping attacking helicopters, Norwood could not penetrate. With 4:13 to play in regulation, Big Cat Matt Doyle decided to take matters in his own hands when he won a face off in the offensive end, busted through two defenders, did a Shake & Bake fake with a roof top ending to give the STARS a 3-2 victory and an invitation to the FINALS!!

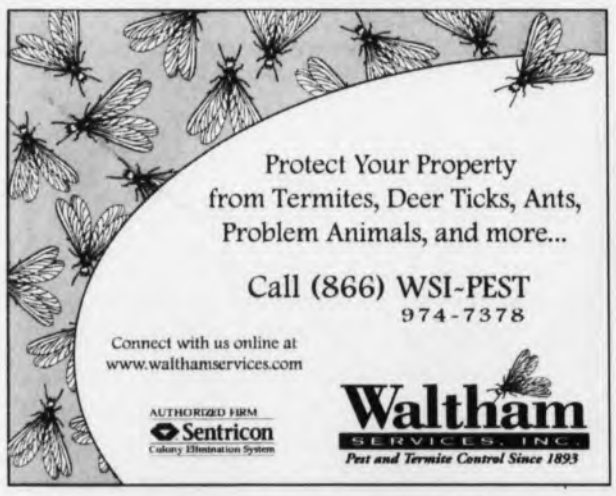
The 5th Annual Evan's Run set for May 22

The 5th Annual Evan's Run has been scheduled for Sunday, May 22 at 10:30 a.m. at Norwell High School.

The race, which offers a 5K run and walk and a 10K run, is named in honor of Evan Henry, a Norwell native who passed away in July of 2000 at the age of 11.

Evan was autistic, and the Henry family decided soon after his passing to set up a foundation that raises funds for organizations that help autistic children like Evan. Thus, the Evan Henry Foundation was born.

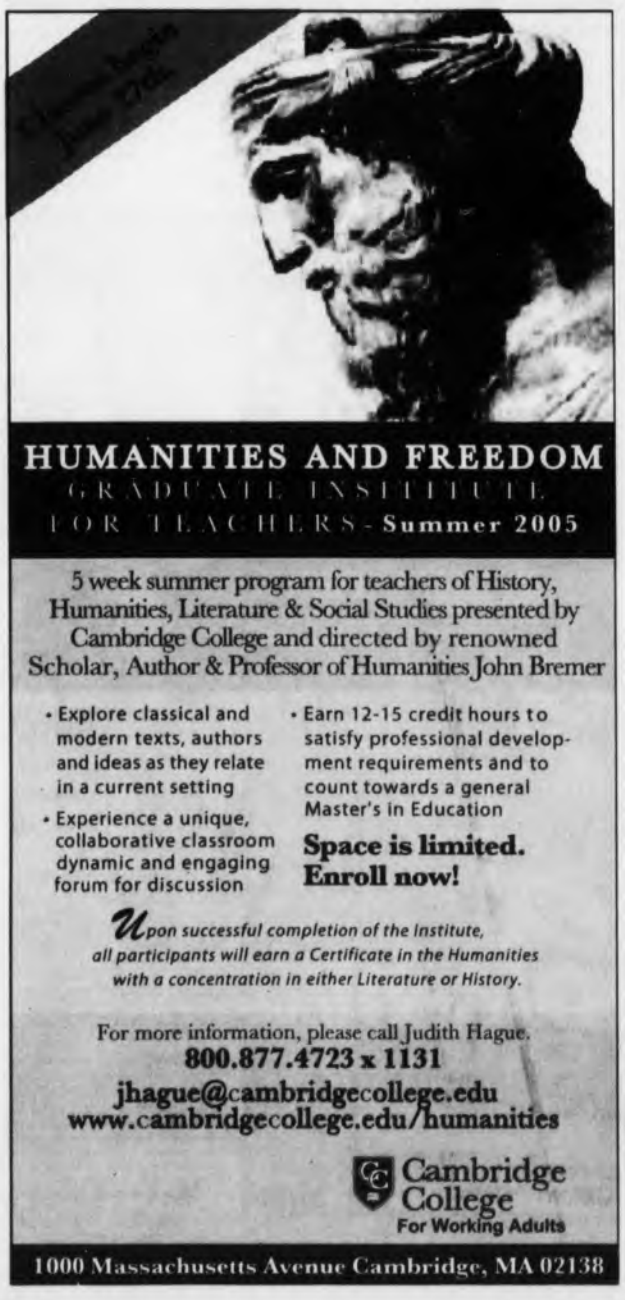
The first Evan's Run had great numbers, but attendance and participation has waned in the last three years. The Foundation has organized quite an event this year, including live entertainment from the Jon Frattasio Band. There will be a bandstand set up at the high school, where the race begins and ends, and the entertainment is scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon.

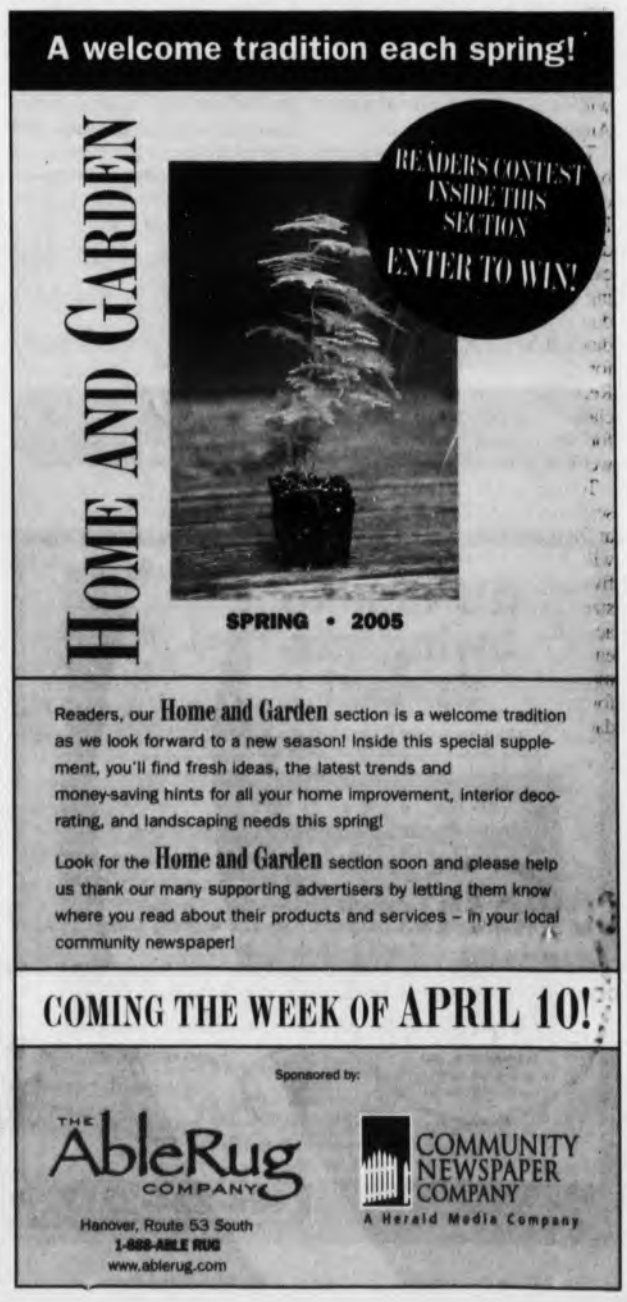


A post-race party has also been planned, and will be held at McGreal's Tavern in Norwell Center. Festivities there are set to begin around 1 p.m.

Cost to register for the race is $20 ($10 for the various children's races that have also been set up), with proceeds going to the Evan Henry foundation. If you just want to watch the race and enjoy the music, that is totally free of charge.

For more information about the race, or to register, go to the Foundation's website, www.evanhenry.org, or call the race hotline at 617-347-2068.





Carriage House School accredited by top group

Carriage House School of Cohasset has earned accreditation from the National Association for the Education of Young Children — the nation's leading organization of early childhood professionals.

"We're proud to be accredited by the NAEYC, and recognized for our commitment to reaching the highest professional standards" said Georgie Gladdys, director of the Carriage House School. "NAEYC Accreditation lets families in our community know that children in our program are getting the best care and early learning experiences." The Carriage House School serves children from 18 months to 5 years old. The program is designed to provide a variety of sharing experiences that will arouse curiosity, encourage exploration and help develop warm friendships.

More than 8,000 early childhood programs-are currently accredited by NAEYC.

"In recent years, we've seen a growing number of child care and preschool programs earning NAEYC accreditation," said Mark Ginsberg, Ph.D, executive director of NAEYC. "By earning accreditation Carriage House School has become a leader a national effort to raise the quality of early childhood education, and to help give all children a better start."

NAEYC created its accreditation program in1985 to set professional standard for early childhood education, and to help families identify high-quality child care and early education programs. To earn NAEYC's accreditation, a program conducts a self-study to determine how well it meets the standards. After necessary improvements are made, the program is observed by independent, professional validators, and the reviewed by a national panel. Programs are accredited for a five-year period.

Essays focus on stopping bullies

friend at school who is being bullied. The letter states: "My friend gets teased all the time and feels lonely and scared at school, even at lunch and recess. The bullying is even worse on the bus. I don't think it's fair, but I don't know how to help. I'm afraid that if I help, I will be teased and bullied, too. Why are kids so mean sometimes? What can I do to help my friend?

Ben said he could relate to the question because he had been on both sides of the issue. He had both been bullied, and at the beginning of the school year, had participated in bullying himself. "It was wrong," he said.

In his letter, he suggested a strategy his mother taught him, which is to "overload your enemies with kindness," and many times, bullies will leave you alone. He also said anyone who is being bullied should tell an adult, which he found helpful, as adults can help the two children work things out. "They'll also make suggestions to you on how to handle a situation when you're being bullied," he said in his letter.

Caroline said in her experience, "most people are really nice," but if they are a bully, they must have a reason. In her letter she said if anyone is being bullied, "it's your job to help."

She suggested telling an adult, or a parent who can help. "I don't blame you that you're scared to get teased and bullied if you help, but that is not going to happen if the principal gets into the action," she said in her letter. She also said, "You will know it was worthwhile when you see how happy your friend is that he or she is not being bullied anymore. You will know that you have been a good friend."

Eric said in the past, he has been bullied a little bit, but he has also seen other children being bullied at recess. His advice was to tell an adult, "because your friend is scared and could get hurt." He said telling bullies that they are being mean may also work. "Sometimes bullies don't know they are being so hurtful," he wrote. "They might even say they are sorry." Eric also said sometimes bullies only act that way to show off for their friends, and by telling a teacher, they might get in trouble and stop.

The entire classes of all three winners will be rewarded with a free recess. In addition, Principal Keith Gauley said he will look into getting free pizza coupons for the winners, and their names will be announced over the loud speaker.

RECREATION NOTES

Cheerleading clinic — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the three day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Dog obedience — The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer throughout the summer, dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School. Classes will be held on Wednesday evenings, on the Town Common, Cohasset, starting Wednesday, May 4, for Beginners at 6 p.m. and 7 p.m. class also for Beginners. Distractions classes will begin session two on June 15.

For both the beginner class and the obedience with distractions classes, dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6 to 7 and 7 to 8 p.m. The other sessions will be held during June, July and August.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five-week, one-hour per-week program.

To register for the next available session, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis. Dogs need to be 3 months of age and over to quality for training classes and have up to date shots.

Spring programs — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept mail-in or drop off registration for Spring Recreation Programs for children ages 4 and 5 and grades K-5. Continuing for 5 weeks; May 2, through June 2. Except Monday programs which ends June 6, due to Memorial Day Holiday. Programs are as follows, with all events held at Deer Hill/Osgood Fields:

- On Mondays, grades K-2 will play T-Ball and low organized games, starting right after school until 4:15/4:30 p.m.
- On Tuesdays, ages 4 and 5 will play T-Ball, Games and Sports, 3:15 to 4:30 p.m.
- On Wednesdays, grades K-2 will play Sports and low organized games, 3 to 4:30 p.m.
- On Thursdays, grades 3-5 will play Kickball/Sports/Games, starting right after school until 4:30 p.m. Each program meets once weekly for a 5 week period.

Children should bring snacks/drinks to programs and all children must be picked up either prior to, or promptly at the concluding program times. Children may stay after school to participate once parental permission is given on the registration form.

Complete registration form, calculating appropriate fee and make checks payable to: Town of Cohasset, checks and forms may either be dropped off at the Recreation Office or mailed to: Cohasset Recreation Department - 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

The fee for one child in any 5 week program is $50. The fee for one child in 2 one Day Programs is $90 per child.

The rainy day site will be at the Osgood School gym. Pick up for programs is at 4:15/4:30 p.m. left side of Osgood School.

Registration materials will be coming home via school or available at the Recreation Office, First floor, Town Hall.

- 'Boot Camp' fitness training — The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations at 781-383-4109 for adult 'Boot Camp Fitness Training' to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity will meet from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, April 5, for 10 weeks through Thursday, June 9, on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for the 20 class session is $100, checks are payable to: Town of Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109.

Central air conditioning
for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

CYBSA scholarship

The Cohasset Youth Baseball & Softball Association is pleased to announce that it will again offer two $1,000 scholarships for academic year 2005-06 to graduating high school seniors who are former members of the CYBSA, and who still reside in Cohasset.

The scholarship winners are selected on the basis of academic achievement, a commitment to baseball/softball, service to community, and the submission of an essay of not more than 500 words titled "What Little League Baseball/Softball Meant to me."

Interested candidates should consult with their school guidance office for further details.

SSL offers scholarship

The Social Service League of Cohasset is accepting applications for the Margaret F. Loud, R.N. Scholarship. Applicants must be seniors or residents in the town of Cohasset, Hull, Hingham, Scituate or Norwell, who intend to begin or further their studies in nursing, social work, or allied health fields. One scholarship in the amount of $2,000 or two scholarships in the amount of $1,000 will be awarded for the 2005-2006 academic year.

Applications are available at the League office, 16 Highland Ave., weekdays between 9 a.m. to noon or in each town's high school guidance office. Applications must be received by April 29. For more information, call 781-383-0771.

Are Hazards Hiding in your House?

The miracles of modern convenience often come with a side effect: toxicity.

Chemicals that kill crabgrass, remove rust, dissolve paint, and even electronic devices and some building materials can also make us sick if we toss them out carelessly.

The South Shore Recycling Cooperative has some tips to prevent us from poisoning our planet:

1. Be careful what you buy.

Choose the least toxic product to get the job done. Simple soapy water cleans most surfaces. Latex paint is easier to work with and dispose than oil based paint. If you buy too much, you can just dry it up and put it in the trash. Oil based paints and thinners are flammable, the fumes can make you sick, and they need to be brought to your town's paint shed or household hazardous product (HHP) collection for proper disposal (which, by the way, costs your town a lot of money). Electronic thermostats are also a safer and more versatile choice than non-electronic ones, which contain a lot of mercury and should also be disposed separately.

2. Fight the urge to buy the bulky bargain!

Proper disposal of excess hazardous products can cost more than what you paid for them; improper dumping can hurt people. For instance, flammables in the trash can cause trash truck fires.

3. Weigh the choices.

Some products that contain scary stuff have other virtues that outweigh their toxicity. Fluorescent lights contain small amounts of mercury, but save large amounts of energy. So buy them, then recycle them at your town's recycling center or HHP collection, along with your old fashioned thermostats and thermometers.

Rechargeable batteries contain cadmium, another toxic heavy metal. But they too save energy, as well as waste, and can be safely recycled like fluorescent lights. Their alkaline counterparts are not toxic, but they only deliver 2% of the energy required to make them, and they weigh down your trash.

4. Throwing it away doesn't mean it goes away.

What you put in your trash or down your drain can end up in the air you breathe, the water you drink, or in a sanitation worker's face. Solvents, pesticides, pool chemicals, automotive fluids, caustic cleaners, and toxic metals like mercury and cadmium are just some of the hazards that may be hiding in your house. Most towns provide safe ways to dispose of them, and will even trade you a digital thermometer through a program run by American Ref-Fuel for your mercury ones! The South Shore Recycling Cooperative coordinates about a dozen town collection events open to all area residents each year. If you're not sure what to do with your household hazardous products, check with your Board of Health or go to ssrc.info.

OBITUARIES

Albert M. Sencabaugh

Involved in Little League, building manager

Albert M. Sencabaugh, age 89, a Cohasset resident for 61 years, died April 2, 2005 at South Shore Rehabilitation in Rockland.

Born in Medford, he was the son of Jessie William. He worked as a building manager for many years.

Mr. Sencabaugh was very involved with the Cohasset Little League and loved spending time with his children and grandchildren.

Loving husband of the late Elsa (Anderson) Sencabaugh, he leaves his devoted children, Barbara MacDonald of Weymouth, Janet McCarthy of Kingston, and Nancy Sencabaugh of Dorchester; his two beloved grandchildren, Andrew and Laura McCarthy and many nieces and nephews.

A memorial service was held April 7 at the Second Congregational Church on Cohasset Common.

Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Epaminondas N. 'Paul' Gianibas

'Chef Paul' catered many events

Epaminondas N. 'Paul' Gianibas, age 66, a Hull resident for most of his life, died April 11, 2005 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth following a brief illness.

Mr. Gianibas was born, raised and educated in Boston. He was a self-employed caterer and well known on the South Shore as "Chef Paul."

He was a member of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church in Cohasset and was a former member of St. John's Greek Church in Boston. Mr. Gianibas was an active member of many civic and fraternal organizations, including the Hingham Rotary Club, the Old Colony Masonic Lodge in Hingham, was a Shriner at the Aleppo Temple in Boston, and a volunteer at the Shriners Burns Institute in Boston.

He was the brother of and leaves Maria G. Brountas and husband, Arthur of Bangor, Maine and the late Peter Gianibas; he leaves his nieces and nephews, Penny Rees and husband, Kim of Brewer, Maine, Jeannie Brountas of Brookline, Peter Brountas and wife, Heather of Bangor, Maine, Lisa Harrigan and husband, William, Theresa McDonald and husband, Brian, and Nicholas Gianibas and wife, Martha, all of Hull. He was the great uncle of Brett and Kyle Rees; Jessica Brountas, Taylor, Samantha and Thomas Harrigan; Brian, Michael and his namesake Paul McDonald; Ashley, Brittany, Peter, Nicholas and John Gianibas; his sister-in-law, Margaret Gianibas of Hull, and family members in Greece.

A funeral service will be held today (Friday, April 15) at 2 p.m. at the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, 811 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Interment will be in Hull Village Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Paul's memory to the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, 811 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

Haiti water project update

The Middle School Youth Group at St. Stephen's Episcopal has just been informed that it will receive a matching grant of $3,000 from the Empty Tomb Organization. The Empty Tomb, Inc. is a research and Christian service organization. Through its Mission Match Program, the organization provides matching grants for groups working to help combat childhood deaths in developing countries.

Because one of the primary causes for childhood disease and death is an inadequate supply of clean water, the youth group fund raiser to purchase and send a water-purification system to Haiti qualified them for the matching grant. The group has almost reached the $3,000 goal which will provide it with the matching grant money.

The youth group wants to thank all the people who have supported their effort so generously through the pledges at the Bowl-a-thon on March 13. However, even with the matching funds, the group still needs an additional $4,000 for the system to be sent to Haiti.

If you are interested in helping this group reach its goal of $10,000, please send your check, made payable to "St. Stephen's Haiti Water Project," c/o St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025. Every dollar that is donated provides one gallon of fresh water each and every day to a village in Haiti.

World-famous real estate investor and author reveals secrets of buying homes with no money down

Robert Allen's legendary workshop reveals how to change your financial future in 90 days or less

Years ago, when I invented the now world-famous "No Money Down" real estate system, people thought it simply couldn't be done... Buying real estate without investing a dime of your own money! But, I have proven it can be done, year after year, in all kinds of housing markets. Perhaps you've seen me on TV — or perhaps you've read one of my best-selling books.

I've shown tens of thousands that just about anyone can make a fortune in real estate. But I have to tell you, in all my years of showing people how to create wealth through real estate, I believe it's never been as easy as it is today. Plus, I believe you can make more money now in real estate than ever before. And you can do it quicker.

With low interest rates and soaring appreciation, now is the time that you could become my next real estate millionaire — perhaps even a multimillionaire. Even if you're stone cold broke right now, you can still become richer than most Americans will ever be. The profit floodgates have truly opened for so many of my students. I believe you too can take advantage of all the lasting wealth that real estate can provide. And I'd like to tell you how in my updated workshop, Creating Wealth with Real Estate.

SAN FRANCISCO

Challenge #1: Find fast wealth in any city, town, or neighborhood

When I first developed my revolutionary system for buying real estate, I very publicly challenged the media to... "Send me to any city in America. Take away my wallet. Give me $100 for living expenses. In 72 hours, I'll buy an excellent piece of property, using none of my own money." Keep in mind, I would have no cash to invest. No connections. No firsthand knowledge of the real estate market where I was going. But I would have my new system for buying real estate. And that meant none of the above mattered.

DONE

I didn't buy just one property. I bought four!

The Los Angeles Times took me up on my gutsy challenge. In just 57 hours, I had taken title to not one, but to four properties — adding $722,000 in assets to my real estate portfolio. That's the equivalent of more than $10,000 an hour.

ST. LOUIS

Challenge #2: Take someone from unemployed to over $100,000 in equity

No better example of "ANYBODY CAN DO THIS" exists than when I made another major public challenge. As you might be able to guess, I'm not shy about telling others how my system works. So I declared..."Send me to any unemployment line in America. Let me select someone that is broke, out of work, and discouraged. In two days time, I'll teach my strategies for Creating Wealth. In 90 days, that person will be back on his/her feet with $5,000 in the bank."

DONE

It was in St. Louis, Missouri, where I pulled a couple out of the unemployment line and placed them on the path to wealth. Within 90 days, these first-timers earned more than $5,000 in cash. But that was just the beginning... Within the next 12 months, they garnered more than $100,000. It changed their lives forever. Think of how an extra $100,000 or more could change your life and improve your family's future. What dreams have you put aside that $100,000 could reawaken?

NEW YORK

Challenge #3: Prove anyone can do it

I've become famous as America's leading expert on purchasing real estate with no money down. I've been interviewed in newspaper, and on radio and TV. In fact, Regis Philbin challenged me on the spot to prove my system worked for anyone. I selected a young woman right out of Regis' studio audience and guided this first-timer to earning more than $20,000 in 90 days. And now, I'd like to pull you out of your chair and invite you to discover why my powerful and internationally acclaimed Creating Wealth with Real Estate program has been so hugely rewarding for people across the country — and why it can also be your path to substantial wealth.

DONE

Your turn to succeed

Can you become a millionaire? Dozens of my students have. At the FREE preview of my workshop, you'll see real-life examples of how my powerful wealth creation strategies have helped people jump into making money right away.

Challenge #4: Make you my next millionaire! STARTS NOW!

I've proved time and again that my system can work just about anywhere, anytime, and for just about anyone — even people who are flat broke. Now, I'd like to prove it can work for you.

In fact, my big mouth could make you a millionaire. That's because I've challenged myself to create millionaires all across America. Yup, I went right for the "M" word: millionaire. Raised a few eyebrows with that one. But remember, you don't need money in the bank to buy real estate. You don't even need good credit. All you need is my Creating Wealth with Real Estate system and the personal gumption to go out and apply it.

Now it's your turn to take a step toward real wealth

The wealth is out there. I will show you how it's possible to find it and grab it. Take a life-changing step toward financial independence for yourself and your family today. The road (it's more of a superhighway actually) to millionaire status begins right here. Right now. I'm hoping to create at least 1,000 millionaires. And I'd like to count you among them. There's no telling when my FREE workshop will be back in your area, because it's simply impossible for me to bring my famous workshop to every city. Grab this unique opportunity to discover hidden wealth opportunities in real estate.

Bring someone you care about

If you have a friend or family member who wants to increase their wealth, bring them to this FREE empowering event. I believe there's never been a better time to invest in real estate. Forecasts call for soaring demand for homes and rising prices. At this free event, you'll see how it's possible to ride this historic trend to personal riches.

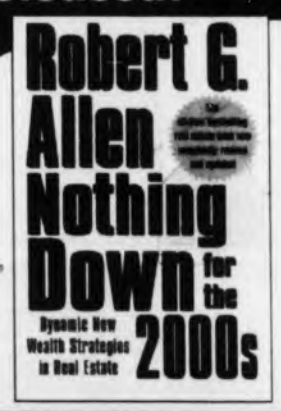
True Stories. True Success.

"Right now, I have a positive cash flow of $2,800 on one property."
— Richard Douglas, New Jersey

"We didn't take anything out of our pocket, and we bought a $250,000 property that gives us a $900 monthly cash flow."
— Guy Burns, Nevada

"I bought two pieces of property and made $25,000 in 90 days. It's so easy to do this stuff, it's amazing."
— Gary Harris, Missouri

"These are proven methods — they work. You can make $25,000 to $35,000 in a matter of 60 days or less."
— Preston Fleming, Illinois



"I just sold my first project; my net profit after all costs was $65,000. I received the check on my 40th birthday."
— Henning Van Deusen-Jensen, California

"Today has been the best day of our real estate careers. We sold our fourth house. This will put our net worth to around $1,000,000."
— John (Chuck) Neuschafer, Georgia

You will discover it's possible to:

- Buy prime real estate without a penny of your own money
- Acquire properties at below market value and put the difference in your pocket
- Profit in unexpected ways from some of the lowest mortgage rates in decades
- Generate immediate cash flow
- Turn your retirement account back into the comfy nest egg it's supposed to be
- Locate hugely lucrative properties nobody else knows about
- Find fantastic foreclosure properties before they ever hit the courthouse steps
- Build substantial monthly income

On the South Shore

APRIL 14-22, 2005

Ol' Blue Eyes is back

Former South Shore resident's show a tribute to Sinatra

Billy Kelly

On the telephone from his home in Boynton Beach, Florida, Billy Kelly jokes that he is speaking in his own voice, something that the busy celebrity impersonator and former Marshfield resident doesn't get much chance to do.

"Sometimes I don't even know what my real voice is, I do so many impressions," says Kelly, who will bring his Frank Sinatra tribute show to the Den at the Fox & Hound Wood Grille and Tavern in Quincy on April 28. Under the stage name "Billy Kay," Kelly most often tours the country with "Chairman of the Board," a musical salute to Sinatra. His repertoire of additional impressions, however, includes everyone from Jay Leno and Andy Rooney to Bobby Vinton, Sammy Davis, Jr., Neil Diamond, Rat Charles and Robert Stack. Indeed, Kelly sometimes performs a solo show, "Mr. Jukebox," in which he pays homage to a multitude of musical personalities.

Kelly honed his sound-alike skills many years ago when he was a featured regular doing impersonations and comedy bits on WXKS-FM's "Matty in the Morning" radio show and on the old "Morning Zoo" program on WZOU-FM. It was a Sinatra song parody that Kelly originally did for the latter show that brought him to the attention of the legendary crooner's record label. "I didn't choose to do Sinatra, Capitol Records chose me," recalls Kelly. "In 1993, my take-off of 'That's Life' got some national radio play that led one of the people in the Capitol marketing department to contact me. They were preparing to release 'Duets,' a new Sinatra album, and they were looking for someone who could sing Sinatra's songs live as a way to promote the release. I ended up doing promotional appearances all over the country including one at the old Tower Records on Newbury Street in Boston."

When Capitol released Sinatra's "Duets II," the company again turned to Kelly for a series of in-store appearances. "From there, I decided to focus on Sinatra full-time," explains Kelly. "I never saw Sinatra in person, so I watched concert videos of him to learn his mannerisms. I looked at everything from how he entered the stage, and with what music, to how he carried himself throughout the show."

Kelly soon realized that he had something more than just vocal sound in common with Ol' Blue Eyes. "We're both the same height, and I started to gain weight at the same age that Frank did. It's scary sometimes to realize how much we actually look alike. My tuxedoes are even custom-tailored to suggest Sinatra's signature style."

Clothes may make the man, but with Sinatra it was the voice that made the legend. "You can be anywhere in the world and if you hear Frank Sinatra, people immediately recognize the voice. There are mega-stars, superstars, stars and so on, but Sinatra was a mega-star in a class all his own."

Since leaving the South Shore, first for Florida and now New Jersey, Kelly's performing schedule has kept him on the road to New York, Florida, Atlantic City, Las Vegas and everywhere in between. The 50-year-old father of two adult sons, Billy and David, likes to tour, even if it isn't as lucrative for him as it was for Sinatra.

"This work is a labor of love for me. It will never make me rich, but it does make me happy."

J. M. Productions will present Billy Kelly, AKA "Billy Kay," in "Chairman of the Board" on April 28 for two shows at the Fox & Hound Wood Grille and Tavern, 123 Sea Street, Quincy. For tickets and information, call 617-786-7469 or visit www.jmproductionspresents.com.

The performers take their final bow in Picturesque, the all-new 27th season show of the Big Apple Circus.

Big Apple Circus has something for everyone

Students from the Cole School in Norwell were among hundreds of children with sensory inpairments will gathering beneath the Big Apple Circus's Big Top tent at the Bayside Expo Center recently to experience the circus at Circus of the Senses®.

"Circus of the Senses is at the core of the Big Apple Circus's mission to reconnect people with positive emotions. Circus of the Senses makes the wondrous sights and sounds of the ring accessible to a broader audience."According to Big Apple Circus founder and artistic director Paul Binder and co-founder and creative director Michael Christensen.

This free performance provided headsets to children with vision impairments to hear a lively, running description of the action in the ring narrated by Paul Binder and Michael Christensen. Spotlighted American Sign Language interpreters narrated the show to the hearing-impaired. Following the performance, a group of sight-impaired children were invited into the Circus ring for a "touch session." They were able to feel the sawdust, touch the fabric of the costumes and meet some of the performers — both the two-legged and the four-legged ones.

The South Shore connections with the Big Apple Circus continued this weekend when the South Shore Circus Band played its annual concert outside the Big Top.

"Picturesque," the Big Apple Circus' 27th Season brings the work of artists Toulouse-Lautrec, Chagall and Picasso, who drew inspiration from the circus, to life with acrobats and jugglers, birds and horses, flying men and women, and clowns. Circus, the great performing art, blends with great visual art and vibrant music in a feast for the senses that offers something for everyone.

"Picturesque" will be under the Big Top at Dorchester's Bayside Expo Center through May 8. Tickets are available through Ticketmaster at (617) 931-2787, ticketmaster.com <http://www.ticketmaster.com/> and at all Ticketmaster outlets. For group sales, inquiries about wheelchair-accessible seating or for additional information call the Ticket Info Line at (800) 922-3772.

IMPLANTABLE HEARING INSTRUMENTS

One alternative to traditional hearing instruments is the implantable hearing instrument, which consists of a tiny magnet placed inside the middle ear and an external sound processor. The implant procedure involves lifting up the eardrum, providing access to the middle ear, after which a microphone is placed on a segment of the tiny bones in the middle ear. The eardrum flap is then closed. The entire procedure takes about half an hour under local anesthesia. Because the implantable instrument utilizes electromagnetic waves instead of air pressure to amplify volume, it eliminates pressure buildup, feedback, distortion, and squealing that may afflict standard hearing instruments. As a result of the increased comfort, users have more reason to wear the instruments regularly.

At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER we carry the most advanced hearing aids available today. After we determine your particular level of hearing impairment, we'll discuss your options, answer your questions, and let you know what to expect from whichever hearing instrument you choose. From the moment you walk through our doors at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth we guarantee you'll receive the most professional care from the most caring professionals. Call us at 781-337-1144 to arrange a free hearing evaluation. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. Implantable hearing systems are appropriate for individuals with mild to moderate hearing loss from nerve damage to the hair cells in the ear.

The real Jurassic park

Help dig up dinosaur bones in Montana's PaleoWorld

By NANCY CHAPMAN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

HELL CREEK FORMATION, Mont. (The fossil was embedded entirely in sandstone, its discovery made possible mostly by the naivete of the man looking for it.

He moved a rock, and there it was.

He wasn't a paleontologist, or a ranch owner surveying his property. He was a tourist, a father who had brought his 6-year-old son out to the proverbial middle of nowhere for a bonding experience. Like many children, the boy was obsessed with dinosaurs.

Welcome to northeast Montana's Badlands, where an entire triceratops skeleton was unearthed in 1980 and where remains of a young tyrannosaurus rex recently yielded real dinosaur tissue. It is here that PaleoWorld escorts adventurous tourists hoping to unearth some finds of their own.

A replica of a T.rex head in the Garfield County Museum in Montana.

Joseph "Paleo Joe" Hatcher is the paleontologist in charge of the expedition at PaleoWorld in Montana.

No training in paleontology is needed. If you have the money and the desire, you can join in the research.

PaleoWorld is an ambitious upstart, a nonprofit organization dedicated to teaching and studying paleontology.

There are real scientists and science students at the dig site, 25 miles west of Jordan, a tiny outpost of civilization in the midst of miles of desolation. Though the landscape is devoid of the things that make life livable for humans, this is a place rich in fossils.

Scientists say this land-locked part of the United States was once under water, home to thousands of sea creatures. Hard for the human mind to comprehend, but once you find fossilized turtle shells among the sage brush, you'll believe it.

The wind is a constant companion and the weather is always a challenge. In the spring, frequent rainfall threatens to make the roads impassable, even for residents accustomed to such hardships. Later in the season the sun beats down relentlessly, and temperatures soar into the upper 90s (or higher.

The terrain too is challenging (there are no steps leading down to the dig site. This isn't a tour, it's real exploration, and creature comforts are few.

Joseph "Paleo Joe" Hatcher is the paleontologist in charge of the expedition, his youthful enthusiasm and boyish charm bringing a friendly ambience to the adventure. This former football player peppers his comments with references to "Star Wars," and relentlessly teases the college students who stay with him through the season, building their resumes in hopes of a career in science.

Paying customers are treated more courteously, and Hatcher goes out of his way to please.

I joined an excursion in June, and our first day was rained out. Hatcher was determined to go out the second day: He had tourists and he was behind in his research into wash sites for a study on paleo-ecology.

Off we went in a beat-up four-wheel drive vehicle that slipped wildly through the mud. Cows peered curiously over the fences that lined the road.

I was skeptical, but within half an hour of arriving at the site, I found my first fossil. I had taken my rock hammer and plunked it down in a random spot. It hit something hard on the first swing. Turned out to 3-inch piece of fossilized bone under the muck.

Shortly after that, father and son unearthed the mysterious bone compressed and embedded in sandstone, and Hatcher's plans to research wash sites that day were quickly abandoned.

Excavating the bone proved to be difficult. "I've never had to work so hard to get out a fossil," Hatcher commented as he worked at it with a rock hammer and a screwdriver, trying to break apart the rock without damaging the precious link to a time long gone. He used a tube of paleoglue (yes, there is such a thing (on the fossil whenever it appeared likely to crumble.

While he worked, another tourist, a 12-year-old boy, climbed a butte nearby. His excited voice crackled over the walkie-talkie, repeatedly reporting that he'd found bone fragments.

Below Hatcher, one of the students picked meticulously through the sand. What she found was tiny but interesting: a raptor tooth and a complete fish vertebrae.

When Hatcher finally exposed the bone, he whistled. "Look at that. That's the first time sunlight ever hit that bone . . . 65 million years in the darkness, and it's gonna get sunburned today."

At lunch he confidently predicted it was a triceratops rib bone. It was a safe bet: paleontologists call the area Trike Country, for the abundance of triceratops fossils found there.

But there are plenty of other fossils lying about in plain sight on the ranch. Another day's finds included tyrannosaurus rex teeth and fragments of turtle shells.

I kept my eyes focused downward as the group walked through another location and was rewarded when I spotted a round object with ridges. I was sure was a fossilized fish eye. Turned out it was a tiny American Indian artifact, akin to a bead that was worn in a necklace.

Most serious scientific research is saved for when the paying customers aren't around. On my visit, Hatcher was excited about two discoveries: a skull (belonging to a duck-billed diplosuchas, previously unknown to Montana (and a striation in the rocks, which he had identified as a K-T boundary, the marker between the Cretaceous period and the Triassic period.

Even the 6-year-old seemed pleased, running about and striking things with a rock hammer.

In addition to working at the dig site, guests are welcome to visit the laboratory in Jordan.

Here Hatcher patiently instructed kids in the fine art of restoring fossils, giving them tasks they could handle, such as using a toothbrush soaked with hydrogen peroxide to remove eons worth of gunk.

For adventurous would-be scientists, it was all a thrill.

One week Dinosaur Expeditions are offered June through August, and priced from $700 per adult, $350 per child 15 and younger (airfare, most meals and lodging are extra). Special rates are available for families. One-day digs are also offered.

Cook-only meeting set for Tuesday

Selectmen to focus on housing project

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There has been a lot of talk surrounding an April 30 wastewater deadline for the Cook Estate property. However, that deadline is in place only for the parties involved to be satisfied the town has a solid plan for a wastewater solution.

On April 30, if an agreement can be reached, the town will have the rest of the year to work out the wastewater logistics. In addition, building plans must pass muster with the planning board, as well as selectmen before the project can break ground.

This news is significant because the proposed, 95-unit Cook housing project is seen as going a long way toward providing affordable and market-rate housing for the town's senior citizens, many of whom want to downsize or can no longer afford high property taxes.

In an effort to iron out as many of the wastewater details as possible before a conference with the Cook heirs, other meetings regarding the project were scheduled. The Cook working group, which has been charged with investigating all solutions for the Cook property, met Thursday at 4 p.m. after the Mariner went to press and is slated to meet with selectmen Tuesday, April 26. The meeting on the 26th will be dedicated solely to the Cook project.

When babies are born, they are wrapped tightly in a blanket to make them feel safe and warm. As children get older, they can often be seen carrying around the same blanket, sometimes with a tattered edge that shows it has continually wrapped them in love.

Blankets have a way of bringing comfort, and when a child is very sick, they need to feel secure more than any other time in their lives. To help make sure every child who is battling a disease has a special blanket created for the sole purpose of helping them pull through, volunteers in Colorado began Project Linus — named after the Peanuts comic strip character created by Charles Schultz who always carries a security blanket — which has distributed roughly 900,000 homemade blankets to hospitals around the country since 1995.

In Cohasset, the First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church began its chapter of Project Linus one year ago this June and already they have sent 79 blankets to area hospitals. First Parish Project Coordinator Janet Campbell said the most recent group of donations were made during a session in February, and 48 blankets were divided among the Shriners Hospital in Boston, the South Shore Special Care Nursery at South Shore Hospital, and Project Hope in Dorchester.

"Like any volunteer project, it makes you feel so good and what you get back is far more than what you give," she said.

Campbell said there are many Cohasset residents who gather together to sew or knit their blankets, "And believe it or not, some people quilt them," she said. As long as the fabric is washable, there are children eager to receive, she said.

While many of the participants are women, she said men and even children gather to help. "We do have a lot of laughs, but it's a good excuse to gather," she said. She added they are trying to involve more children in the project and have thought of incorporating it as a church school project.

"It's an easy way to learn how to sew," said Campbell, adding her 15-year-old daughter recently sewed a blanket for the cause. Square blankets made out of fleece are a perfect way to become acquainted with sewing, and they are really cozy for the children.

When the donations are made, sometimes chapters will videotape the children being given their blankets. Campbell said two weeks ago her chapter gathered to see the expressions on the children's faces who received the blankets they had created.

"It's very sweet," she said, adding the children who are going to be in the hospital for a long time or are having a traumatic procedure done are allowed to choose the pattern

Development could provide fiscal relief

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset has been experiencing budgetary troubles as a result of an increase in the cost of services, a decrease in state aid, and not enough revenue to make up the difference. However, there are some who think the developments currently on the table could provide the monetary cushion the town needs to get back on its feet.

Member of the Cook working group Dave Fulton, compiled a preliminary draft of a financial analysis which indicates, although the numbers could change in the future, that the town could make as much as $7.6 million from all the fees associated with building Avalon, Cedarmere and the Cook Estate projects. If the town could count on that amount of revenue coming into the town, events such as the $400,000 override which was passed last year and the $400,000 override which will be on the special election ballot Saturday, May 21, could be a thing of the past.

Fulton works for GLC Development Resources, LLC, a company which provides real-estate services to clients, with a focus on development. He recently compiled a similar financial analysis for the town of Bourne for a 600-unit development.

"I'm surprised no one has looked at it this way before," he said of the potential these projects have financially for the town.

Any new development in town

Lyon was a natural leader

Cohasset resident and Vietnam veteran CPT John Paul Lyon will always be remembered by the CHS class of 1962 as a star athlete with a winning smile.

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

CPT John Paul Lyon was always a strong leader — a perfect trait for any military man. From the time he spent with Cohasset Boy Scout Troop 28 to his final days with his fellow soldiers during Vietnam, he was always glad to serve his community and his country.

But as was the fate of many young men who went off to Vietnam, Lyon never returned to the seaside town he called home after shipping off for duty. Thirty-six years ago this week, Lyon paid the ultimate sacrifice in the name of freedom, while leading fellow soldiers on a mission overseas.

Born on March 29, 1944, Lyon was the second of three children in his family. In 1956, he moved to Cohasset, where he lived at 45 Joy Place with his parents, older sister Alice, and younger brother Jim.

Lyon had a flair for building, and his brother Jim remembers the two of them working together for their father's building business. By the ages of 10 and 12, they were putting up sheet rock.

Lyon's love of building carried through to his high school years when his mentor, art teacher Tom Lucas, took him under his wing and invited him to help remodel the big house on Bourne Rock overlooking Cohasset village, after school and during the summer. Lyon won a scholarship to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts Art School, which he attended during his high school years. Lyon's high school yearbook quote reads, "Peace be within thy walls," a true testament to his love of construction.

Last day of school set

The school committee voted to approve June 28 as the last day of school for students and June 30 as the last day for teachers — assuming Mother Nature cooperates and doesn't send any more snow to Cohasset! Students are required to attend school for 180 days per year, while by contract, teachers are required to attend for 184. Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said she knows the late release date will affect summer programs which are held in the schools. She will provide more information on the status of those programs as it becomes available.

School committee meeting date change

The school committee had planned to hold its next meeting April 28, but with Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh at a conference, the committee has agreed to hold off on meeting until May 5. Members of the board thought taking that extra week would provide time to reorganize and provide new school committee members with background information before their first meeting. New school committee members elected April 9 include Alfred Slanetz for the three-year term, and Pam Wilson for the one-year term.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall as of Tuesday morning this week:

Board of Assessors, April 26, 4 p.m.
Harbor Committee, May 10, 7 p.m.
Planning Board, April 26, 7 p.m.
School Committee, May 5, 7 p.m., high school conference room
Selectmen, April 26, 7 p.m.
Sewer Commission, April 25, 6 p.m.,
Zoning Board of Appeals, May 9, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise. Call the Town Clerk at 781-383-4100 for updates.

FAST FACTS

Cohasset has 31.46 acres, 21.57 of which are water.

Pending projects could spell financial relief for the town will need a water connection, which Fulton estimated at $3,300 per connection, which is a one time fee to the developer. He estimated non-age restricted housing units, such as those in Avalon, would use roughly 110 gallons per day, per bedroom.

Avalon is looking to build 200 units, for a total of roughly 36,000 gallons per day, which could yield $23,910 in quarterly water usage fees from residents. Add on the water service quarterly fee set at $29 per meter, and with 15 meters, Avalon would yield another $435, for a quarterly total of $24,345, or $97,380 per year. Connection fees charged to the developer would cost roughly $660,000.

While Avalon would yield the most money in terms of water usage, Cedarmere and Cook would bring in significant revenues as well. Fulton estimated these age restricted housing project will use roughly 150 gallons per day per unit, which means at 105 units, Cedarmere would use 15,750 gallons per day, and bring in roughly $10,461 in quarterly revenue from residents. Add on the water service fees charged to its 78 meters and the project will yield another $2,262 for a quarterly total of $12,723, or $50,892 per year. Water connection fees charged to Cedarmere developers would be roughly $257,000.

The Cook Estate is estimated to use 14,250 gallons per day per unit for a quarterly total of $9,464. Water service fees to 60 meters would yield $1,740 for a quarterly total of $11,204 and a yearly total of $44,816. One time water connection fees charged to the developer would cost roughly $198,000.

Using Fulton's estimates, one-time water connection fees from the three developers alone could total a little more than $1.1 million, not to mention the recurring revenue from water usage and service fees which could be as high as $193,090 per year.

Sewer fees

If all three projects are built, the town can be guaranteed it will bring in revenue from water fees, although the estimates provided by Fulton could change. However, where the town would really benefit is from sewer connection fees charged to developers, which although they are a one-time charge, are more than double the water connection fees.

Assuming there was a way to hook up all three projects to the Elm Street wastewater treatment plant, and assuming the Sewer Commission would collect a one-time $15,000 per unit connection fee, the town could receive a one-time payment of $6 million.

With 200 units, Avalon would yield the highest sewer payments. Assuming the development discharges 36,000 gallons of wastewater per day, and residents are charged a quarterly fee of $6.70 per 100 cubic feet, Fulton estimates the development could yield $29,021 in quarterly revenue for sewer usage. With a sewer service fee of $35 per unit per quarter, Avalon would bring in an additional $7,000 per quarter, which together with usage fees yields $144,086 in yearly revenue. The town would also receive $3 million from the developer in one-time sewer connection fees.

Cedarmere's 105 units are expected to discharge roughly 15,750 gallons of wastewater per day, which would bring in roughly $12,697 in quarterly revenue. Add on sewer service fees and an additional $3,675 would be paid out to the town quarterly. Annually, residents would pay $65,487 in sewer fees to the town. One-time charges to the developer would provide the town with $1,575,000.

The Cook Estate, with 95 proposed units of housing, is projected to discharge 14,250 gallons of wastewater per day and usage fees to residents would total $11,488. Couple that with service fees and an additional $3,325 would be paid to the town quarterly. Yearly, the town might expect to receive $59,251 in ongoing sewer revenue. One time connection fees paid by the developer could total $1,425,000.

Other potential smaller fees the town could collect from new residents are auto excise taxes, estimated at $200 per unit, which would yield $80,000 assuming 400 units. In addition, the town would receive a one-time fee for the transaction of the Cook Estate land which could be roughly $700,000. There will also be building permit fees associated with each project and ongoing tax revenue.

The cost?

Although the projects will have a positive financial impact on the town in many ways, new development will bring more people to town to share the services it provides.

Fulton estimated the police and fire stations will not require additional manning or equipment as a result of the additional residents, but did attribute a cost for services for each at $100,000 for the police station and $75,000 for the fire department.

In addition, he assumed town buildings such as the library, and community center as well as the Cohasset Elder Affairs office will be utilized even more with the influx of residents, and said $50,000 should cover that cost.

However, public works services such as trash collection, landscape maintenance and road maintenance will be taken care of within the developments, so the town's DPW will not be affected, nor will the Town Hall office administration.

Fulton said both the police and fire chiefs were going to be reviewing his analysis this week as well as Town Manager Bill Griffin and they would be getting back to him with any questions or comments.

Sewer and water fees from development could generate big bucks for Cohasset

Estimates compiled by Cook working group member Dave Fulton show the town could receive up to $6 million in fees if the Avalon, Cedarmere and Cook projects are built.

	Annual water fees (resident)	One-time water connection fees (developer)	Annual sewer fees (resident)	One-time sewer connection fees (developer)
Avalon	$97,381	$660,000	$144,086	$3 million
Cedarmere	$50,891	$257,400	$65,487	$1,575,000
Cook Estate	$44,818	$198,000	$59,251	$1,425,000
Totals	$193,090	$1,115,400	$268,824	$6 million

Selectmen to focus on Cook Project at Tuesday meeting

Dave Fulton is a member of the Cook working group, and he has been involved with the Cook project since its inception. Fulton works for GLC Development Resources, which worked with the town in the beginning of the Cook developer selection process. He said in his opinion, there has been so much focus on the wastewater portion of the project, the town has lost sight of many other important factors of the project.

"A lot of people have lost the point," he said, which is to provide affordable housing for seniors in town, and a wastewater solution does not mean the project is in the clear. He noted the project will be filed under the Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which means it will need to come before the planning board to obtain a special permit, just as Cedarmere did. Cedarmere, a 105-unit senior housing project slated for Beechwood Street, was the first project to file under the town's senior overlay bylaw.

Cedarmere developers met with the planning board prior to submitting plans for their project to gain input as to what it would like to see, and came back with drawings catered to what the town requested. During the process, everything from the buildings to the lighting to traffic concerns were aired, and much of the discussion was sparked by abutters to the site. It took roughly eight months for the project to receive planning board approval alone.

However, Fulton said with the measures which have been taken so far with the Cook Estate, he thinks discussion with abutters should be somewhat limited. The property, located on Sohier Street, is flanked by the Deer Hill and Osgood schools on one side and the Stop and Shop Plaza on the other, which leaves residents on Fairoaks Lane and Red Fox Lane as the major groups of abutters. Fulton said he met with residents from both streets to discuss the project while he was still acting as a consultant for the town, and as a result, buffers as well as lighting restrictions will be put in place to limit the project's impact.

In addition to obtaining a special permit, the project will file its affordable units with the state as a LIP (Local Initiative) project which Cedarmere also did, which will require the Board of Selectmen sign off on the project as well. "It's still under a lot of review," Fulton said.

There have been some questions regarding the Land Disposition Agreement the town was supposed to sign with Northland Residential, the company the town is working with to build on the Cook Estate. An LDA is similar to a Purchase and Sale agreement. Fulton said at this point in time, the company has not yet signed an agreement with the town, but because there has been so much time and effort put into the project, any signed agreement would need to be flexible to allow the developers an "out" if a wastewater solution cannot be found for the site. He said the town is currently holding a $100,000 deposit from Northland as well as the written response from the company regarding the RFP, which is binding enough. "We cannot force them to build this without a wastewater solution," he said.

Without a sewer connection, the project must obtain a groundwater discharge permit from the Department of Environmental Protection, which is required for any systems discharging more than 10,000 gallons per day. The Cook Estate development will discharge an estimated 15,000 gallons per day once complete.

If the project was downsized, soil tests have indicated the site would be able to accommodate 60 units of housing. Recently, Northland presented a possible alternative which would ask the town to sewer the affordable portion of the 95-unit project, leaving 60 units to be dealt with on site.

There has also been talk about allowing the entire 95 units to tie into the town of Hull's sewer system. The town of Hull has excess capacity in its wastewater treatment plant. However, that option would need to be thoroughly discussed both in town and with Hull officials to determine whether it would be viable.

Flashback — Voters at the 2003 special Fall Town Meeting allocated $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre parcel of Cook-owned property, located off Sohier Street, and the property was then marketed to developers along with the town's 8.7 adjoining acres.

One year ago this March, selectmen voted unanimously in favor of allowing the Northland Residential Corporation to build its proposed senior housing project on the combined property. The project as presented entailed building 95 units of senior housing called "The Villages at Deer Hill."

Project Linus Chapter at First Parish makes blankets with TLC

they would like. Children also know how special the gift they receive is when they read, "Made With Tender Loving Care for Project Linus," on the tag sewn on each blanket.

"Like any volunteer project, it makes you feel so good and what you get back is far more than what you give."

— Janet Campbell, project coordinator

Campbell said even premature babies are given blankets and often they are draped over the top of the incubators to mimic the darkness of the womb. When they are strong enough to be taken home, their parents will wrap the baby in the blanket that has watched over them during their hospital stay.

But Campbell said the blankets are not just given to children, they are given to mothers who are expecting and are in the hospital with complications. She recalled the story of a woman who was pregnant with quadruplets and all four of the babies passed away shortly after birth. However, the mother has a picture of all four together, lying on a blanket made by Project Linus, and she said knowing someone who had never met her had taken the time to make something for her and her babies, to help them get through a difficult time, meant so much. "It made her feel so good to know someone cared about her," Campbell said.

First Parish makes blankets all year round and Campbell said one of the destinations for their donations will be Africa. She said after hearing children in an orphanage were sleeping with burlap or wool blankets, her group decided to make some soft, comfy blankets to be sent overseas. She said someone from the parish will be traveling this fall and will bring the blankets over with them.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Mary Parker folds a blanket which will be added to the pile.

Janet Campbell works on a blanket for Project Linus, which is named after the Peanuts character.

Each blanket made for Project Linus carries a label stating "Made with Tender Loving Care for Project Linus."

Campbell said they are always looking for more people to become involved with Project Linus and said donations of materials are always welcome from those who might not be as crafty as others. She said the group also accepts donated store-bought blankets and Project Linus volunteers will sew on the tag making it an official Project Linus blanket. Blankets can also be donated in memory of a loved one.

"We are always grateful for every blanket and there is always a need," she said.

For more information on Project Linus, please visit the Web site at www.projectlinus.org. To become involved with the First Parish chapter, please contact Janet Campbell at (781) 383-0665, or donations may be dropped off at the church, located on North Main Street.

Blanket Guidelines: Do's and don'ts

DO make blankets from new, clean, washable materials in infant, child, or teen friendly colors. Remember, these blankets are meant to be colorful, cheerful, and cuddly.

DO crochet, knit, quilt, or tie your blankets.

DO make blankets from 100 percent cotton fabric, flannel, polar fleece, or acrylic yarn.

DO secure the batting into outer seams and if the blanket is tied, please anchor it every 4-6 inches.

DO weave in all yarn ends on crochet and knitted blankets.

DO check your blanket carefully for straight pins!!!

DO provide your name and address with the blanket.

DO NOT make your blankets out of tapestry, burlap, upholstery fabric, felt, vinyl, wool, or wool yarn. Also, pleas e do not donate these types of fabric.

DO NOT attach buttons or similar decorative items to a blanket. They can be a choking hazard.

DO NOT use paint on the surface of your blanket.

Recommended blanket sizes

Baby: 36 in. x 36 in.
Child: 40 in. x 60 in.
Teen: 45 in. x 72 in.

Blanket notes

Blankets with a smell of smoke or strong chemicals, even perfumed fabric softeners, or pet hair on them may produce a severe allergic reaction in children and can therefore not be accepted. Unfortunately, washing the blankets does not always solve the problem.

For knitted or crocheted blankets, please use small knitting needles or crochet hooks if making preemie/baby blankets. Little fingers and toes or medical instruments can get caught in big stitches. If you prefer using larger size crochet hooks or knitting needles, please consider making bigger afghans in larger child and teen sizes.

Fred Koed rallies for CG station

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Federal funding has been cut back so much that Scituate's station is only able to operate six months of the year.

Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed said he would like to see Cohasset support any efforts to bring the Scituate Coast Guard station back into full-time operation.

At a recent benefit for the survivors of the Lady Lorraine — a Scituate commercial fishing vessel which caught on fire at sea in late February, claiming the life of one crew member — Koed said one of the resounding concerns among fishermen from all the neighboring towns is the limited ability of the Scituate Coast Guard station.

Federal funding has been cut back so much that Scituate's station is only able to operate six months of the year, from May to October, which is recreational boating season. Those on the seas during the rest of the year must rely on the Coast Guard Station at Point Allerton in Hull, and many times other local fishermen or residents in boats respond to the scene of an accident before they arrive. If Hull is responding to another emergency, Koed said the closest Coast Guard station is in Sandwich on Cape Cod.

Koed said the issue is a federal one, and he would urge Cohasset to support any efforts to reopen Scituate's Coast Guard station full time. "It's time for the towns to come together," he said.

RTF gets high marks

President of HAZMATEAM, Inc. Leo Traverse recently paid a visit to the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility and in a letter to DPW Supt. Carl Sestito said among the many he has seen, Cohasset's stands out.

He said he appreciated DPW employees taking time from their busy schedules to show him around and chuckled when two employees picked up a "scrap of paper," during the tour with the attitude that it should never have been there. "Keeping these areas clean and spotless in any recycling operation is truly a difficult task," Traverse said.

Traverse said the information and pictures he took while on site will be used during the 24-hour Household Waste program sponsored by the Cape Cod Extension University of Massachusetts to "show off" what a properly managed recycling center should look like. "Cohasset's knowledge and understanding of the facility's health, safety, and environmental requirements is truly superb," he said.

Traverse said Sestito has done a superb job in reorganizing, managing, and keeping the Cohasset Recycling Center in "showroom condition."

Earth Day InfoFest; alternative energy

The second Annual Climate InfoFest, will be held April 23, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the DCR Mary Jeanette Murray Bathhouse, Hull. Free. Interested environmental groups or businesses may call before April 16, to reserve a space. 781-925-9066 or 781-335-0249. Visit www.sustainableSS.org for information.

Anyone interested in serving on the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee should submit their name to Town Manager Bill Griffin at Town Hall or call the Selectmen's Office at 781-383-4105.

MBTA board opening

After 40 years representing Cohasset on the MBTA Advisory Board, Louis Eaton of Beach Street has resigned from his post, leaving an opening on the committee.

"During this long period since 1965 I have served for a number of years including currently on their Executive Committee and several times on the Nominating Committee while attending approximately 200 meetings in Boston. I think the only meetings I missed were when I was abroad and on at least one occasion Merle Brown attended in my place," Eaton said in his letter of resignation.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said 40 years of service to the town "is certainly worthy of note," and he asked the board to send a letter of thanks to Eaton.

Residents who are interested in the open position on the MBTA Advisory Board may send a letter of intent to Griffin at Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., or call the Selectmen's office at (781) 383-4105. The next meeting of the MBTA Advisory Board is slated for June 7, 2005.

Water main flushing to begin on April 25

The Water Department will perform its semi-annual flushing of water mains between April 25 and May 31. Flushing will generally take place Monday through Thursday between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. In general, the flushing program will be conducted according to the sequence indicated below:

- King Street and Beechwood Street Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Scituate line and Brewster Road Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Hingham Lumber and Sohier Street Area;
- Lower King Street, Cedar Street, Forest Avenue and North Main Street to Ripley Road Areas;
- Pond Street, Clay Spring Road, Pleasant Street and Hillside Areas;
- Ripley Road, Highland Avenue, Beach Street, Elm Street and Atlantic Avenue Areas;
- Border Street, Summer Street and South Main Street Areas;
- Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road and Linden Drive Areas.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur and residents are advised not to wash clothes during flushing.

Temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the cable channel for schedule changes.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur and residents are advised not to wash clothes during flushing. If your water is discolored, run the cold water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears and avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank. If clothing becomes stained it can be cleaned by using "Iron Out", which is available free from the Water Department.

Please call the Water Department at (781) 383-0057 with any questions.

Cohasset's Elizabeth Hagearty meets Wally the Green Monster!

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

HONORARY BAT GIRL

Red Sox Fenway Ambassadors selected 10-year-old Elizabeth Hagearty as Honorary Bat Girl at Thursday's Red Sox-Yankees game.

The Cohasset resident helped Red Sox bat boys with pre-game duties and watched batting practice from the Boston dugout. Elizabeth was also introduced with Wally the Green Monster during a special pre-game ceremony.

Elizabeth, who attended Thursday's game with her father Dan, is a fifth grader at Deer Hill Elementary. She enjoys playing soccer and basketball, and is participating in softball this year for the first time.

SCOUT LEADER

Louise Smullen of North Main Street received recognition of her 45 years as a Girl Scout at the Girl Scouts, Patriots Trail Council dinner on May 14. For 30 years Louise led the Brownie and Junior troops in Cohasset..

Louise is a great role model for all the leaders!

MAKING THE GRADE

The following Cohasset students are listed on the St. Paul's School Second Trimester Honor Roll:

On the Principal's List (All a's) are: Eric Vanderpool (grade 8) and Katherine French (grade 6).

Achieving First Honors (All A's and B's) are: Gabrielle Rodman (grade 7) and Brendan Voke (grade 6).

We are proud of all of you!

DEAN'S LIST

Cohasset residents are proving to be top students at American University in Washington, D.C. Leslie Thornton and Rachel McElroy both earned dean's list honors for the fall term with a 3.5 grade-point-average or better.

Both women are juniors in the School of International Science and are majoring in international studies.

Congratulations!

TRINITY LACROSSE

Cohasset's own Curtis Kahn is tearing up the field during Trinity College men's lacrosse games this spring.

Curt, a sophomore, recently scored three goals and added one assist in the 13-6 win over Keene State.

Way to go, Curt!

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

William L. Burke III, Headmaster of St. Sebastian's School in Needham, has announced the honor roll recipients for the third quarter 2004-2005 school year. Recipients of these academic awards fall into three categories: High Honors, maintains an A- or above in all subjects; Honors With Distinction, maintains a B or above in all subjects; and Honors, maintains a B- or above in all subjects.

Eighth-grader, Dominic Jancaterino, is in this elite group. Dominic, who is the son of Dr. Jon and Patricia Jancaterino, earned Honors w/ Distinction.

Awesome!

VO-TECH HONORS

Hat's off to Cohasset's Sean Silvia, who earned placement on the honor roll at South Shore Vocational Technical High School in Hanover. Keep up the good work, Sean!

TREASURE HUNT

Calling all those who are interested in dropping off donations for Our World's upcoming estate sale! Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum is behind the new Paul Pratt Library and the entrance is off Sohier Street. The museum is a wonderful asset to our community and worthy of your support!

Donations of all types of furniture, mirrors, pictures, rugs, lamps, tableware, table linens, books and bric-a-brac are being sought and can be dropped off from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, April 30 at the museum. Our World is also open for drop-offs on Wednesdays from 4 to 6 p.m. and Thursdays from noon to 2 p.m., or please call museum's Director Michele Dupuis at 781-383-3198 to arrange a specific drop-off time.

The estate sale, which will be coordinated by Cohasset's own Lord's & Ladies, will be held at Our World on Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Proceeds generated from this estate sSale will go towards the installation of the museum's new bio-diversity exhibit slated to open September 2005.

If you are interested in volunteering at the estate sale or for an upcoming Museum event, call Debbie Kuppens at (781) 383-6399. The entrance to Our World is located at 100 Sohier St.

CALLING ALL GREEN THUMBS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will meet at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, April 26 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. Following the business meeting members will be treated to a creative flower arranging program by Dana Markos and Susanne Csnogor, co-authors of "Flowers for the Home". These floral design experts will demonstrate spring and summer arrangements sure to inspire all who attend. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m.

ASP FUNDRAISER!

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be holding a fundraiser on April 30 (rain date May 7) from 9a.m. and 3p.m.. This will be a yard sale/ flea market/ craft fair in the Super Stop and Shop parking lot of Route 3A. Fun for the whole family, including face painting, food and lots of interesting items to peruse. You might even find a great present for Mother's Day!

ANNIE COMES TO TOWN!

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents the world's best loved musical, Annie, at the Cohasset Town hall on May 6, 7, 13, 14, 20 and 21 at 7:30 p.m. and May 8, 15 and 22 at 2 p.m. Join Annie, the spunky depression-era orphan determined to find the parents who abandoned her years before on the steps of a NY city orphanage run by the cruel Miss Hannigan. In adventure after adventure, Annie foils Miss Hannigan's evil machinations, befriends president Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and finds a new home with billionaire Oliver (Daddy) Warbucks, his personal secretary Grace Farrell and a lovable mutt named Sandy. An Annie Look-Alike contest will be held at all three Sunday matinees. Come dressed as Annie and enter to win exciting prizes.

Tickets are $12 each and can be purchased at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Book Shop in Scituate, at the door, or by calling 617-697-2115. Girl Scout troops receive a $2 discount per ticket when purchased by phone. Contact Susan Jaffe at 781-383-9858.

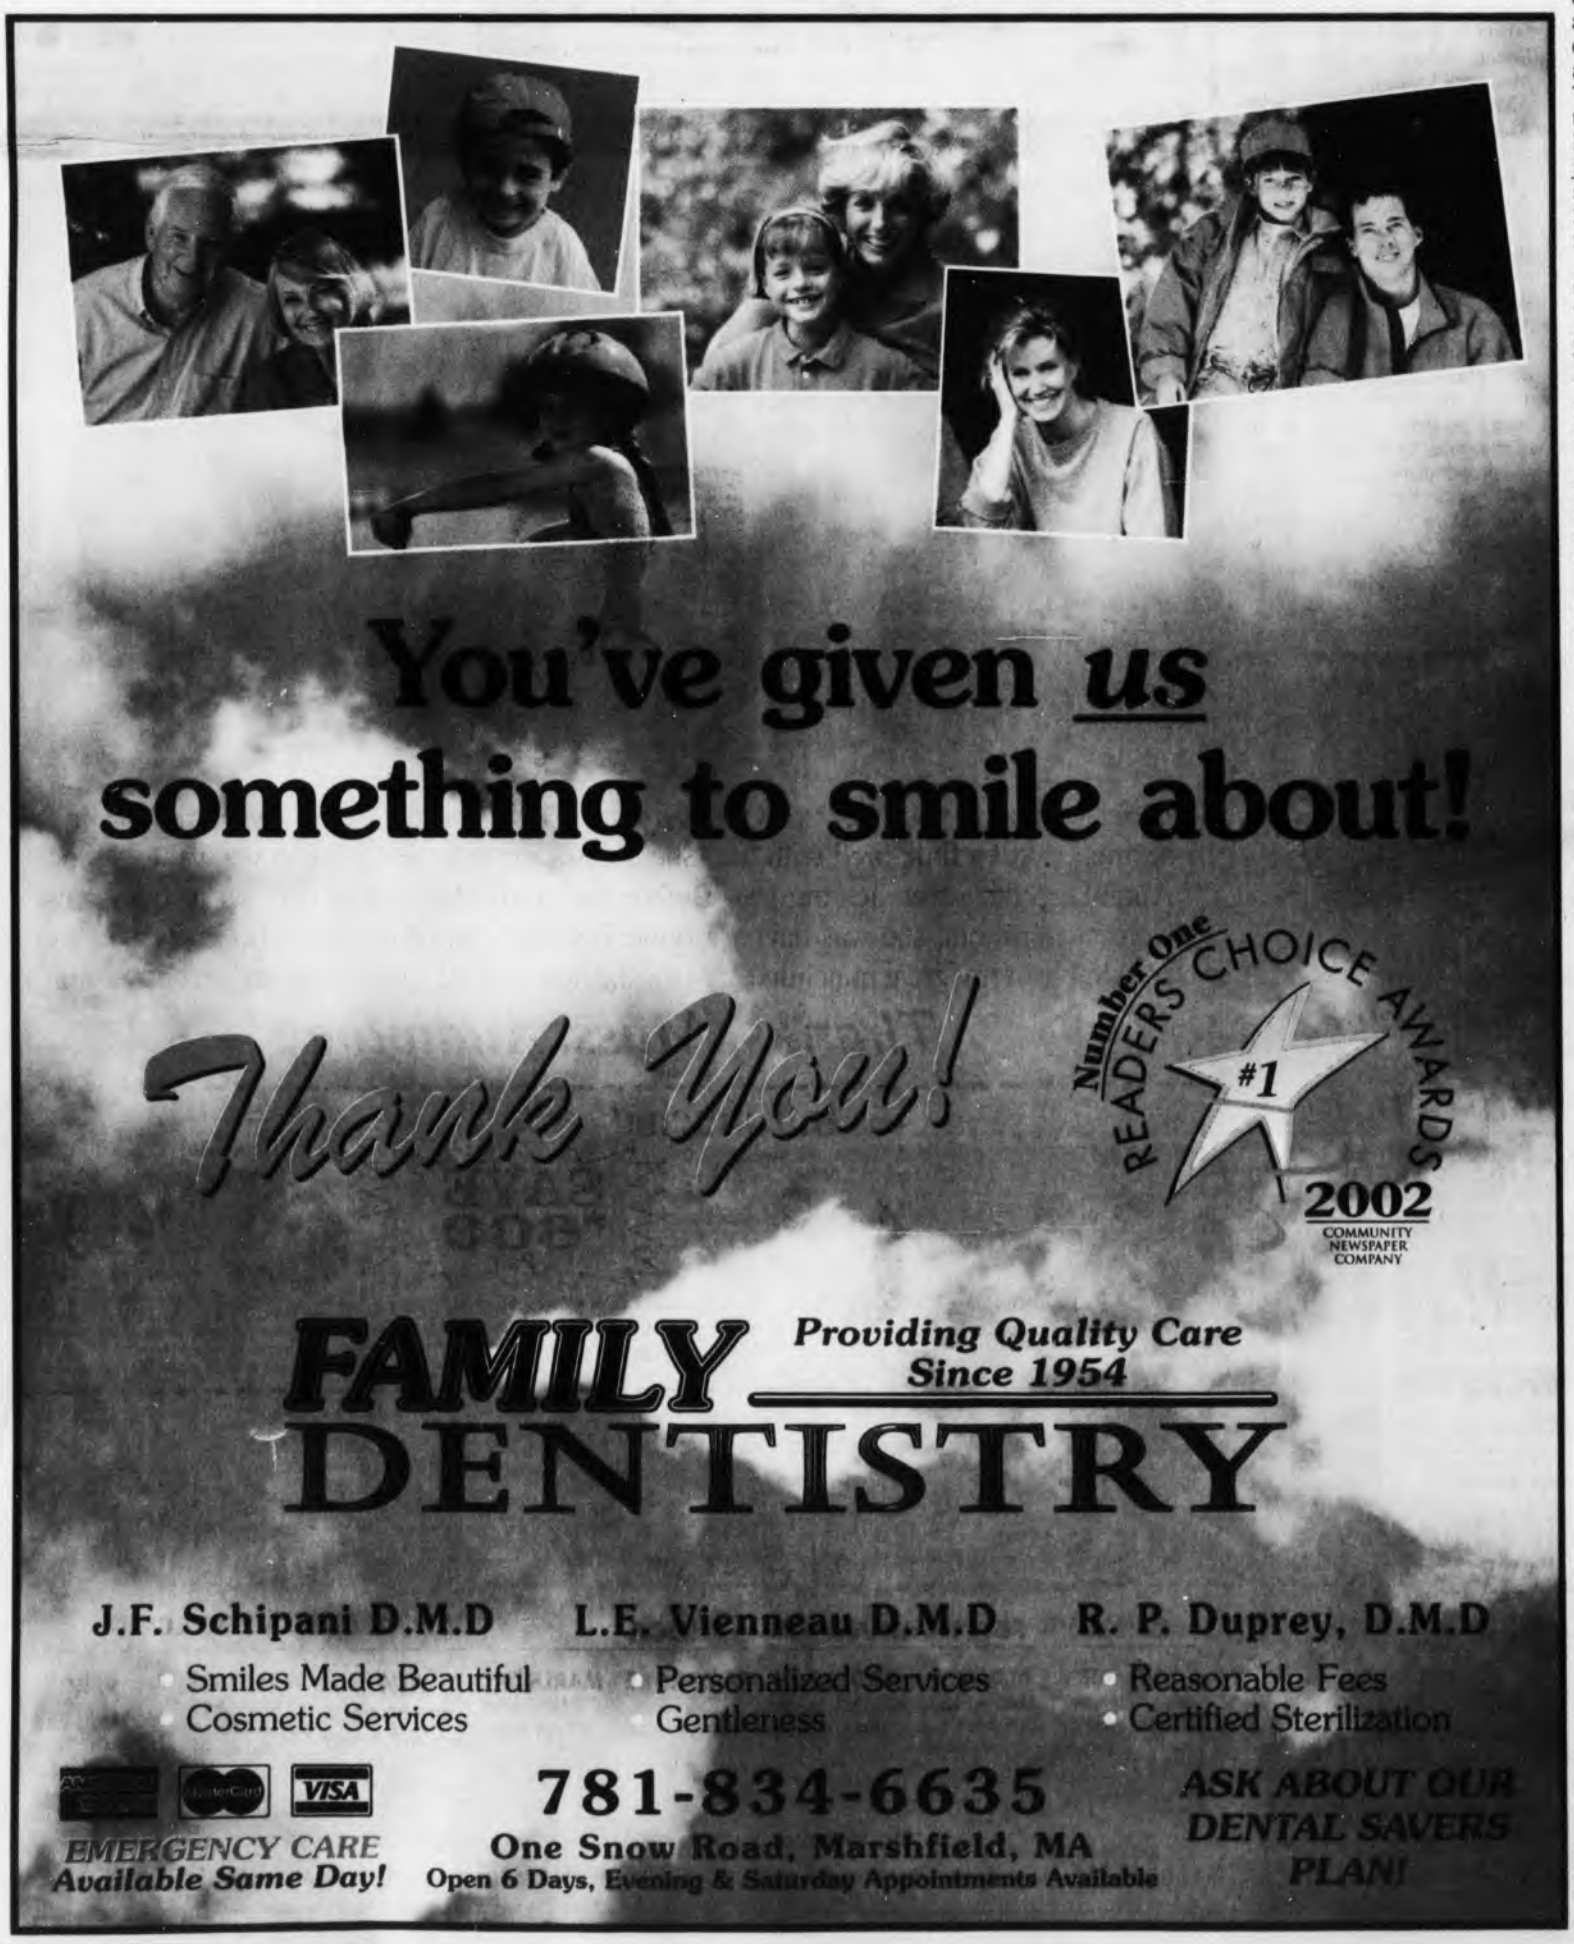
CASINO NIGHT AT ATLANTICA

The Cohasset Lacrosse Club is hosting a Casino Night. With only a $10 ticket admission bought either at the door or at a Cohasset Lacrosse game, Roulette, Blackjack, Poker, Money Wheel and some Texas Hold'Em Tournaments will all be rolling from 8 to 11:30 p.m. Some wonderful finger food, great lounge music in the background and the beautiful water view from Atlantica will make this a beautiful evening.



There will be professional dealers for you experienced players and some very fun 'known' dealers to help learn a game and have a laugh with friends and family. The Texas Hold'Em Tournament tables will be active and if you'd like to sign up for the early tables just send an email to info@cohassetlacrosse.com or call 781-383-2579 and let them know you're in for the 8 or 8:30 p.m. start.

The Club Board encourages you to come with your 'Casino' name "Oklahoma Johnny," "Amarillo Slim" , "Miami John," " Daytona Tony," "Pocket Rockets" "Moneymaker" or "Joanie Jett", Peppermint Patty, Shady Sadie, Hit Man Pam, to name only a few.

If you've got an Elvis impersonation ready to debut, just contact the Lacrosse Club. It will be a great evening and time for Cohasset to get together.

That is all for this week. Please send in all news and information to me no later than Tuesdays by noon.

CORRECTION

FROM WWW.CABLERAIL.COM

Last week, the Mariner published a photo of a modern-looking, white cable-rail fence as an example of "see-through" fencing being considered to replace the white fence from the Atlantica parking lot to the Mill River boatyard. That was not the correct photo. The fence pictured here is more in line with what is being considered for the harbor as part of the seawall repair project. For more information, contact the Selectmen's Office at 781-383-4105.

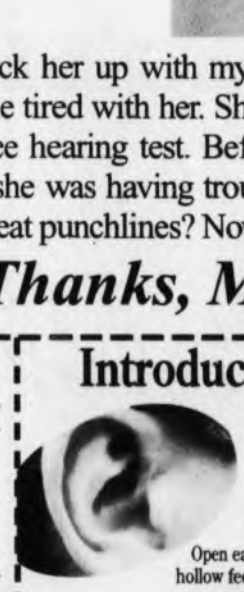
"SHE THINKS I'M FUNNY AGAIN"



I used to really crack her up with my jokes. But, over the years, my comic routines seemed to get a little tired with her. She did ask me to repeat a lot so we went to Mass Audiology for a free hearing test. Before the exam, they asked her lots of questions. Come to find out, she was having trouble hearing a lot of things! Who knew that she couldn't hear my great punchlines? Now, she hears great! And, I seem to be funny again.

Another Kind of Black Gold

The South Shore Recycling Cooperative wants to help you keep your yard and our towns green. It's easy! Did you know that about a fifth of your typical household's "trash" is yard waste? Throw in the kitchen scraps and you've got about a third of your family's discards, which you could be putting to use making your yard, garden and houseplants greener, and your neighbors green with envy!

Not only that, but all those pesky fallen leaves and grass clippings which we tend to think of as "waste," are also banned from disposal with the trash by a Mass. Dept. of Environmental Protection regulation. That's because it is better for the environment to recycle it by composting than to bury it in a landfill or incinerate it. It is also illegal to dump yard waste into wetlands, streams or ponds. And don't even think about burning leaves; clean air standards have prohibited that for years.

Most towns in our area provide some way to dispose of yard waste without breaking the law, either collecting it separately at the curb on certain dates, or providing a town-run place to take it to be composted. Some towns will even give its residents back the finished compost!

But if you have a leaf blower with a bag, you can mulch it up yourself for healthier shrubs, gardens and wooded areas. And if you have a little space in your yard and want to make you're your trash lighter and sweeter smelling, you can throw in your kitchen scraps and compost it yourself! Kitchen waste that came from plants, like fruit and vegetable scraps, tea bags, coffee grounds, paper towels, and even leftover spaghetti can go in the pile.

It's easy to make compost because most of the work is done by worms and naturally occurring soil organisms that turn organic material into fertile humus. Several towns in our area offer low cost compost bins that come with instructions. Don't worry, it's not rocket science! You can also build your own bin. Enclosed compost piles keep out pests, hold heat and moisture in, and look lovely. They can be made of wood, concrete blocks, metal or plastic. Put it in a convenient, shady area that can be reached with your hose.

Once your pile is built, just keep adding garbage. It will smell fine if you cover it with leaves, pine needles, or scrap paper towels, which also improves the quality. Add water to your pile if it gets dry so the worms don't get thirsty.

If you stir it up once in a while, your leaves and leftovers will become usable compost in 3 to 6 months! Known as "black gold" to gardeners, it restores nutrients in the soil, holds in moisture, and helps plants resist disease. And you'll save money and the planet because you won't need pesticides or chemical fertilizers!

Compost-a little effort can make a big difference.

Members of the class of 1962 voted Lyon most talented and most noted for his smile. In those days, Lyon was smiling a lot, as he was a member of the undefeated 1958 Cohasset High School football team with other football legends like Clark Chatterton, Rich Silvia, and Greg Koval.

But Lyon was a versatile athlete and in the spring, was a star on the CHS baseball team. He was also the basketball manager all four years of high school. He and his closest friends — Tommy Knoy, Steve Gregg, Steve Towel, and Alex Kaplan — all played sports together and were known as "The Musketeers."

Even when not on the courts or on the field, Lyon and his friends could be found doing everything together. In fact, Kaplan and Lyon were such good friends, they double dated the night of the senior prom. Kaplan said he remembers going to pick up their dates in Lyon's father's Cadillac.

Lyon, like many Cohasset residents, also enjoyed spending time on the water. Lyon and his brother Jim kept a boat in Little Harbor behind their house. On many hot summer days, Jim remembers the two taking adventures out into the harbor.

Lyon did not always know he wanted to enlist in the service. After graduating from high school in 1962, he attended Northeastern University in Boston, but ended up transferring to Norwich University in Vermont where he found his calling in military service. After graduating from Norwich, he headed out in September 1966 to begin his military career at Fort Knox, Kentucky.

During his eight months in Vietnam he was highly recognized for his service.

Lyon served as an instructor at the Allied Offices Training Center at Fort Knox, and trained there for 11 months before embarking on an assignment in August 1967 which sent him to Panmuajom, South Korea. On that mission, Lyon served as a Brigade Adjutant 2nd Brigade 2nd Infantry. Upon his departure from South Korea, Lyon received a letter of appreciation from the Korean Army Headquarters Lesion Officer Group Commander for his efforts.

Eager to move his military career forward, Lyon volunteered for a tour in Vietnam, and in September 1968, he took a command in Troop B, 7th Squadron, 1st Air CAV, 164 TH AVN GP. During his eight months in Vietnam he was highly recognized for his service, and was awarded the Bronze Star with "V" for valor for his heroism in ground combat, the Bronze Star First Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Second Leaf Cluster, the Air Medal for meterious achievement in aerial flight, and the Purple Heart.

But on the morning of April 18, 1969 during a renaissance mission in Northwestern Kan Throng Province, Lyon's promising future was cut short. Always a strong leader, Lyon was organizing and giving guidance to his troops after their air assault helicopters landed in an enemy mine field, when he was killed in an explosion. Lyon gave his life for his country just a few weeks after his 25th birthday.

Vietnam took a heavy toll on Cohasset, as eight men were killed including Peter J. Albiani, Jr., Peter Cogill, Allen F. Keating, William C. Laidlaw, Edward R. Maree, Craig M. Simeone, Dennis J. Reardon, and Lyon. Cohasset lost the same number of soldiers during World War II.

The worst eight months of Vietnam were in 1969, when the town lost five men, four at six-week intervals. By the end of the year, Cohasset had sacrificed three men from the Cohasset High School class of 1966.

To keep the memory alive of the boy whose smile will never be forgotten, Cohasset residents dedicated the John Paul Lyon Memorial Square in his memory, located at the intersection of North Main Street and Joy Place, not far from his boyhood home, to ensure the sacrifice he made for his town and his country is never forgotten.

Chairman of the Veterans Memorial Committee Glenn Pratt provided the Mariner with the information for this article. For more information on John Paul Lyon or any of the Cohasset veterans who have paid the ultimate price in the name of freedom, please visit the Cohasset Veterans Memorial Committee Web site at www.cohassetveterans-memorial.com.

Squares named after fallen servicemen

CPT John Paul Lyon is one of many veterans who have been honored by the town of Cohasset for their service to the country. The town lost seven other men during the Vietnam War who have all been memorialized with squares or other memorials in town including:

- Peter J. Albiani, Jr.: Intersection of Jerusalem and Gammons Roads
- Peter Cogill: Intersection of Church and Doane Streets
- Allen F. Keating: Intersection of Summer Street and Black Horse Lane
- William C. Laidlaw: Intersection of Beechwood Street and Norman Todd Road
- R. Edward Maree: The boat landing at the end of Parker Avenue
- Dennis J. Reardon: Corner of Elm Street and Stephen's Lane near the police station entrance
- Craig M. Simeone: Intersection of Lantern Lane and Pond Street

The mothers of the eight servicemen that gave their lives during Vietnam are memorialized at the Gold Star Mothers Monument at Woodside Cemetery.

HEALTH NOTES

Town needs to control growth by planning and not by sewers

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For two years, it's been obvious that Avalon, with its vast resources and record of successes was going to become a part of our community. Those trying to stop the development had neither the skill nor the resources to do so. Instead, they permitted another large development, Cedarmere, and opposed the only development really wanted by a majority of voters in the Town, the Cook Estate. It is not at all certain the Cook estate can be saved, even after the Sewer Commission has reversed itself and begun to support an enlarged capacity being sent by a pipe down 3-A to Hull.

The Hull connection was proposed two years ago, and is feasible only if the Town owns control of the pipe. Otherwise, anyone wishing to make a connection along the right of way would, by state law, be entitled to do so. Ownership by the town would bestow some amount of control, allowing the Town to limit connections or increases of capacity by existing developments. This small amount of control would be much stronger if a home rule petition proposed by the Town's legal counsel were enacted.

Now that the sewer logjam is past, there are those who say that there is no more land to be developed in Town; a patent fallacy. With the connection to Hull a potential reality, it behooves the Town in some way to begin controlling growth by planning rather than sewering. Those opposing the creation of better controls of construction in the Town had better rethink their approach, or we'll have another 600 new homes in two more years. The railroad is a magnet for builders. Like it or not, Cohasset has become a high-growth suburban community and there will be a price to pay.

No one has considered the more peripheral concerns with the fallout of three large developments coming to town and its effect on elements of the infrastructure. Perhaps the most important is that the Central Sewer plant, approved for 400,000 gallons effluent will be sought after by every builder with a few homes having the necessary proximity.

In spite of those that say there is plenty of capacity at Central after Little Harbor is connected, there is almost no additional capacity. And, hanging over the heads of the Sewer Commission is the specter of increased operating costs, failing systems in and near the central district. It behooves the Sewer Commission to provide for a substantial reserve capacity for nearby on-site systems which have not yet been identified and for inevitable unexpected glitches in the new technology being used in the Central plant.

A second problem is the unrecognized threat these new developments will pose for stormwater disposal. Cedarmere especially. Cohasset stormwater regulations are pitifully inadequate and Cedarmere will be dumping still more stormwater into the Gulf. It's a certainty that the Gulf will get worse before it gets better.

Water coming from Cedarmere, existing homes on Beechwood Street and other new developments in the area will inundate Pegrams brook and without better stormwater control, we'll have another Straits Pond on the south side of Cohasset. It's already a fact that the Harbor with its enormous inflow of fresh water from the Gulf, Scituate's Musquashicut Pond and James Brook now has more fresh water than it can sustain without alteration of its ecosystem.

And, as to the pipeline to Hull, the difference between the Hull plant and the Cohasset plant is space. The Cohasset plant has a small footprint which is unexpandable because it's in a wetland, and in the middle of Town. There's no room to expand, and nobody wants a huge plant in the middle of Town. The Hull plant has space to assign a larger area to effluent treatment, and can therefore potentially process wastewater more economically. Moreover, Hull has adequate hydraulic capacity, that is, they can process large amounts of effluent water.

The Hull capacity is limited by the ability to treat the effluent, the so-called BOD capacity. But since they have room they can construct such capacity. And, it's unlikely that they would want to change any arrangement they make with Cohasset once their treatment capability has expanded, since it represents an income stream to them. The state will be paying for some of the Hull plant usage, since the plant will be picking up effluent from the settling pond caused by the Mass Highway salt pile on 3-A.

Most of us have little interest in these matters, as we're part of the apathetic majority to whom it doesn't matter. Thank God there are a few who care.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Register to vote for Special Town Meeting

Friday, April 29, will be the last day to register to vote for the upcoming May 21, Special Town Election. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on April 29, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Elections are generally held at the Town Hall Auditorium. Because of a previously scheduled event, the election will be held at the Second Congregational Church (which is adjacent to the Town Hall) from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A new day

Trees and flowers are about to burst forth with color. You can feel it, at last.

As warmer days become a common occurrence, we're hopeful that we are emerging from our "winter of discontent" in more ways than one.

Now with the Town Election and Town Meeting behind us, we sense there's a new energy, renewed focus and determination to think "outside the box."

Cohasset faces myriad challenges, not the least of which are the pressures of development and fiscal reality.

Finding the right balance is going to be key. There are opportunities out there – we're sure of it – to be more efficient, find savings, and develop or uncover sources of revenue, all the while ensuring that Cohasset stays the lovely, seaside community that it is.

This needs to be accomplished without pitting school needs against public safety and maintenance of our roads, buildings and parklands. There's also a real urgency to ensure Cohasset has some level of economic diversity within its borders and doesn't become solely a haven for the well-to-do. Affordable housing has got to be a priority.

The village project needs to move ahead so downtown shops, restaurants and businesses can thrive. Excuse us but "our slip is showing" in the village. Some may insist that it is quaint, but to outsiders who will come to town to spend their money, the place looks rundown and in need of sprucing up, despite the creative efforts of shop owners. New sidewalks would make a huge difference.

It's also important that the Ripley Road area somehow be incorporated into the downtown "feel" so folks realize the village goes beyond the top of South Main Street.

We think Route 3A is a potential gold mine, especially with the prospect of the train station at the old Graham Waste/Winter Garden site. Much of the highway commercial business district is in need of redevelopment – there's got to be a way to make that attractive to property owners without compromising abutter, zoning or public safety issues. Staying on top of traffic issues along the state highway is going to be an important challenge.

We also think the Master Plan needs to come down off the shelf. Let's reconvene the Master Plan committee, if only to review the objectives of the plan and go over how to get from "Point A to Point B." There ought to be quarterly updates, with measurable goals – letting townspeople know where the "vision" of the Master Plan stands and what, if anything needs adjusting in light of unforeseen events.

In our years of covering Cohasset, there's been one constant: talented people who care about this town. The brain trust here is huge. So let's continue to tap that and move forward. The next five years is going to set the stage for the next 50 years. We think there are plenty of people in town willing to roll up their sleeves and devote their time to both planning and implementation.

We need to stop to think: what will our children and grandchildren say about Cohasset? Did we do all we could to protect this little corner of heaven?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Overcoming challenges

TO THE EDITOR:

The 2005 town elections are now behind us, and I would like to thank all the townspeople who came out to vote, and also my supporters for the work they did on my successful campaign for selectman. Also, I would like to say that I appreciate the excellent campaigns run by both my opponents, Debbie Shadd and Fred Koed.

There are many challenges facing the town, and I will do my best to do my part in overcoming them. The most immediate challenge is the Proposition 2-1/2 override vote, slated for Saturday, May 21. I believe it is important that the town pass this vote to give us short-term financial balance and continuity of our town and school programs and services, while providing elected officials with some breathing room to work on long range solutions to reigning in our taxation.

I recently studied the "Cohasset Senior Housing Survey" done in 2000. The study underlined to me that the biggest issue facing seniors is the high taxation in town. Unless taxation can be brought under control, many seniors will not be able to afford Cohasset, regardless of housing options. This is the longer range challenge that we must work on, once we are beyond (hopefully successfully!) the May 21 override vote.

Cook Estate is worth saving

TO THE EDITOR:

The many critics of the Cook project remind me of the blind men of Hindustan who went to see the elephant. One felt a leg and decided that the animal was like a tree, one felt its tail and determined that it was like a rope, and so on. None could correctly conceive of the whole animal!

The facts are that Cedamere is approved, Avalon is sure to hang in until it is. Even so, unless Cook is saved, we don't have enough affordable units to insulate the town from yet another 40-B intrusion, and one is already getting suited up to pounce on us. Cook will provide some positive cash flow to the town, whereas the another 40-B will generate less taxes than the cost of services to it. Hence the pragmatic thing is to do what it takes to save Cook.

The proposed pipeline to Hull would not automatically open 3A to development; access would be limited by the agreement between Hull and Cohasset for a finite annual flow, which would be assigned to the four entities that fund the pipeline and to certain groups of residences adjacent to the pipeline as selected by the Sewer Commission. The four entities are: Avalon, Cedarmere, Cook, and the Mass Highway Department (which is disposing the effluent from the landfill and adjacent areas). The Sewer Commission would control the negotiations; both Hull and Cohasset have good reason to control (limit) the capacity contracted for.

As for subsidies, we are not subsidizing Cook, but we will be subsidizing Avalon annually and also the next 40-B by the excess of cost of services over tax revenues.

The only intervention by Cohasset "government" is to have been the catalyst for the maneuvers that enabled Cohasset to control how the Cook property is developed and meet some of our previously established housing goals, rather than let the property be developed in whatever pattern gives the developer the most profit. What's so bad about that kind of intervention? It's a lot better deal for Cohasset than any 40-B project, and better than we've got so far from other developments or are ever likely to get.

I'm not a believer in the government running anything much, but on the other hand the fellow citizens we elected, appointed, or volunteered to deal with our housing or other problems should be expected to do something to address these issues, and we shouldn't damn their efforts as "government interference"."

The Cook project as currently conceived helps satisfy moderately-priced housing needs while being economically viable. At the 11th hour it is impractical to incorporate or substitute response to other desires while retaining economic viability, and/or ceding control of the project to a developer with his own for-profit plan. Nor should we contemplate subsidizing a project revised to accommodate the preferences of some critics with taxpayer funds, either directly or flow through the Cohasset Preservation Commission .

Our one and only opportunity to control the use of the Cook property to best serve our moderately priced senior housing needs, and to stave off another 40-B project, is to save the current concept; that chance will be lost by diddling fruitlessly with downsizing or other whimsical alternatives. No time remains for such indulgences.

Of course there are arguments against a pipeline to Hull, but it does save Cook, and enables the capacity of Cohasset's treatment plant to be devoted to residential needs without the Damoclean sword of certain lawsuits by developers.

Help with Title 5 systems

TO THE EDITOR:

At the recent Town Meeting, voters agreed to sewer the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue and the Jerusalem Road Sewer Districts and for these betterment's to be paid for by the properties being benefited.

The voters also agreed on the Town contributing to the cost of these projects on a 50-50 basis contingent upon the voters of the Town authorizing an override of Proposition 2-1/2. This is the same approach the Town has taken in the past for the North Cohasset and Central Sewer Districts.

However, having the Town provide assistance to homeowners with sewers, but not to homeowners with septic systems is a concern of many. I would like to offer some thoughts on how to rectify this situation should the voters authorize the override.

I suggest that the Board of Health propose a variation of Article 15 which was withdrawn from consideration in the past Town Meeting. At the next Town Meeting, the Board should request that the Town raise and appropriate $500,000 to be placed in a special account. Any homeowner with a failed septic system could apply for assistance to bring their system into compliance with Title 5 requirements and be reimbursed for costs up to $14,000 from the account upon successful completion of the work. This amount is equivalent to what the Town expects assisting each homeowner in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road Sewer Districts if the override is approved.

In this way, 35 homeowners with failed septic systems could be eligible to receive assistance in the first year. The next year the Board would reques the balance in the account to $500,000. This process should be continued in subsequent years.

I agree that if the Town continues to provide financial assistance for sewer installations, comparable assistance should be provided to homeowners with septic systems as well. I hope that the concept I have proposed might appeal to all homeowners and the Town.

War of words: Delahunt tackles Iraq in local forum

Other issues also addressed

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

For two hours serious political discussion took precedence over a number of other spring-related activities.

On one of this spring's first sunny Saturdays, approximately 60 residents from across the South Shore headed inside Norwell Town Hall to take part in a question and answer session with U.S. Congressman Bill Delahunt, D-Quincy.

In his introductory address, Delahunt said the forum held earlier this month would be a chance for him to listen to members of his South Shore constituency, and answer their questions about national and local issues.

Those in audience didn't disappoint.

They queried the congressman on numerous issues, ranging from the War in Iraq to the current state of Social Security. They also asked about alternative energy sources and a possible Palestinian state.

When Ryan Herling, a 16-year-old student at Norwell High and a member of the school's Young Democrats Club, asked Delahunt for his thoughts on the future of Iraq, the congressman said the region is "a long way from being stable.

"We've got to get out of there," Delahunt said. "It's a mess and we're not going to stay there."

Delahunt speculated that Iraq could devolve into a "fractured region," similar to the Balkans during the 1990s.

"I think we all share a hope that it will be stabilized," he added.

Delahunt said the War in Iraq is costing the United States both a lot of money, and a loss in reputation.

"We've lost credibility all around the world," he said.

He added that other countries that are supporting the new Iraqi government are doing so in the form of monetary loans to Iraq, but the U.S. government is "giving it away."

"We can't fund No Child Left Behind, and build and [renovate] 5,000 schools in Iraq," Delahunt said.

Former Norwell Selectman David Mayers criticized President George W. Bush for the war.

"I'm concerned about our president," Mayers said. "Why don't we call [him] a murderer?"

After 9/11, Mayers said those who hijacked the planes and killed between 2,000-3,000 lives in New York, Washington D.C. and Pennsylvania were called murderers. But even more innocent lives, he said, have been lost in Iraq.

Although Delahunt's criticism of the president was not as blunt, it was no less harsh.

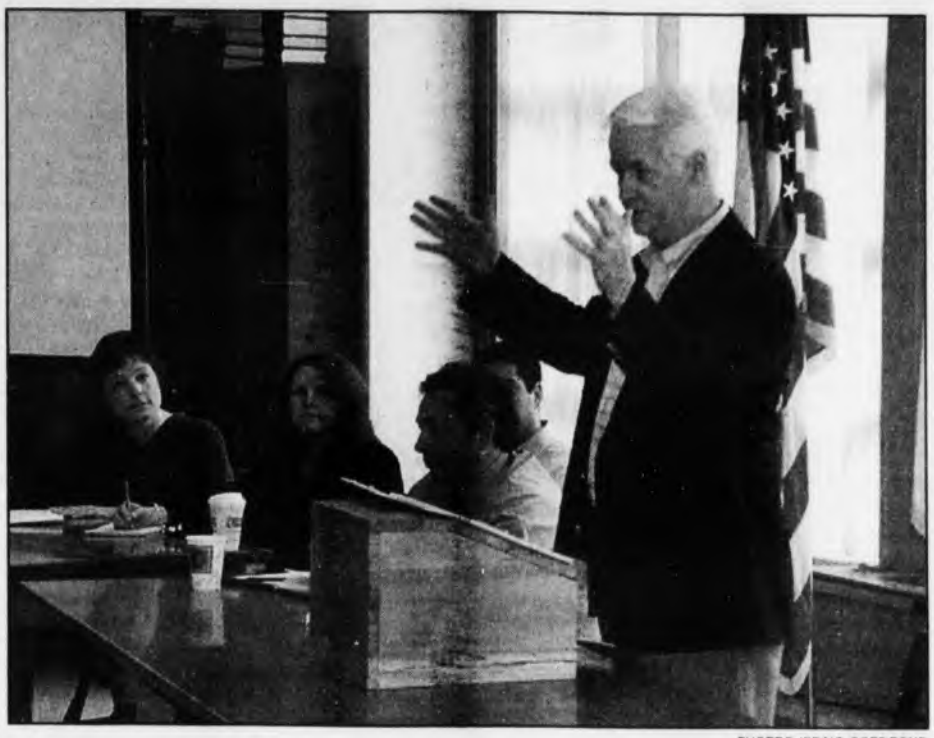
"This has been the most mis-managed military adventure in the history of the United States," he said.

Delahunt also criticized the president for cutting back on veterans' benefits in a time when they're needed the most.

Delahunt's remarks against the president seemed to be embraced by others in the audience.

In the parking lot outside, the bumper sticker affixed to most vehicles advertised "Kerry/Edwards." Inside, Norwell resident Stacey Schacter donned a shirt-ful of pins with phrases including "Is it 2008 yet?," "I'm blue are you," and "I'm too informed to be a Republican."

Delahunt cautioned, however, that Americans who are against the war, should not blame American soldiers for it.



"We should never blame the war on the warriors," he said.

"This is a war for the soul of this country," Scituate resident Bill Barton added, "and we are losing the war."

Barton said he moved from Texas to Massachusetts recently because he felt he wasn't being represented in the Lone Star State.

With Democratic Senators Ted Kennedy and John Kerry, and Congressman Delahunt, Barton said his beliefs are being well represented.

"You're speaking for me and I'm proud of you," he said to Delahunt. "We hired you to be our soldier. Stand up and be our soldier out there."

U.S. Congressman Bill Delahunt makes a point during a public forum for constituents at Norwell Town Hall. Approximately 60 South Shore voters participated in the question and answer session, which raised topics such as the War in Iraq, Social Security and mandatory national service.

A Bridgewater resident, Faye George garnered a round of applause when she asked: "Since World War II, how many years of peace have we had?"

A member of Citizens for an Active Community, George also queried what Democrats have learned since Kerry lost in the last presidential election. Instead of adopting more centrist beliefs, which has been an issues of discussion among some Democrats across the nation, George said the party should remain true to its leftist beliefs.

She added that Democrats should consider candidates like Dennis Kucinich, one of the Democratic contenders who lost to Kerry in the party's primary.

Although Kucinich may not have the charisma of some other candidates, he does have "strong moral convictions," George said.

Many at the meeting raised questions and concerns about the future of Social Security.

Paul Lyons, an 83-year-old Weymouth resident, asked Delahunt what should be done to "bail out Social Security."

"Reduce the deficit," Delahunt replied, "[and] raise the caps."

Of even more importance than Social Security, Delahunt said, is the current state of health care for many Americans.

"I think we can solve Social Security as it was originally perceived," Delahunt said. "Health care is the crises, not Social Security."

When the topic of new energy sources was raised, Delahunt said he supports projects including hybrid cars and wind energy, as long as they're done right.

Delahunt speculated that were the United States to increase its regulations on gas-usage, compelling automobile manufacturers to produce vehicles that get 40 miles per gallon of gas rather than 20 miles/gallon, the nation's energy crises would be solved.

A lack of "political will," Delahunt said, has stalled advances in this field.

The congressman added that although he does supports wind energy technology, lawmakers must be careful on Nantucket Sound with the proposed Cape Wind project.

The proposed project, which would site more than 100 wind turbines in the waters off of Nantucket Sound, has been mired in controversy.

"We've got to be careful with our oceans," Delahunt said, adding that he would support a thorough study of both the US' Atlantic and Pacific coastlines to site similar projects.

Attending the public forum with his wife Catherine and son John, Norwell resident Sheikh Rahman said because of US policies, the American government is now poorer than Bangladesh, the country where he was born.

Bangladesh currently has a national debt of approximately $7 billion, Rahman said, but the country's debt stands at approximately $7 trillion.

When the conversation turned towards more local issues, members of the audience commented that America is losing its "sense of community."

"I think we all owe our country something," Delahunt added. "We need to re-energize ourselves in terms of commitment to country."

When Delahunt, who previously served in the U.S. Coast Guard, asked those in the audience if they would support a program of mandatory national service, a large majority of attendants raised their hand.

"When you go into the service," Delahunt said, " you find out what America is all about."

Pat Bordewieck, a Norwell resident, said she had the opportunity to witness such a program first hand when she lived in Norway. As it was run in Norway — including opportunities in the military and other areas of service —the program was of great benefit, she said.

Before departing for a similar public forum in Hyannis Saturday afternoon, Delahunt urged those in attendance to stay informed and involved.

"Continue to write, continue to watch and continue to criticize," he said.

After the meeting, Catherine Rahman said she respects Delahunt and his views.

"I really feel he told the truth," she said, "and the country needs to be told the truth."

The Rahman's son, John, added that the forum was a good way for voters to express themselves, but he said he wished there were more people in attendance.

"People brought up things that are near and dear to their hearts," Norwell Selectmen Chairman John Mariano said. "[Delahunt] said he came to listen, and he did."

On Monday, April 25 at 2 p.m., Delahunt will lead a discussion at the Quincy Senior Center titled "Protecting Social Security for this Generation and the Next."

The senior center is located at 1,000 Southern Artery in Quincy.

Resurrecting 'Kilroy was here'

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I'm sure all you guys will be pleased to note that, after lo! these 60-odd years, old Jim Kilroy is still being called on to serve.

The city of Quincy, where Kilroy has suddenly come to rank with the Adamses and the Hancocks as a favorite son, has resurrected the wartime phrase "Kilroy Was Here!" in an effort to lure more tourists off the well-traveled Boston-to-Plymouth road.

Of course, old Jim never lived in Quincy, his home was in Halifax, but then neither of the Presidents Adams was born there either. It was Braintree. But this is not the time or place to argue the point.

Discover Quincy, the city's promotional arm, is running an essay contest on "What 'Kilroy was here' means to me," and is encouraging tourists from Quincy to have their pictures taken with "Kilroy was here" posters around the world in an effort to identify the story of the catchphrase with Quincy.

For those of you who never heard the story, Kilroy made his name as a checker in the Fore River Shipyard. It was his job to count the holes filled by riveters who were paid by the number of rivets they drove. Then he would chalk a check mark beside the rivet so it wouldn't be counted twice.

I know this will come as a surprise to most of you guys but there were unscrupulous riveters around in those days who would erase Kilroy's checkmark, wait for another checker to make his mark, and get paid twice for the same rivet. And you wondered why World War II cost so much!

For those of you who never heard the story, Kilroy made his name as a checker in the Fore River Shipyard.

Well, one day Kilroy overheard one of those riveters tell the foreman that he had not checked the rivet yet when Jim knew he had. So he grabbed his chalk, checked the rivet again, and scrawled "Kilroy was here!" beside it. It was such a success that he kept right on doing it for all his rivets.

This being wartime, newly built ships from the Fore River Shipyard often were rushed into the conflict without the final coat of paint. "Kilroy was here," may have appeared on more battlefields than 'Remember Pearl Harbor." Fun-loving GIs took to scrawling it in the most unlikely places.

It was said that Joe Stalin noted it on the wall of the men's room at the Potsdam Conference and came out asking Harry Truman, "Who is this guy Kilroy and why is he following me around?" The second wave of occupation troops in Tokyo found it scrawled on the Imperial Palace.

Kilroy died in 1962 but his wife, Margaret, kept the fire burning.

"My Jim," she said, "was too old for the Second World War. And he was too young for the First World War. But he was very proud of the tribute our American servicemen paid him when they adopted his 'Kilroy was here' slogan as their very own."

But Jim Kilroy's contribution to morale in World War II might have gone unnoticed if it had not been for the Transit Company of America, which in the late 1940s, sponsored a contest to find the origin of the catchphrase. Jim entered the contest and won.

The prize was a 24-foot-long bright orange antique trolley car, delivered to the Kilroy home in Halifax on Christmas Eve. Jim was disappointed but the nine Kilroy kids were enthralled. Chalked to the ceiling of the trolley car were the words: "Santa was here!"

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Seeking items for benefit yard sale — The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee hopes that, once again, generous donations to its fourth annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh, III Memorial Scholarship Fund are waiting to be discovered in attics, basements and garages.

The committee has been awarding this scholarship to a deserving Cohasset graduating senior since 1978. Several years ago, committee members held their first yard sale to held finance the scholarship fund. Because of the tremendous amount of community-wide support they received, the Cohasset Democrats have made their yard sale an annual event. This year's yard sale will be held on Saturday, April 30 and, as always, all proceeds go towards the scholarship fund. Everyone is asked to find something to donate that may be sold.

"We so much appreciate the great support we've received from the entire community. The people of Cohasset have always been so generous and this is a very worthy cause," said Agnes McCann, chairman. If you have donations, wish to volunteer some time, or want further information, call McCann at 383-0222.

PSO 'LIVE Televised Telethon' May 4

The Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) LIVE Televised Telethon set for Wednesday, May 4, from 7 to 9:30 p.m.

What does the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) and WGBH have in common? Both host a LIVE televised fundraiser to raise funding to support their wonderful organizations. The Cohasset PSO Telethon is similar to the WGBH annual telethon drive, except that instead of items for auction on television, the Cohasset PSO will be raffling many wonderful items at different pledge levels. Also, the Cohasset PSO will televise local talent comprising of children from the Cohasset public school system throughout the evening.

This is the second year to host this televised event on Comcast local channel 22 television station. Last year's successful telethon raised a net profit of $12,000. This year, organizers will add an on-line auction component to compliment the raffles. The event will feature the top 10 to15 highly prized donations on-line. These include vacation homes, yacht cruises around Boston Harbor, tickets to sporting events, golfing and more. Be sure to read the Cohasset Mariner for a complete listing of all on-line auction and raffle items.

New to the telethon this year is that ability to be a "Telethon Business Sponsor." For a $300 tax deductible contribution, a business will be granted top billing in all printed materials as well as special recognition throughout the televised talent show. Signage for the business will be displayed on television as well as a description of the Sponsor will be announced from our telethon emcees. It is a great opportunity to have "free advertising" for local businesses.

How else can you participate? Phone in your pledge money. Once you phone in your tax deductible contribution, your name will be entered into raffle drawing(s) based on your level of pledging ($100, $75, $50, and $25 and below). Winners will be drawn LIVE on TV at the end of the evening. In order for your name to be entered into the raffles, all pledges will have to be received by 9 p.m. sharp. According to PSO fundraising staffers, there are so many chances to win such wonderful prizes and support such a worthwhile program, it's a winning situation for everyone. For example, with a pledge of $100.00, your name will be entered in every raffle item drawing. $75 pledges will be entered in all items listed in the $75 pledge category as well as the $50 and $25 and below, etc..

If you would like to donate an item or become a business sponsor, contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125. If you are interested in participating in the talent show, send an e-mail to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com with your name, phone number and talent.

If individuals would rather send in a pledge instead of phoning in, make your check payable to the Cohasset PSO and postmark your note including name, address, and phone number by Monday, May 2, to: Cohasset PSO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, MA 02025

Any entries postmarked after May 2, will not be entered into the raffles.

Seventh-grade spring summit

The Cohasset School Department and Project Safeguard announce that the 2005 Spring Summit for seventh-graders will be held on May 4, in the Middle High School Auditorium from 7:50 to 11:50 a.m. This year's event promises to be a very informational and insightful day.

The Spring Summit (previously known as "Campus on the Common") is being planned for both parents and students this year. Its purpose is to provide young people and their parents with the information needed to help them deal productively with such social pressures as anorexia, divorce, drinking, drug use, athletic pressure, college admission, etc. Using parent and student breakout sessions, speakers, peer leaders and interactive presentations, our goal is to help the students in making productive and healthy choices in their lives.

Commenting on the event Sheila Toomey said, "The Spring Summit can be an important resource for both students and parents. The pressures and choices that young people face today can be daunting. Within our families, schools, communities and peer groups, we have the ability to offer our youth the support they need for healthy development. The Spring Summit is a great resource for accomplishing this goal.

Motivational speakers, student peer leaders, special drug ambassadors, health professionals and educators will all present at this event. The day will include several interactive exercises such as role-playing and workgroup sessions for both students and parents.

One of this year's speakers will be Dr. Punyamurtula S. Kishore, President and Founder of the National Library of Addictions (NLA) in Brookline. He personally maintains the NLA, which offers lectures on addiction related topics, publishes newsletters and coordinates interventions. Dr. Kishore also serves as an associate physician at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center in Boston as well as primary care and addictions medicine specialist with Primary Care Associates (Chestnut Hill and Sandwich,), Brighton Family Practice and Addiction Medicine Associates, Woburn Family Practice, Springfield Family Practice and Worcester Family Practice.

The day's presentations will also include the results of a targeted survey of the Cohasset sixth, seventh, and eighth graders. Among other questions, this survey asked students about the types of pressures they may be under and how they personally have responded to those stresses.

Most Cohasset youth live healthy, productive lives and develop into competent, successful adults. The goal of the Spring Summit is to build on these strong backgrounds and present our students with a positive-oriented presentation that will help them in their coming-of-age years. Through the peer leaders and interactive formats, as well as by giving their parents the information needed to guide them, we will assure the students that they are valuable members of our society with a worthy and fresh perspective. We will also present the consequences of making unhealthy choices through our drug ambassador program, sponsored by the National Library on Addiction.

Parents interested in getting more information about the 2005 Spring Summit should look for a letter from the school department in the coming days.

The Spring Summit is made possible by the generous support of the volunteers from Project Safeguard. Project Safeguard is a Cohasset community initiative that offers information to youth and their parents around the issues of adolescent-related health and well-being. For information about becoming involved with Project Safeguard, contact Nancy Oddleifson, fivegodds@aol.com or Sheila Toomey, toomey6@comcast.net.

John Coe is honored as the town's top citizen

Event held at Cohasset Harbor Inn

Above, Cohasset's newest Citizen of the Year John Coe, second from right, is flanked by Sallyann Chatterton, whose late husband Clark was a Citizen of the Year; and Glenn Pratt and Arthur Lehr, who are both former Citizens of the Year.

At left, Cohasset Citizen of the Year, John Coe, is all smiles at a special reception in his honor Sunday at the Cohasset Harbor Inn on Elm Street.

Above, state Sen. Robert Hedlund presents John Coe with proclamations from the senate president and governor. Also presenting proclamations Sunday were state Rep. Garrett Bradley and Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed.

At left, John and Marcia Coe enjoy the reception, which was hosted by the Cohasset Mariner and Cohasset Harbor Inn.

At right, Harvey Russ, who has known John Coe for 50 years, shares some funny anecdotes about their younger years.

Forget the stock market. This is much bigger!

New opportunity in $1.9 trillion currency market can help you recover your stock market losses

"With the help of my software to track it, the currency market is an incredible opportunity for you to achieve extraordinary returns 24 hours a day."
Blake Morrow — President, 4X Made Easy®, LP

If you think today's hottest investment is found on Wall Street, then read on, because I'm about to blow your mind!

Recent federal rule changes have opened the foreign currency market — formerly reserved for banks, corporations, and high net worth individuals — to independent investors just like you, some of whom have already made tens of thousands of dollars!

World's largest market
I know this will surprise you, but the foreign currency market, or (spot) FOREX, has become the largest trading market in the world! And with $1.9 trillion or more traded every single day (source: Financial Times, Sept. 29, 2004), it dwarfs the volume of the Wall Street exchanges — even when you lump them together! That volume creates movement, and movement creates profit opportunities for you!

> "The foreign exchange market remains by far the world's biggest financial market by trading volume, with turnover far greater than equity or bond markets."
> — Financial Times

Much simpler and easier than stocks
Not only is it bigger than the stock market, it's a lot friendlier. If you are a stock market investor, you have a whopping 40,000 stocks and mutual funds to choose from. No wonder traditional investing has become so intimidating!

But here's the good news: In the (spot) FOREX market — a market not influenced by corporate corruption — you only need to follow six major currencies. Wouldn't you rather look at six proven investment options than research 40,000 potential ones? Yeah, me too.

You are witnessing history — don't miss being part of it
Imagine if you could turn back time to the start of the NASDAQ and invest in the NASDAQ at the very beginning with the knowledge you have now. How much would your portfolio be worth?

Life doesn't offer many second chances, but THIS IS ONE OF THEM. Sweeping changes in U.S. federal rules have opened this market to individual investors like you — creating perhaps the biggest opportunity since the start of the NASDAQ!

There will never be another first time to be a part of the (spot) FOREX
Come hear about the profits possible in the (spot) FOREX market now — BEFORE EVERYONE ELSE CRASHES THE PARTY! Now that the federal rulings have changed, it won't remain a secret forever!

Don't let this opportunity pass you by. You have a special chance to get in early on what could be the biggest, most exciting investing opportunity of the 2000s!

Introducing 4X Made Easy®
I'm Blake Morrow, President of 4X Made Easy®, LP. The 4X Made Easy® system is user-friendly software and personal ongoing training that allows you to learn about and interpret trends on the (spot) FOREX. And when you can project these trends, amazing profits are possible.

Should a rise or decline in a particular currency be apparent, 4X Made Easy® will reveal its path and position you to capitalize on the opportunity. Rest assured, you can make money as currencies rise or fall against each other. In fact, it's this very movement — driven by the global forces of supply and demand — that creates your profit potential.

This simple-to-use system lights your way
With 4X Made Easy® as your navigator, tracking currency movement is easier than you could ever imagine. The 4X Made Easy® point-and-click trading system literally lights the path of supply and demand for currencies. Red and green arrows point in the direction currencies have been moving — giving you the vital market information you need to instantly make intelligent trading decisions with confidence.

Even Chrysler and Mercedes are doing it
The (spot) FOREX is new to most personal investors, but not to Detroit's mighty Big Three. In fact, DaimlerChrysler, the parent company of Chrysler and Mercedes, has revealed that it made more money trading currency than it did selling cars. In the second quarter of 2003, the majority of DaimlerChrysler's $1 billion in profits came from currency trades in the (spot) FOREX market.

Was DaimlerChrysler being reckless with its shareholders' money? Not at all! Certainly there is risk in the foreign currency market, as there is in all markets. But putting money in the (spot) FOREX gave them higher returns than ANY bank. If you'd like to see how individuals like you are getting the same kind of monster financial windfalls as DaimlerChrysler, attend one of my FREE eye-opening workshops in your town.

What is the (spot) FOREX?
(spot) FOREX — This is the acronym for the foreign exchange market, where one country's currency can be exchanged for that of another. The term "spot" simply refers to the activity of trading one country's currency against another (such as the U.S. Dollar against the British Pound, Swiss Franc, Japanese Yen, etc.).

What 4X Made Easy® users are saying:

"In my 20 trades so far, I'm up about $10,000."
— Jerry Watson, KS

"I made over $7,000 in my first three weeks!"
— Larry Wenner, TX

"I can do a week's salary in a day. In one morning, I made what was three weeks' salary at my old job."
— Donald Schmalz, FL

"It's about freedom and control. It's about control of my financial future. The Internet allows guys like us to do this."
— Rob McCarthy, AZ

"It's unbelievable returns compared to... the stock market."

Get ready for the (spot) FOREX
With only six major currencies to follow, and a market that's open 6 days a week, 24 hours a day (4 days), you just won't find a simpler, more flexible way to put money in your pocket.

The cleanly traded (spot) FOREX has an investing innocence not found in its equity market cousins. Its currency fluctuations are a result of pure market movement, not corporate corruption or Wall Street dishonesty. Come see the pure, unaltered fluctuations — and the incredible profit opportunities they present — of these six major foreign currencies alongside the U.S. Dollar:

- British Pound
- Euro Dollar
- Swiss Franc
- Australian Dollar
- Japanese Yen
- Canadian Dollar

CHS tennis teams set for showdown with Norwell

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset and Norwell tennis teams, both boys and girls, have once again emerged as the class of the South Shore League this season.

Needless to say, there is a lot at stake when these teams square off on Tuesday.

The Cohasset boys will be looking to end Norwell's 119-match South Shore League winning streak. Both teams are undefeated on the season, and the match is headlined by what should be three great singles matches.

At first singles, the Skippers' Nils Sceery will go up against Norwell's Ryan Sweeney. Both athletes are off to tremendous starts this season.

Cohasset's Dan Sullivan and Norwell's Rob Ankner will play at second singles, while third singles will feature Blain Morin of Cohasset against Scott Kitchen. All six are having great years thus far, and the winner of the team match could very well be determined by who takes the majority of the singles matches.

After a 4-1 defeat of Harwich last Thursday, the Norwell boys are 6-0 overall, 4-0 in the league. Clippers coach Jay Swartz is hardly letting his team rest on its laurels.

As a matter of fact, Swartz says his team may be a slight underdog against the undefeated Skippers.

"The coaches I've spoken with that have played both us and Cohasset, they have all told me that Cohasset has a slight advantage against us," Swartz said Tuesday. "If they are to beat us, we just have to go out and try to make them earn it.

"I do think, without question, this is the best Cohasset team in the last 10 to 15 years."

The Norwell coach believes that the winner may ultimately be decided simply by who does a better job of rising to the occasion.

Male laxers drop an overtime heartbreaker

Skippers succumb to Barnstable, 11-10

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset boys lacrosse team has been in a number of close games early in the season, and have been on both ends of the final score.

Unfortunately for the Skippers, they were on the wrong such end last Thursday, when they traveled to Barnstable and lost an overtime thriller, 11-10.

Freshman Michael Grimm, whom head coach Stu Curran said played a great game for Cohasset, and junior Aidan Buick connected for the game-tying goal in the closing seconds of regulation. Grimm dodged a defender and found an open Buick near the net, and he didn't miss, tying the score at 10.

The Skippers had problems throughout the game with penalties and other miscues, and that is what cost them in the end.

Shortly after Buick's goal, Cohasset was called for offsides, an inopportune moment for a time-serving call. Barnstable had the possession to start the extra frame and, still a man up, scored less than a minute in to send Cohasset home with a tough loss.

"Were we disappointed? Yes. Discouraged? A little bit," Curran said. "But, I have to say I'm very happy with the way we competed against a good team."

One of the top players on the day for Cohasset was senior middie Joe Durkin, who exemplified the competitive spirit that his coach lauded.

"In a 48-minute game, he's playing 47 of them. He goes all day long," Curran said of Durkin. "He does face-offs for us, and he's a key guy on our clear. His motor runs on high; he's always going and going."

The Skippers also continued to receive consistent play from fellow midfielders Sam Steele and Matt Casey. Chris Sims started in goal and made a number of key saves to keep his team in it.

Curran said his team "showed some good spark" at the outset of the game, jumping out to a 3-0 lead. Barnstable came back, however, and it was a close game throughout.

The loss dropped Cohasset's record to 2-3 on the season, and they host a tough Holliston team tomorrow morning.

Congratulations to Garrett Curran (son of Coach Curran), as the graduate of the Cohasset youth lacrosse program was named Old Dominion Athletic Conference Player of the Week.

Curran is a freshman goalie at Lynchburg College (the eighth-ranked team in the nation at the Div. 3 level) and 2004 graduate of Tabor Academy.

Baseball in search of some big hits

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Hitting, pitching and defense.

In the three phases of baseball, Cohasset has been doing alright for themselves in two of them.

The defense has been "satisfactory," according to head coach Al Gallotta. And the pitching - led by senior Teddie Straughn, junior Chris Bryan and freshman Brian Hill - has, for the most part, been faring well.

It is the hitting, however, that needs to pick itself up if the Skippers are to improve on their 2-3 record. Senior catcher Luis Blanco and second baseman Tim Pilczak have certainly been delivering, as each has had a few multiple-hit games so far this season.

After that, Gallotta is waiting for others to step up.

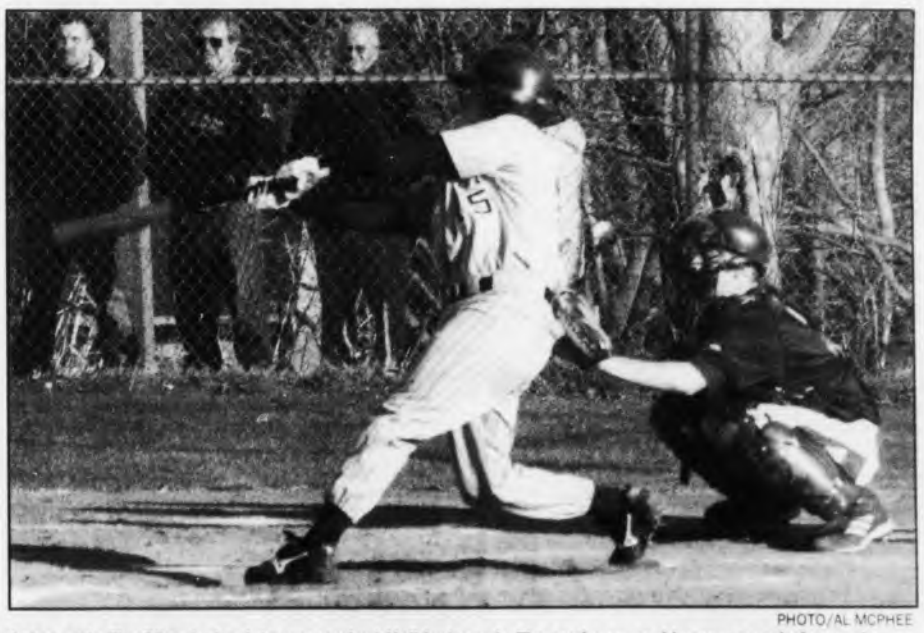
"The problem with us right now is a lack of hitting from top to bottom," the coach said Wednesday. "In any given game, it seems like it's just two or three guys carrying the load. We have to improve offensively by making better contact and cutting down on our strikeouts."

Straughn and sophomore Nick Zappolo showed some signs of life at the plate in the Skippers' two most recent games, giving Gallotta hope that his lineup will indeed start to produce more. Both guys had two hits in a 12-4 loss to Hull.

Straughn picked up a couple more hits the next day in a 22-1 victory over South Shore Christian Academy. Pilczak and Blanco (three RBI on the day) also had a couple hits in limited playing time, as Gallotta started playing many of his reserves after the third inning.

Bryan, who pitched the first four innings (allowing just one hit and an unearned run while striking out five) to pick up the win, also jacked a two-run homer. Junior Brian Straughn knocked in three runs, including a two-run triple.

Junior left fielder Brendan Barrett was one of the bench players who got a few at-bats, and he went 1-for-2 with two RBI.



Pilczak pitched two innings of relief, and the game was stopped after the top of the sixth.

It was a nice way for the team to bounce back from the previous day's loss to Hull. Cohasset was tied with the Pirates, arguably the most talented team in the South Shore League, 2-2 after three innings.

Hull then exploded for five in the fourth inning, and cruised from there. Pirates pitcher Justin Albert struck out 14 Cohasset batters.

Gallotta does not make excuses for his team, but he did point out that Cohasset has gone up against some of the best pitchers in the league. The Skippers have faced the number-one starter of Carver and Abington thus far, and Harwich's number-two. The trend could very well continue on Tuesday when the Skippers host

Softball team hits a tough stretch

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

There's something about the Hull peninsula that can cast a spell on a visiting team.

In the world of sand-blown playing fields, tidal currents and strong winds, the luck of the Cohasset softball team hit a season low on April 14.The Pirates handed the Lady Skippers their fourth loss in a row by a 7-2 score.

Any fan who left the game after four innings would have concluded the two teams matched up very closely. Cohasset's Christina Pinkus frustrated several Pirate batters with her flawless pitching. By the end of the game, she would amass ten strikeouts.

Christina benefited from a talented infield of Erin Liddell at first, Virginia Spofford at second, Anna Haggerty in the shortstop position, and Katie James at the hot corner. Casey Anderson provided Pinkus with a solid target at the catcher position.

"Our fielding was great," said Pinkus. "Melissa Crowley-Buck showed a lot of intensity in the outfield. The infield really held off the Pirates well. Aside from the 5th inning let-up, we played a pretty respectable game."

Indeed, the 5th inning proved the undoing for the Cohasset nine. The Pirates' bats swirled faster than the windmill in nearby Hull Gut, and the Skippers could not weather the storm. After a slew of hits and four Cohasset errors, the Pirates had put five runs on the scoreboard.

The 6th inning proved no walk on Nantasket Beach for the Skippers either. The women of Hull banged in two more runs on three base hits.

The tide turned in the top of the seventh. Pinkus hammered a deep homerun into center field. Casey Anderson walked, followed by hits from Virginia Spofford and Erin Liddell. A passed ball then allowed Anderson to score, accounting for the two Cohasset runs. Hull would finish it off from there.

"This was a great game until we lost our defensive composure in the 5th inning," said head coach Deb Bostwick. "We seem to have one bad inning that loses us the game. This is something

All-Scholastic Wrestling team

Cohasset is tops with five representatives

Five CHS student-athletes - Matt Casey, Jonathan Littauer, Kevin Dinsmore, Shane Dorian and David McKenna - have been named to the Mariner's All-Scholastic wrestling team for 2005.

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one. There was an abundance of wrestling talent on the South Shore this season. Making the most noise, however, were those from Cohasset, Weymouth and Rockland, which set this team's standards pretty high.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 16, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top wrestlers in Marinerland for this honor:

Shane Dorian - Junior
140 - Cohasset

Shane Dorian

One of three individual state champions on a Cohasset team that won its first Div. 3 state title in the history of the program…A transfer this year from Duxbury, improved immensely to the tune of a 40-8 overall record…Won the 17-team North Quincy tournament in January…Also placed second at the Cohasset tourney and fifth in Marshfield in December…Was wrestling his best at the end of the season…Placed second at All-States in Salem, losing only to top-seed Bob Murray of Central Catholic in the final…Lost in the South sectional final, but came back the next weekend to win the state final against the same opponent (Rockland's Jackie Erickson)…Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney: "Shane's consistent hard work throughout the year helped him peak at the end of the season. He was able to make New Englands, which needless to say is a remarkable accomplishment."

Matt Casey - Senior (Capt.)

Matt Casey

A great 42-5 record on the year, doing so in what was arguably the state's most competitive weight class… Did not lose a single dual meet match all season…Finished fourth in the state competition to qualify for All-States…At states, finished behind three athletes who all placed at All-States…Won the Marshfield and Cohasset tournaments, with the Marshfield tourney probably the toughest regular season competition in the area…Was on his way to winning North Quincy as well, before bowing out to injury…Battled that injury for the rest of the year, and still put up great results…Lauded by his coaches for his toughness…Also a Mariner football All-Scholastic last fall for his standout efforts as an offensive lineman…Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney: "Matt is probably the toughest person on the team. He's just a strong, powerful kid."

David McKenna - Junior
145 - Cohasset

Rebounded from an injury incurred during football season to win the sectional and state titles in his weight class for the Skippers…Won a match at the All-States competition in Salem in late February…Finished the season with an impressive 34-5 overall record…Often wrestled with teammate Shane Dorian on days between matches, which surely made for some interesting afternoons on the Cohasset practice mat…Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney: "Dave's athleticism is his biggest asset. He's also a really hard worker. He works with Shane a lot, and they push each other to be even better."

Jonathan Littauer - Senior (Capt.)
119 - Cohasset

Jonathan Littauer

A four-year varsity letter-winner and three-time placer at states, Littauer graduates with 105 career wins… Placed fifth in the states, and competed at All-States as an alternate…The likely highlight of his season was winning the Marshfield tournament, beating some top-notch grapplers along the way…Also placed second in the North Quincy and Cohasset tournaments…In the sectionals, also finished second…Was a co-captain on the CHS soccer team in the fall…Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney: "Jon had a phenomenal career. He was such a gamer. Whether it was 119 or 125, he always wrestled the opponent's toughest kid."

Kevin Dinsmore - Senior
130 - Cohasset

Kevin Dinsmore

Recorded a 35-6 mark this season…Like teammate Matt Casey, did not lose a dual meet match all season… Won the North Quincy and Cohasset tournaments…At NQ, defeated two athletes who had previously beaten him at the Marshfield competition… Finished fifth at Marshfield… Was a runner-up at sectionals and placed fifth at states, with all three losses at states coming by a single point…Also a Mariner All-scholastic in the fall for soccer…Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney: "Kevin's greatest assets were his quickness and speed. He is one of the quickest wrestlers I've ever coached."

Guy Matisis - Senior (Capt.)
215 - Hingham

No question here…This multi-talented athlete followed up his stellar football season with an amazing wrestling season this winter…Won just about every meet in which he entered, eventually ending up at the New England Championships after winning the All-State title at 215…Broke several records at HHS this season…Won the Div. 2 South Sectional and the Div. 2 State Championship…Finished his senior season with a record of 47-4 and set an HHS record for career wins (144)…Won the championship in his class at virtually every tourney he entered, winning the title at the Belmont and Weymouth tourneys, while finishing a strong third at the elite Lowell Tourney…Was named by his team as the "Outstanding Wrestler of the Year"…A talented linebacker on the HHS football team, Matisis led the squad to a league title and Div. 4 Super Bowl appearance…The Patriot League All-star plans to continue his football career at Amherst College next fall.

Paul Robinson - Senior (Capt.)
112 - Rockland

Ended is illustrious four-year wrestling career at RHS in style, advancing to the New England Championships and finishing with a 156-25 record…Robinson's second place finish in the 112 class at the Div. 3 South Sectionals helped Rockland capture third as a team at the meet…Reached the finals in both the Div. 3 State Championships and All-State Championships and finished a close second at both meets…Performed extremely well throughout the dual-meet season, not losing a single Patriot League match, and at invitational tourneys, finishing the year winning 40 of 45 matches…Won the title in the 119 class at the Cohasset tourney, was named the Outstanding Wrestler at the Whitman/Hanson tourney, and was a strong second at the Marshfield Holiday Tourney…His performance at the Cohasset tourney helped the Rockland team finish third overall…Robinson hopes to continue his wrestling career at Bridgewater State College.

Dan Bohenek - Junior
189 - Rockland

It's been a breakout year on every playing field for this talented junior…One of the top running backs/linebackers on the RHS football team in the fall, Bohenek was one of the most feared wrestlers in his 189 class this winter…Bohenek won 37-straight matches before falling to the eventual New England champ in the quarterfinals of the All-State Championships… Ended up finishing fifth at All-States, topping fellow All-Scholastic Bruno Silva and qualifying for the New Englands…Won the Div. 3 South Sectional and Div. 3 State titles in his class, topping fellow All-Scholastic and rival Matt Baroudi…Also won a pair of tournament titles this winter, capturing first at the Marshfield Holiday Tourney and Cohasset Tourney, where Rockland finished third as a team…Ended up finishing the season with 40 wins and just three losses…Just a junior, the PL All-star returns to the football field and the wrestling mats next season.

Jackie Erickson - Junior
140 - Rockland

Another standout performer on the Rockland team, Erickson won the Div. 3 South Sectional title in the 140 class…A week later at the All-States, Erickson was a strong fifth, qualifying the junior for the New England Championships…Topped Div. 1 State Champ Brian Foye from Lowell along the way…Finished second a week earlier at the Div. 3 State Championships… Compiled a season record 41-6…Regular season highlights included his stellar victory over rival Shane Dorion in the finals of the 140 class at the Cohasset Tourney, where the RHS team finished third overall…Erickson was named the meet's Outstanding Wrestler for his efforts…The Patriot League All-star finished a strong second at the Marshfield Holiday Tourney…Also ran cross country at RHS last fall.

Matt Shea - Senior
275 -Weymouth

The "Shea Hey" kid … This mountain of a man finished eighth in the All-New England tournament, losing his final match in double overtime … Finished fifth at the All-States … Slowed at times with back trouble, he still managed to win more than 30 matches with his overpowering size and solid technique. … Fell a single point short of winning the state championship, falling 3-2 to defending champ JimMcGillicuddy Won the Lowell Holiday Tournament, just for fun … Finished his career 88-14 with 66 pins …Plans to attend Curry College … Coach Kevin Mackin: "He's right there with the best guy in the state. Matt has great footwork. He's just a great athletic for a kid that big."

Scott Keeley - Senior
160 - Weymouth

A 160-pound pit bull … Won his second straight South Section title . …Placed eight in the All-New England meet, defeating the defending Connecticut state champ along the way …Finished the season with a 45-11 record, giving him a career mark of 111-30 … Had the misfortune of wrestling in the same weight class as Franklin's CJ Colace, who didn't lose a match all season.. Fell to Colace in the semifinals of the state tournament … Won the Whitman-Hanson Tournament again … Coach Kevin Mackin: "Scott wrestles at the toughest weigh. Still he was able to battle his way into the {state}finals. Scott's a three-sport captain and he's facing guys who wrestle year-round."

Bruno Silva - Senior
189 - Weymouth

Made the All-New England tournament at 189 pounds, finishing sixth … Helped the Wildcats win their eighth straight second title with another remarkably consistent season … Won more than 30 matches that saw him, including a few in the sections … Won the Merrimack (N.H.) Tournament … Wrapped up a three-year varsity career with a 86-31 mark, including a 45-13 senior season …Runner-up in the state meet … Voted most improved wrestler by the team … Coach Kevin Mackin: "He worked awfully hard in the off season. To come back and finish in the top eight in New England says a lot about him.

Matt Reeves - Senior
215 - Weymouth

Made to state meet at 215 pounds and proved he belonged with a pair of victories … Dropped a tough semifinal match at the state meet and finished fifth after suffering a takedown at the buzzer. … Followed in the footsteps of his brother Sid, who also wrestled for Weymouth at 215 pounds … Another consistent force for the Wildcats all season long … Won the Whitman-Hanson tournament … Lead Weymouth wins 37 wins, losing only eight. Coach Kevin Mackin: "He saw limited minutes going into the season, but he waited patiently and really had a great year.

Karl Gumpwright - Junior
103 - Pembroke

Sometimes a little goes a long, long way … Tipping the scales at 103 pounds, Gump left a few bumps on his way to the All-State meet … Finished third at the states, outscoring his last three opponents, 33-3 … Also finished third in the South Section … Gained the big-match experience he lacked heading in the tournament … Could contend for the state title next year … Coach Dave Vining: "Karl can beat anyone."

Ryan Wells - Senior
160 - Silver Lake

Steve Parigian - Junior
275 - Braintree

Softball team hits a tough stretch

we really need to work on as a team."

Overall, though, Coach Bostwick seems optimistic about her team's potential.

"We have a sturdy defense and an excellent pitching lineup," she remarked. "Our batting will get better with time and individual work. This team shows a lot of promise. The girls need to believe that too! More than anything they need to improve their mental strength."

The Hull game came on the heels of two tough losses earlier in the week. On Monday the 11th, the Skippers lost a hard-fought game to Carver, 2-1.

Pinkus pitched all seven innings, allowing only three hits and three walks, while striking out five. Carver scored both runs in the 1st, with Pinkus and her defense holding them from there.

Cohasset scored in the 7th, with Spofford hitting a double with one out and Liddell hitting a sacrifice fly to left field for Spofford to advance to third. Sophomore Laura Campedelli then knocked a base hit to left for an RBI, scoring Spofford.

Carver right fielder Danielle Spillane robbed Crowley-Buck of a double with an over-the-shoulder catch to end the game.

The next day, in a game that was played in the snow with slippery field conditions, the girls lost to Harwich, 11-7.

Hitting well for Cohasset was James (3-for-4 with a triple and an RBI), Anderson (2-for-4 with an RBI) and Liddell (2-for-4 with 3 RBI). Crowley-Buck went 1-for-3 with an RBI.

Pinkus pitched well in relief, going five innings, giving up just one hit and getting nine strike outs.

The Lady Skippers have had plenty of time to rest over April vacation. They will look to turn their season around when they face Norwell on Tuesday.

Sports editor Mark Goodman contributed to this story.

CHS tennis teams set for showdown with Norwell

"We certainly have the capability of raising our game when it matters most," Swartz said. "But now we have to do it. If we don't play our best, it will be tough for us to win."

As for the girls' side of things, it is Norwell who has something to prove to Cohasset. The Lady Skippers have dominated the league in recent years, and posted two solid 4-1 victories over Norwell last season.

Many eyes will be on the first singles matchup between Cohasset senior Elizabeth Stone and Norwell freshman Susan Bitetti. Both are undefeated so far this year, and have dominated opponents, rarely losing more than one game in a set.

For Cohasset, freshman Meg Anderson has been establishing herself as a force on the singles circuit, and could very well be at second singles against Norwell's Taylor Cleaves. Should that be the case on Tuesday, that will be another great match.

Unlike seasons past, it is tough to figure out where the points will be coming from when the girls square off. It should make for a highly entertaining encounter, one that Norwell first doubles player and senior captain Carly Arena says should be as close as possible.

"We know it's going to be 3-2 one way or the other," Arena said. "No one is going to win easily."

So the stage is set for Tuesday with Norwell. The girls match will be played at Norwell High School, while the boys will play at Milliken Field on Bancroft Road in Cohasset, near the high school. Both are scheduled to start at 4 p.m.

Norwell, as the Clippers may throw senior ace Dave Liffers (4-0 on the year), whom Gallotta calls the best pitcher in the league.

The Cohasset coach says his lineup should warm up with the weather, and that will have to happen if the Skippers are to achieve their goal of making the state tournament. Either way, Gallotta says he has enjoyed his coaching experience so far this season.

"I'm really proud of the this team; they're a good group of kids," he said. "I haven't had a bad day with them yet."

Nor-Coh rivalry takes center stage next week

Any athletic contest between Cohasset and Norwell is highly anticipated, as the two are strong rivals in the South Shore League.

Next week, the two schools will square off in six sports: baseball, softball, boys and girls lacrosse, and boys and girls tennis.

Following is the schedule for those games, with location and times:

Baseball: Tuesday, Milliken Field in Cohasset, 4 p.m.
Softball: Tuesday, Norwell High School, 4 p.m.
Boys Tennis: Tuesday, Milliken, 4 p.m.
Girls Tennis: Tuesday, Norwell High School, 4 p.m.
Boys Lacrosse: Thursday, Milliken, 6 p.m.
Girls Lacrosse: Thursday, Norwell High School, 4 p.m.

COASTAL STARS

Editor's Note: The following Mite A report was intended for the April 15 edition of the Mariner, but was omitted due to space constraints. It is running today in its entirety.

Mite A

The Coastal Stars Mite A team began their playoff series on Sunday, April 3 against a tough Brewins team from Taunton. The Stars had finished the regular season in second place with a record of 17-1-4. They had played the Brewins twice before, winning the first with the second game ending in a tie. Both teams came ready to play, neither of them wanting their season to end with a loss.

The first period saw tight play form both teams and strong goal tending at both ends of the ice. The Stars forwards of Colin MacDonald, Kenny Parnell, Tommy O'Brien, Brandon Winn, David Cataldo, Brendan Crane, Martin Buckley, Pat Holway and Sam Topham had numerous scoring opportunities, but the Brewins goalie was unflappable against the Stars offensive arsenal. Pat Holway was finally able to score the first goal midway through the second period skating it up from center ice and roofed it over the goalies glove.

By the end of the second period the boys and girls from Taunton had managed to tie the game up. Tommy O'Brien scored in the third period with a wrist shot from the right side to put the Stars back up by one with ten minutes left in the game. The Stars defensemen, Jeremy Duchini, Charley Michalowski, Matt Burchill, Declan Leahy and Charlie Blackington continued to play strong defense the remainder of the game limiting the number of shots on net for the Brewins.

The few remaining shots that they did make were stopped with ease by goalie Jeff Nagle, who just got better with each game the Stars played. At the final buzzer, the Stars won the game with a 2-1 score and were off to the next rounds in the playoffs. It was such a hard fought victory, who knew at the time that this would be the easiest playoff game the Stars would have.

The final two games in the South Shore Conference playoff were held this past weekend. The Stars had to face the always competitive Norwood team early Saturday morning if they wanted a chance to play in the Championship game to be played on Sunday. The Stars had won the first regular season game to Norwood but had lost a tournament game over Christmas vacation.

The Stars were first to score five minutes into the first period when Charley Michalowski brought the puck up from center ice and passed it to Martin Buckley who chipped past the strong Norwood goalie. The defense for both teams played a strong role in this game, but the goalie for Norwood and Stars' goalie Jeff Nagle played outstanding in the nets. The Norwood team was unable to score until late in the second period making the game tied after two. Two minutes into the third period, Martin Buckley scored his second goal of the game off of a pass from Sam Topham.

With six minutes remaining in the third, the kids from Norwood were able to get by the defense and slipped on in to once again tie the game. At the end of regulation time, the game was tied 2-2. Had this been a regular season game, that would have been the end of it. But in all playoff situations there must be one winner. So the two teams continued to play for not just one, but three five minute over time periods.

The Stars seemed to control the play for most of this, however, the Norwood goalie kept them out of the net. Jeff Nagle for the Stars appeared to stay calm and in control as if he has played under this pressure hundreds of times. Finally, with only 10 second left in the third overtime, Sam Topham bounced a shot off the goalie's mask and, as he has done many times throughout the season, Colin MacDonald was in position to knock in the rebound for the winning goal. The Stars were going to the finals after a 3-2 victory. The parents and friends in the stands, who were losing their voices from cheering on the boys, were almost as elated as the eight and nine year olds on the ice.

The Stars' third and final playoff game was held on Sunday April 10 in Randolph. It was truly a south shore final with the boys from Marshfield and Cohasset facing a very competitive team from Duxbury. The teams were evenly matched as should be the case in the finals. Either team could win this game.

The first period was a back and forth battle, with a number of scoring opportunities for both teams, but the two goalies were not letting anything pass them. After one period of play, it was 0-0. The Stars scored first when Colin MacDonald shot the puck past the Duxbury goalie off of a rebound from Tommy O'Brien. The lead was short lived as the Duxbury team tied it up less than four minutes later.

After two, the game was tied 1-1. Duxbury scored early in the third period and the game went back to a show of the goalies. The Stars boys stayed at it and finally with 6 minutes left in the game, Sam Topham made a centering pass to Martin Buckley who shot it past the weak side of the goalie. Maybe not a hat trick for Martin, but the three goals in the two games made the difference in keeping the Stars alive for overtime play. Jeff Nagle managed to stare down a one on one by a strong offensive player from Duxbury and denied him of a goal to keep the game tied.

Neither team was able to score for the remainder of the game, so for the second time in as many days, the Coastal Stars were going to overtime. Throughout the first overtime there was plenty of skating, passing, back checking and shooting on net, but no one was able to get one in the net. Halfway through the second overtime, the line of Colin MacDonald, Brandon Winn and Charley Michalowski were able to put enough pressure at the Duxbury end of the ice, that Charley was able to lift one over the goalie.

The Stars Mite A team became the South Shore Conference Champions!

The Coastal Star Mite A's had an outstanding season. I wish I could have mentioned all of the outstanding plays by all of the boys, both offense and defense, but this article would be even longer than it already is. Jeff Nagle was the Playoff MVP because without his outstanding plays in net the team would not have gotten this far. The boys played as a team all year and just like the New England Patriots, that is why they won the Championship game.

No one superstar, just a group of boys who love to play hockey who learned to work together. They were fortunate to have a great group of dedicated coaches, Tim Leahy, Tim Burchill and Charlie Parnell. These men work with the team two times a week for seven months. Their dedication, and the dedication of all the Stars coaches at all the levels of hockey offered by the Coastal Stars, is second to none! Thanks Coaches for a great year and a great experience. Enjoy your time off, summer hockey starts in two months!

PeeWee C3

The Coastal Stars PEE WEE "C-3" hockey team capped off a spectacular undefeated season with 5-1 victory over a very tough Whitman/Hanson/Kingston squad in the "A" bracket championship game

It was a hard-earned victory that needed extra effort from all involved due to being short handed with one of the top front liners Sam Labo out of the lineup with a broken arm

Just check out these statistics:

Twenty – one (21) Regular season games – Twenty (20) Wins – Zero (0) Losses – One (1) Tie

Four (4) Playoff games – Four (4) Wins – Zero (0) Losses – Zero (0) Ties

138 Goals Scored

31 Goals Scored Against

1.24 percent per Game Goals Against Average

Eight (8) – Shut-outs

A special thanks goes out to the hard work and dedication to Head Coach Dave Denton, and Assistant Coaches John Fitzsimmons, Steve Healey, Steve Mudge, and Paul Queenan

Of course, the success of this season could not have been without the dedication of the kids parents who brought them to practices, games, and were the best cheering section in youth hockey

See you next season and have a safe and happy summer

Squirt C1

There are two terrible things that can happen on April 16.

1.) You receive an IRS notice with these nasty three words: "You're being audited!" or 2.) Your team is facing the Coastal Stars in the semi finals! Pick your poison!

Norwood chose the later...

On Saturday, April 16 - a date when most people were packing for vacation, the Coastal Stars coach Ken Sheldon was working the X's and O's on the chalk board for a short handed hockey team.

A.) Lose, and you break out the golf clubs. B.) Win, and you get to pack the hockey bag one more time because you're heading to the finals! The Stars circled choice B!

At 9:04 of the first period, Chase Sheldon fed a picturesque pass to Kevin Friedland. Friedland fiddled and diddled all the way to the Norwood net and blasted a roof top wrist shot! 1-0 Stars!! Then at 6:37 of the first frame, Tucker Welch lit the lamp with assists from Adam Haskell and Ed Tobin.

Period two started with an all out Norwood attack - only to be suffocatedby the Stars awesome defense. Look up defense in Webster's and you'll see a picture of Mark McGoldrick, Christopher Lund, Sam Asnault and Jason Tolman.

All four men gave Stars goaltender Michael Soucey a day without heavy lifting! At 12:17 of the 3rd period, Norwood cut the lead in half. The Stars answered that score with goal #2 from Tucker Welch with Christopher Lund and Sam Asnault on the assists. Norwood wouldn't quit; after pulling the goalie, they cut the lead to 1 at 2:08 of the final period.

It was a great effort by Norwood; however the Stars put the frosting on the cake with 38 seconds remaining in the contest: McGoldrick to Tolman to Jack (The BigShow) Condon. Condon fired at the empty bucket and gave the Stars a decisive 4-2 lead and a ticket to the finals.

Circle April 23 on your calendar- one local team will still be playing hockey!

Mite B

April 10, 2005 a beautiful Sunday morning, 60 degrees with a light westerly breeze. Should I golf or fish today? Hmmmm..... Keep the clubs in the trunk, the fishing rod in the closet, and grab the "Six Pack" and their teammates because the Coastal Stars Mite B are still playing hockey!

The Frozen Four has melted to The Tundra Two. It was The Stars vs. Braintree in the finals, two teams with the highest (coaching) payrolls and the biggest stars. Hold onto your beers (and refrain from spilling them on Sheffield) because this is the Sox and Yankees of youth hockey.

Playing in front of a packed house at the Randolph Ice Arena for the Championship, both teams were ready for an intense match-up. The Stars came out a bit unprepared for the onslaught of the fleet-skating Braintree team. And Braintree capitalized on this by scoring the first goal at 13:07.

But as countless championship-caliber teams have learned throughout the history of hockey, the come from behind victories are the sweetest. This is especially true when an opposing net minder was at the top of his game - and Stars goalie Kal Maier was HOT!

COASTAL STARS

Additionally, the deadly blend of size and speed on defense was evident when watching what's become known throughout the league as the Coastal Stars Mite B "SIX PACK": Declan Leahy, Patrick Graham, James Hussey, Aiden Beresford, Jack Evitts, and Joey Redfearn. Goal scorers get the press clippings and the chicks, but DEFENSE wins hockey games. And for this "no-name" defense, it was just another day at the office, but without the water cooler gossip, because these guys were on a mission.

Entering the 2nd frame with a one goal deficit, the Stars needed some quick offense and once again the "Smurf line" answered the call. At 10:11 Curtis Golden dug the puck out of the offensive corner and shuffled a pass to Michael Lund. Lund sent a stick to stick pass to Robert Reidy - Reidy blasted a "one timer" to the back of the net to even the score 1-1.

The go-ahead goal came from the offensive line of Bryan Bowman, Matt Doyle, and Brendan Evitts - looking like men against boys. This trio has been firing on all cylinders and it showed today: Doyle won a face off in the offensive zone, backhanded a pass to B. Evitts who, in turn, sent a laser pass to Bowman in the slot. Bowman riffled a wrist shot top right corner to give the Stars the go-ahead goal, making the score 2-1.

The 3rd period started with outstanding two-way hockey from the line of Jeff Powers, Tucker Ambrose, and Sam Rice. This line is big and physical, and continuously banged the boards to stifle any and all Braintree rushes. Bowman cemented the victory when at 4:11 of the final period he gained the blue line and blasted a snap shot that whistled past the glove-side hand of the Braintree goalie. With a final score of 3-1 in favor of the Stars, we all could savor their incredible (38-3-2) season and bask in the limelight as the World Champion Stars!

As this will be my last literary effort of the season, I'd like to take a moment to reflect on the growth of these players. Back in the fall, coming together from various areas on the south shore, our team was selected. Of course there was enthusiasm and high hopes, but there were also a lot of questions. To see these young men go from "The Bad News Bears on Ice" to the "Miracle on Ice" was truly an incredible experience. The fact that over the past nine months these young men have grown in so many ways: teamwork, endurance, enthusiasm, perseverance, and friendship.

But, not unlike summering in Newport in the late 80's - all good things must come to an end. And so must our team. Though it will feel for many of us like the breakup of the Beatles, we at least can enjoy and bask in the glory of an outstanding season.

Cohasset Recreation Department offers U.S.C.G.A. Boating Safety Course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a 2-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. U.S.C.G.A. instructors will teach the 2-session course, which will be held on 2 consecutive Saturdays, May 14, and May 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 781-383-4109, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on first call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Fly Fishing Lessons

Fly Fishing Lessons for bass, stocked pond via Cohasset Recreation Department, far all ages 7 through adult.

On Saturday, May 21, at 9:55 a.m. Sharp! Learn how to fly fish for bass on a stocked pond in Duxbury.

Cohasset Recreation Department is offering this unique opportunity via Paul Bruce for $36 per person.

All fishing rods and equipment will be provided; all you need to do is register by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 781-383-4109. Class must be limited in size so early registration for this program is advised.

Evan's Run set for May 22

The 5th Annual Evan's Run has been scheduled for Sunday, May 22 at 10:30 a.m. at Norwell High School.

The race, which offers a 5K run and walk and a 10K run, is named in honor of Evan Henry, a Norwell native who passed away in July of 2000 at the age of 11.

Evan was autistic, and the Henry family decided soon after his passing to set up a foundation that raises funds for organizations that help autistic children like Evan. Thus, the Evan Henry Foundation was born.

The first Evan's Run had great numbers, but attendance and participation has waned in the last three years. The Foundation has organized quite an event this year, including live entertainment from the Jon Frattasio Band. There will be a bandstand set up at the high school, where the race begins and ends, and the entertainment is scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon.

A post-race party has also been planned, and will be held at McGreal's Tavern in Norwell Center. Festivities there are set to begin around 1 p.m.

Cost to register for the race is $20 ($10 for the various children's races that have also been set up), with proceeds going to the Evan Henry foundation. If you just want to watch the race and enjoy the music, that is totally free of charge.

For more information about the race, or to register, go to the Foundation's website, www.evanhenry.org, or call the race hotline at 617-347-2068.

Shawl Ministry meets at the Hingham Library

The next monthly meeting of the Shawl Ministry of the South Shore will be held this Saturday, April 23 from 1-3 p.m. in the Trustees Meeting Room of the Hingham Public Library.

The group meets the fourth Saturday of every month and is open to anyone interested in knitting or crocheting as a way to express the love of God to people in need of care. The sessions close with a blessing over the works in progress and the finished shawls. New participants are always welcome and can be taught needlework basics if necessary. The Rev. Victoria Gaskell is the facilitator. Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and three skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M, N or P hook and four skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about The Shawl Ministry, go to www.shawlministry.com.

Hingham Public Library is off Route 228 at 66 Leavitt St. The entrance is at the rear on the lower level and is handicap-accessible. For information, call Victoria weekdays at 617-353-3036.

OBITUARIES

May H. Jarman

Worked at WBZ

May H. (Hamilton) Jarman, 86 of Cohasset, died on April 15, 2005 at Quincy Medical Center.

Born in Weston, she was the daughter of the late Hugh and Sophie Hamilton and attended Weston public schools graduating in 1936.

Mrs. Jarman was retired from WBZ where she had worked as a secretary for many years.

She leaves her husband, Sydney Jarman.

A graveside service will be held on Friday, April 22 at 10 a.m. at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

Arrangements have been made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., in Cohasset.

Jeannette D. McNeil

Born in Cohasset

Jeannette D. (Dolan) McNeil, 86, of Hull, died on April 16, 2005 at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home.

Born in Cohasset, she was the daughter of the late John and Elizabeth Dolan. She attended school in Cohasset and later was employed by Cohasset schools.

Mrs. McNeil was active with seniors in Hull, loved to play cards and especially loved her grandchildren and great grandchildren.

She leaves her husband, Michael McNeil and two sons, John and his wife Marsha and Paul M. McNeil, all of Hull. She also leaves two grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Visiting hours at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset on Thursday, April 21 from 4-8 p.m. A funeral mass will be held on Friday, April 22 at 11 a.m. at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Interment will follow at Woodside Cemetery in Cohasset.

Alfred R. Krastin

Mother lives in Cohasset

Alfred R. Krastin, age 64, a Hingham resident for the past 30 years, died suddenly on Saturday, April 16, 2005 at his home.

He was born in Boston and spent his early life in Braintree, graduating from Braintree High School. He then graduated from Northeastern University with a master's degree in business administration.

For many years, Mr. Krastin was a human resource manager for Codman & Shurtleff, Inc., a medical supply firm located, at that time, in Randolph. He retired in 1993.

Mr. Krastin served his country as a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army during the Vietnam war era.

He was also a member of the Halifax County Club.

He leaves his devoted wife, Susan E. (Short) Krastin of Hingham; his two beloved sons, John C. Krastin of Stillwater, Okla. and Charles E. Krastin of Hanover; his loving mother, Mabel E. (Crawley) Krastin of Cohasset. He was the son of the late Alfred C. Krastin.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Wednesday, April 20 at 10 a.m. at the Church of the Resurrection, 1057 Main St. (Route 228), Hingham.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel of Hingham.

Donations may be made in Mr. Krastin's memory to the charity of one's choice.

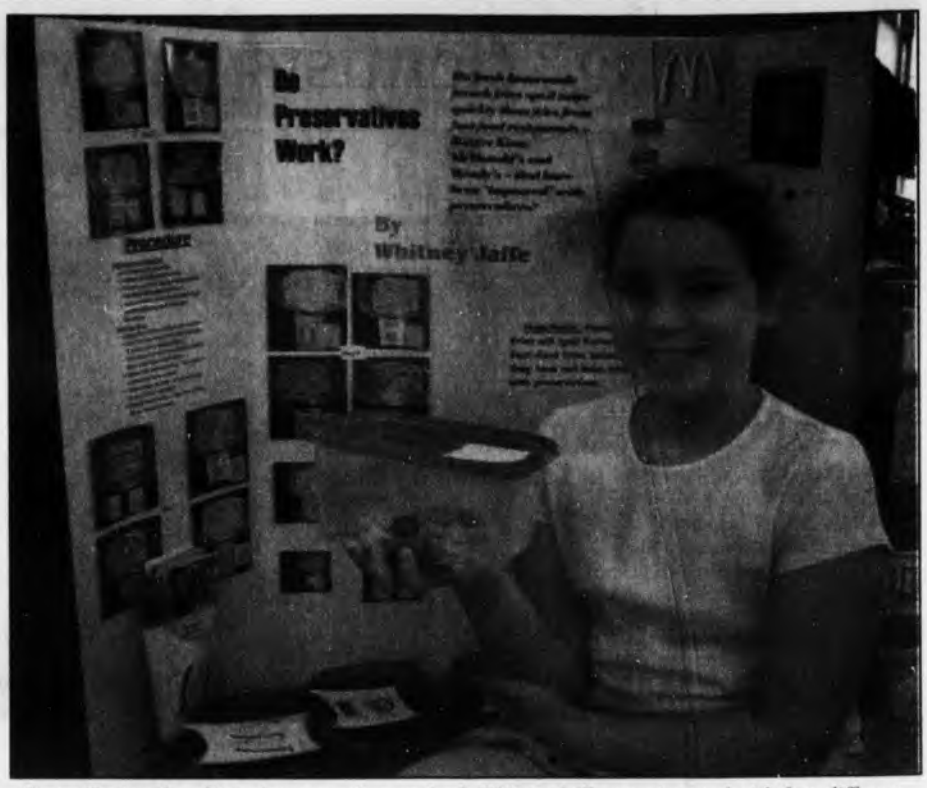
Budding scientists show their talents at Deer Hill fair

Photos and interviews by Samantha Brown



Parents, grandparents, other family and friends packed the Deer Hill cafeteria Friday, April 15 for the fifth-grade science fair. With experiments covering everything from flora and fauna to animals to sports and even cosmetics and food, a great variety of topics were covered.

Each student was given the task of asking a question their experiment would answer, making an assumption about how the experiment would play out, then finishing the task to test their hypothesis. While many received the results they anticipated, science is not always predictable…

Above: Budding microbiologist Anya Gruber grew penicillin mold, the spores used to make the antibiotic penicillin. She said to begin her project, she visited the South Shore Hospital microbiology lab, where she was shown around and given petrie dishes to complete her project. At the bottom of the petrie dish is agar, a gelatinous substance which bacteria can grow on. Anya said she collected three different kinds of bacteria — some from a healthy person's mouth, some from a sick person's mouth, and some from her toilet bowl at home. She let the bacteria go to work in the dishes and found when she used a plain piece of bread without preservatives, and just a few drops of water, in a warm, dry place, it yielded more bacteria than anything else. In addition, Anya exposed the agar in a few different petrie dishes to a dirty hand, a hand washed with antibacterial soap, and a hand washed with soap and water to see which kinds of bacteria she could grow, and surprisingly, the hand washed with soap and water yielded the poorest results, proving fancy antibacterial soaps may not fight germs as well as old-fashioned soap and water.

Right:Christina Healey conducted an experiment of the mind. She created her own flash cards with color names written on them. However, she wrote the words in a different color ink than the word itself represented. For example, the word "red" was drawn in black ink. She quickly went through the flash cards with subjects, asking them to read what they saw and say the color out loud, wondering whether they would say what they were reading, or the color of the ink. She said she found out of the 11 people who participated in her experiment, more adults said the word they read, while more children said the color of the ink.

Above: Testing the effect of preservatives on food, Whitney Jaffe experimented with four different types of french fries to see which would spoil first. She tested fries from Burger King, McDonald's and Wendy's, as well as a homemade batch. Whitney said she thought the homemade fries would begin producing mold the fastest because they did not have any preservatives, and she was right. However, the fries with the preservatives ended up with just as much mold as the homemade fries over a time span of 30 days, which led her to believe that while preservatives don't stop mold entirely, it can inhibit its growth for a time.

Emily Stanislawzyk's project studied whether or not music has an effect on the growth of plants. Armed with four flower pots, she planted an even amount of petunia seeds in each pot, and tended to them all with the same water and sunlight conditions. However, two of her pots were placed next to a radio and treated to the sounds of Mix 98.5 FM, which seemed to have a positive influence. Of the two pots which listened to music, sprouts began popping through the soil in nine days, while it took 10 days for the non-musical plants to sprout. In addition, the musical plants had more sprouts in their individual pots than the non-musical plants. Emily said she had not anticipated music would affect her plants, but she was pleasantly surprised.

While most children are told not to play with their food, Jamie Timothy's experiment centered around the popping ability of popcorn. He questioned whether corn popped on the stove would be fluffier than corn popped in the microwave, and although he had predicted stove-popped kernels would be fluffier, much to his astonishment, the corn from the microwave was significantly larger. Timothy compiled graphs of the different popping variables and showed examples of the two types of corn. Those popped in the microwave were obviously much larger

David Williams' project, "Sunshine on my shoulders makes me happy," tested the affect sunlight has on plants. He took two identical plants and kept one in the shade and gave the other abundant sunlight, and charted the progress or decline in their condition. Just as he suspected, the plant without sunlight began to wilt rather quickly, while the plant which was showered in sunlight thrived.

Taylor Golz took a stab at growing his own crystals, similar to the stalactite's found in caves. He wanted to see if he could grow crystals using water and baking soda in a week or less. With two glass jars and a string tied between, he experimented with the amount of baking soda used in each batch to see what combination yielded the best crystals. He said he had a great time tracking their progress every day, watching to see how many more would appear.

Author to visit May 5

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset and Buttonwood Books & Toys welcome Richard Marinick, author of "Boyos" at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Thursday, May 5, 10 a.m.

Mr. Marinick will discuss his personal experiences that led to the writing of his book. "Boyos" is the story of Wacko Curran, his brother, Kevin and their life as criminal players in the Irish underworld of South Boston. This is a story about drugs, gambling, guns, robbery, the obligatory ingredients when narrating a tale about cops and robbers, from an author with personal experience.

Marinick has worked as a Massachusetts state trooper, a "sand hog" on the Big Dig in Boston, a short- order cook, a nightclub bouncer, and was a member of an armored car and bank robbery ring, for which he served 10 years in state prison. He lives and writes in South Boston.

This is a free event and the public is most welcome. Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 or order online to reserve a signed copy.

SUMMER FUN AT KALEIDOSCOPE Kaleidoscope is an arts and creativity program specially designed for kids aged 8 to 13 years, which runs for three weeks from July 25 through Aug. 12. Students can sign up for one, two or three weekly sessions. As the name Kaleidoscope suggests students rotate through four, 75-minute classes daily in art, creative writing, improvisational theater and problem solving - all followed by a refreshing swim in the Milton pool. Kaleidoscope is specifically designed around small classes taught by qualified, enthusiastic teachers in new, air-conditioned classrooms. Sessions run Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and tuition includes T-shirt, lunch and use of the Milton pool. For details, contact Milton Academy at 617-898-2481 or visit www.milton.edu.

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127
MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

Many people with hearing impairments reject the idea of being fitted with a hearing instrument on the basis that it will stigmatize them. This perception is largely borne of a culture steeped in the culture of youth. Whether one agrees or not, there is no argument that the present generation of hearing instruments are so small as to render them nearly invisible. For instance, completely-in-the-canal (CIC) instruments are so small that they fit entirely in the ear canal. Even instruments of the next largest size, in-the-canal (ITC) devices, are so small as to be barely noticeable. These diminutive instruments all but remove one of the biggest objections that many have to being fitted for a hearing instrument.

Hearing loss can affect people of all ages. The good news is that with the latest hearing aid technology, virtually all hearing problems can be helped. It takes the extensive training and skills of a Board Certified hearing Instrument Specialist, however, to really make the difference. At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we are dedicated to helping the hearing impaired maximize their hearing potential. From initial testing and consultations to precise fittings and follow-up care, you can confidently rely on our compassion and abilities here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth PH: 781-337-1144. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. Research indicates that 90% of consumers perceive completely-in-the-canal instruments to be completely invisible.

New itineraries and shore excursions expand passengers' options

By SAM and ARLINE BLEECKER
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

Let's face it: For travelers, Earth's configuration is, well, pretty much a geographical given. But that doesn't mean there's nothing new under the sun for cruise passengers.

In fact, cruise lines and tour operators — ever eager to woo you to sea — are stretching the envelope (or the cruise map, if you will). Onto already super sailings, they're grafting some farther-flung destinations. Even veteran cruisers might have to haul out an atlas.

Here are some to ponder.

1. The Matterhorn — that unmistakable promontory, shaped like a whipped-cream confection that sits above the Swiss village of Zermatt.

If saying "cruise" and "mountain" in the same sentence seems an oxymoron, not to worry. On Celebrity Cruises' Europe sailings, the vessel stays conveniently at sea but you still get to hike near this legendary Alpine peak.

This three-night stay in Switzerland is arranged under the auspices of Celebrity Xpeditions, a program launched last year by the cruise line to offer its passengers new one-of-a-kind experiences.

The Swiss Alps tour begins with a motorcoach ride from Genoa about 100 miles to Zermatt. Because the picturesque village bans autos, the last leg into the mountain town is via horse-drawn carriage. During your stay, take a four-hour hike to Hornlihutte, a Matterhorn base camp built on a ridge at 9,780 feet, to savor the view and a fondue lunch.

Those less athletically inclined can hop a cable car for Matterhorn panoramas, or sightsee by helicopter. The Switzerland stay ends with a predawn train ride to ogle Mont Blanc, Europe's highest mountain.

THE SKINNY: Rates for Celebrity's Matterhorn expedition start at $2,800 (in addition to your cruise fare). Call 800-437-3111 or go to www.celebrity.com

2. Mandalay — ancient Burma's last royal capital city, just emerging from a 30-year time warp.

If you can ignore Myanmar's military dictatorship, Mandalay is part of a cruise tour in a region Rudyard Kipling described a century ago as "quite unlike any land you know about."

"On the Road to Mandalay" is not a vintage movie with Bing and Bob. It's R. Crusoe & Son's nine-day journey through what once was exotic, secretive Burma (now even more exotic-sounding Myanmar). This geographically diverse country has been compared to pretourist Thailand, although some groups promoting democracy there urge would-be visitors to stay away.

The majestic Matterhorn in the Swiss city of Zermatt can be seen on some cruise tours.

An Inuit child.

Mandalay, ancient Burma's last royal capital city, is part of this cruise tour.

For the intrepid, this adventure peels back 2,500 years of history — a world where hundreds of pagodas and temples line the shores of the Irrawaddy, Myanmar's principal river, between Mandalay and Bagan. The tour begins in Yangon (formerly Rangoon), capital city of Myanmar, where you'll find one of the most spectacular Buddhist shrines in Asia, the Shwedagon Pagoda, a towering structure plated with more than 30 tons of glittering gold. Next, fly to Mandalay, where, daily, you can watch the devout brush the teeth of an outsize Buddha. Then embark the deluxe, 126-passenger river cruiser Road to Mandalay to sail the Irrawaddy.

At Inle Lake, enjoy a private tour in traditional canoes for a visit with a local lakeside family. You'll also visit Sagaing, center of Buddhism in Myanmar and home to more than 5,000 monks and nuns living in 600 monasteries.

THE SKINNY: Fares start at $4,390. Call 800-585-8555 or go to www.rcrusoe.com

3. Libya — on the North African coast of the Mediterranean Sea.

Long off the map for American cruisers, Libya officially opened to tourism only last year after the United States lifted its 23-year embargo.

But be aware, even now Libya occupies a place on the U.S. government's State Sponsors of Terrorism list.

Several lines have this country in their crosshairs. Among them, small-ship Clipper Cruises, which recently introduced 12-day sailings that devote three days to Libya, visiting Derna, Benghazi, Al Khums (for Leptis Magna, with its well-preserved ruins of a first-century B.C. Phoenician city) and Tripoli.

Onboard historians, archaeologists and naturalists give informative lectures throughout the cruise and, during two days at sea, prep passengers for the Libyan attractions ahead.

The itinerary also includes two days in Tunisia.

THE SKINNY: The 122-passenger Clipper Adventurer's next 15-day cruise that includes Libya departs May 15. Fares start at $4,380. Call 800-325-0010 or go to www.clippercruise.com

4. Kuujjuaq — at the edge of the great boreal forest in Arctic Canada.

This opportunity comes courtesy of a brand-new Inuit-owned cruise line whose mission is to show off the beauty of this region and the Inuit culture that inhabits it.

Debuting this summer, Cruise North Expeditions will head where no other line's ships can because this is Inuit territory and the Inuit own the cruise line.

Your Canadian Arctic adventure begins after a two-hour flight from Montreal. From Kuujjuaq, Cruise North's itineraries focus on the eastern sections of the region, where mountains, fiords and glaciers create breathtaking scenery, and where arctic wildlife is most prolific and concentrated. You're as likely to glimpse polar bears standing 11 feet tall as you are to sail amid hundreds of beluga whales. In towns where residents number in just the hundreds (and the low hundreds, at that), your wildlife-sighting list will brim with walrus, bearded seal and musk ox. And in August and September, Kuujjuaq witnesses annual migrations of the George River caribou herd.

THE SKINNY: Eight seven-night Arctic cruises are scheduled through Sept. 4 on the very basic, 66-passenger Ushuaia. Fares start at $2,490 for packages that include air between Montreal and Kuujjuaq. Call 866-263-3220 or go to www.cruisenorthexpeditions.com

5. Timbuktu — in the Republic of Mali at the southern edge of the Sahara desert.

Timbuktu is practically a synonym for the most remote, mysterious and inaccessible of places. Well, not anymore. Not even for a cruiser.

Tour operator R. Crusoe & Son (the same firm doing the Myanmar itinerary) highlights Timbuktu during a series of 16-day West Africa cruise tours that feature a seven-day sailing aboard the 34-passenger yacht Callisto. National Geographic described this once-booming terminus as, "Since the 12th century, a forbidden place and one of the most august centers of Islamic learning and trade within Muslim society."

The land portion of this cruise tour includes hotel stays in Bamako, Segou and Mopti, Mali. The week-long waterborne adventure sets out from Bamako to Dakar, Senegal, and sails the Gambia, Saloum and Casamance Rivers, with unique villages along the route. For Alex Haley fans, included is remote Jufureh, a setting for "Roots." You also get to board tiny vessels to watch wildlife along the narrow waterways of Gambia's Baobalong Wetlands Reserve.

THE SKINNY: This innovative itinerary debuts in January (and runs until March). Fares start at $9,895. Call 800-585-8555 or go to www.rcrusoe.com

Is Cook cooked?

Scaled-back project floated

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cook Estate may have cleared a huge hurdle Tuesday as developers offered to scale back the project by 30 units to allow wastewater to be disposed of on site. But a change in scope could require the project to go back to square one and time is not a luxury the town has.

Selectmen have posted a meeting for today (Friday, April 29 at 5 p.m.) to discuss the town's options. At the time the Mariner went to press yesterday, it was unclear if that meeting would be necessary.

Town officials were waiting to hear whether extending a wastewater-solution deadline agreed upon in the purchase and sale from Saturday, April 30 to Tuesday, May 3 would be acceptable with the Cook Estate heirs. If the heirs agree, the board will meet Tuesday evening with counsel to make a final decision on whether to work with Northland Residential to bring the reduced project to fruition or call it quits.

However, the Cook Estate heirs indicated through a letter written by their consultants at LandVest, that they are not inclined to grant further extensions of the purchase and sale agreement for the Sohier Street property.

But in light of the recent proposal to scale the project back, the town decided it must ask for a few more days in order to meet with counsel. The town has entered into three amended purchase and sale agreement with the Cook heirs thus far. Delays have been due to the fact soils at the site cannot handle the wastewater from 95 units; hooking up to the town sewer is not an option, according to the sewer commission.

With a reduction in the size of the project, from 95 units to 65, the scope may be changed

From ABCs to AEDs schools learn to use defibrillators

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After roughly one year of preparation, phase one of the Cohasset Fire Department's initiative to have automated external defibrillators, or AEDs, installed in all public buildings is complete.

As of Wednesday, Fire Capt. Robert Silvia said all three Cohasset schools have been outfitted with AEDs, which can give life-saving shocks to patients in cardiac arrest, and personnel at all three schools have been trained in how to use the equipment. The next phase will be for town buildings to be outfitted with the devices, and training to be completed to ensure there is always someone nearby who knows how to use the machines.

"This should get us rolling," said Sylvia, of the defibrillators being up and running at the schools.

When any town begins an AED program, there needs to be medical direction from a hospital or physician who is willing to oversee the program and look at the AED reports after the equipment is used. South Shore Hospital has guidelines in place for AED use in the schools, and because the fire department routinely interacts with staff at the

Always a Girl Scout

Louise Smullen recognized for years of service

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After many years of service, Louise Smullen has become a prominent figure in Cohasset's Girl Scouting history. For the past 45-years, she has been leading troops on camping trips, teaching them the basics of first aid, and instructing them in how to safely build fires.

"I think camp helped the girls become self-reliant, while at the same time teaching them teamwork."
— Louise Smullen

At 86 years old, it has been 15 years since Smullen made her last camping trip, but she is still very active in the Girl Scouting community. She can often be found meeting with young troops, reminiscing about the days when she was a leader, sharing stories of how scouting has changed over the years.

"I really loved it," she said.

In light of her dedication, Smullen was honored at the annual Patriots Trail Council dinner April 14, where she was given her 45-year numeral for service. During the dinner, scouts of many different age groups were recognized for their efforts and dedica-

Pet peeve: People who don't vote, then complain about government. Participation is the key to democracy.

Most embarrassing moment: Running for State Representative in 1974 and coming in last in a three-way race.

Goal: To leave the world a better place than I found it.

Person I'd most like to meet: Sean Connery

Biggest worry: National Security issues around energy independence.

Best part of Cohasset: The people I have known and come to know in the 44 years I've been in Cohasset.

Glenn Pratt is named water board chairman

At its regular meeting held on Thursday, April 14, the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners reorganized and elected the following officers: chairman - Glenn A. Pratt; vice-chairman - John K. McNabb; clerk - Nathaniel Palmer.

Brush, paint rules

Please run the following brush rules:

- Residential brush will continue to be accepted at the Recycling Transfer Facility through April 30.
- Brush days for 2005 are to be held on the last Saturday of the month through October beginning May 27, from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the DPW parking area. No tree over 3 ins. in diameter. No contractors please.

Firefighters stamp out church fire caused by burning

Apparently started in garden mulch

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"We were able to get the fire out before it extended up the walls."
— Fire Capt. Robert Silvia

The improper disposal of a lit cigarette could have destroyed the Second Congregational Church late Monday night. However, thanks to the building's alarm system and the fast response of firefighters to the scene, only minimal damage was done.

Capt. Robert Silvia of the Cohasset Police Department, who is acting chief while Roger Lincoln is away, said the call came into the station at roughly 11 p.m. Monday. First responders to the building, located on Highland Avenue next to Town Hall, found exterior fire spreading from the ground up, and the entire church full of smoke. He said the cause of the fire was careless disposal of "an ignitable substance."

Cohasset firefighters immediately called for backup, and help arrived shortly from the towns of Hingham, Hull, Scituate and Norwell. With the help of mutual aid, Silvia said "The damage was minimal," and all firefighters had left the scene by 1 a.m.

"We were very lucky," said Silvia, adding the automatic alarm at the church "did its job," and informed the department of the fire, as there was no one in the building at that time to report the incident. "We were able to get (the fire) out before it extended up the walls," he said.

Silvia said the damage to the exterior of the building is minimal, and the place where the fire originated has been covered with plywood. The church will need to rebuild that small portion, which is located just to the left of the front doors. Inside, the only the damage is a lingering smell of smoke.

The Rev. Gary Ritts, who is the pastor at the Second Congregational Church said this is not the first time a lit cigarette has damaged the building. On Jan. 19, 1928 he said there was a very serious fire which almost burnt the entire roof off the building. At that time, Rev. Fred Stanley was the church pastor.

Although the cause of the 1928 fire has never been formally documented, Ritts said he has heard in the past from those who responded to the scene that the fire likely began from smokers in the inside parlor of the church. Coincidentally, the room where the fire began all those years ago was located just behind where the fire began this time around, Ritts said.

"There is still some charred wood in the steeple area," said Ritts, from the 1928 fire, adding because the timbers were so huge, they were not damaged so much that they had to be removed.

The windows to the church were left open all Monday night, which Ritts said aired the building out enough to allow for a large meeting to be held in the church early Tuesday morning. Future plans to hold the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of Annie as well as the Special Town Election will not be affected by the fire.

An unidentified woman walks past where a fire apparently caused by a discarded cigarette in the mulch worked its way up into the side of the Second Congregational Church building on Monday night.

A pile of rubble rests near the bushes where a discarded cigarette apparently started a fire in the mulch that burned into the wall of the church.

Open Meeting Law complaint filed

Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, filed a complaint with the District Attorney's office alleging the Board of Selectmen violated the Open Meeting Law by failing to post a meeting in a timely manner. A meeting was held April 4 at Town Hall, which dealt with the Cook Estate, and although it was posted Friday, April 1 and technically met the 48 hour notification required by the Open Meeting Law, Town Hall closes at 1 p.m. on Friday and does not open again until Monday morning, which may not have given residents adequate time to become informed about the meeting.

"I doubt the good faith involved in this posting, and whether it does meet the spirit of the law," Quigley stated in her letter.

Quigley said at that meeting, two selectmen, Ralph Dormitzer and Fred Koed, questioned whether the meeting should proceed in light of the posting question, but the majority decided it was an informational meeting and it could proceed as long as no decisions would be made.

"The topic of the meeting is quite controversial, and I believe the intent was to avoid notifying those who might voice an opposition. I found out about the meeting by chance in speaking with Ralph. In all fairness, following my conversation with Ralph, the Town Manager's office did call to inform me of the meeting," she wrote.

Quigley also pointed out that traditionally, there are no meetings held between Town Meeting and Election Day, as was the case that week, and the meeting was held on a Monday night, even though the board typically meets on Tuesdays.

In addition, Quigley said all three members of the Sewer Commission were in attendance and it never posted for the meeting. "To circumvent the Open Meeting Law, these commissioners sat in the public seating area and spoke as 'private citizens.' However, they replied to questions posed by the selectmen only in regard to sewer issues," she wrote.

The DA's office has requested the Board of Selectmen respond and explain the circumstances of the posting and has also asked for an explanation from the Sewer Commission. The DA's office has also requested a copy of the audio tape from that meeting.

hospital when responding to medical emergencies, it chose to partner with that organization to bring the equipment to Osgood, Deer Hill and the middle-high school.

In order to install AEDs, personnel must be trained in how to use the devices. Deer Hill nurse Karen Murphy said currently, there are roughly 25 people trained among the three schools including all the school nurses, coaches for spring sports at the middle-high school, all physical education teachers, and some volunteer administrators and teachers. Murphy was responsible for all training at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools, and members of the fire department assisted her in training at the middle-high school due to the large numbers interested in learning.

" They are so easy to operate, it's unbelievable," said Murphy, adding when the AEDs are opened up, after unzipping the case, instructions are instantly visible. She added once they are turned on, a voice prompt guides the user through the entire process in a very clear manner.

Murphy said she is very excited to see AEDs making their way into the schools because they are so beneficial and literally life savers when someone goes into cardiac arrest.

"You never know when you're going to need them, and every minute counts. It gives you another option while you're waiting for Advanced Life Support to arrive and those can be very critical moments. It can be the difference between life and death," she said.

There are roughly 25 people trained in the schools including school nurses, coaches, physical education teachers and some administrators and other teachers.

While the schools are up and running, South Shore Hospital does not yet have a set protocol for bringing AEDs into public buildings, and therefore an agreement has not been made with the town which would enable the machines to be installed in places such as Town Hall, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and the Senior Center. However, Silvia said in his personal opinion, it makes more sense to have one medical director overseeing the entire program than splitting it between two entities, which is why the department has chosen to continue working with the hospital to come up with an agreement that works for everyone involved.

"My personal thought is that there should be one director for the whole program," he said.

Silvia said he hoped to be able to meet with representatives from the hospital potentially as early as this week, and added he believes the agreement that would be settled upon would be similar to the agreement the hospital has with the school buildings.

When the town receives permission, Silvia said there are AEDs which are already owned by the town and ready to be installed — some of which were purchased with grant money and some which were purchased as a result of fund-raising or donations from residents. Any AEDs installed around town will be regularly inspected by members of the fire department to make sure the equipment is working properly.

The ultimate goal of the fire department is to meet the requirements of a "heart-safe" community, which means having equipment on hand that even someone with minimal training can use to save the life of someone who has gone into cardiac arrest. Studies have shown if a person can be defibrillated within one to two minutes of going into sudden cardiac arrest, there is an 80 percent chance of survival. However, that survival rate decreases with every passing minute, and with a delay of 10 minutes, there is a less than 5 percent chance the person will be able to pull through.

The AEDs the department has purchased are very user-friendly, are color coded, and "speak" to the user, giving proper operating instructions. They run on batteries, which have a life span of roughly five years or 300 shocks, and come with two adult pads and one pediatric pad. AEDs are a new trend in life-saving technology and the American Heart Association has begun giving CPR classes which include AED training.

Silvia said while the program is going well thus far, "We could always use more donations," which pay not only for the devices themselves, but for training as well.

An AED gift fund has been started for donations, and funds in any amount will be accepted. Units cost roughly $2,500 each, but every contribution will help the department meet its goal. Those interested in making a donation can send checks payable to the town of Cohasset, to the Cohasset Fire Department c/o Captain Robert Silvia, 44 Elm St.

RECREATION

Summer registration — The Cohasset Recreation Department will have available at Town Hall, and coming home via school, the Summer Recreation brochure during mid-May.

Essential information regarding both Spring and Summer programs are available currently in the foyer of Town Hall.

Registrations for the 7 week Summer Playground program, Youth Tennis Lessons and Summer Drama Program will be held in Town Hall Auditorium starting at 9 a.m., Monday, June 13.

Registration for those three programs will be held Monday, June 13, Thursday, June 16, from 9 a.m. to noon and again from 1 to 3 p.m. as well as Tuesday evening, June 14, from 5 to 7 p.m. Registration for various Summer Sports Camps will begin during late April/early May. However, schedules by week for Baseball, Lacrosse, Basketball, Soccer and Cheerleading Camps are currently available in the Town Hall foyer. Each Sports Camp will have its own, individual brochure of informative packet.

Registration for the Aug. 22, Cheerleading Clinic must be completed by May 27, hence, you should register now for this unique opportunity for Cheerleaders for Fall and Winter Sports at Cohasset High School.

Currently, for Spring, you may register for a variety of after school Recreation Programs for youngsters aged 4 through Grade 5 at the Recreation Office.

Telephone registrations are now being accepted by calling the office at 781-383-4109 for the first session Dog Obedience classes and Safe Boating course for ages 12 through adults.

Registrations for both these programs are limited, hence early registration is advised.

Due to the success of the first session of Boot Camp, a physical training program held on Tuesday/Thursday mornings from 6 to 8 a.m. on the Town Common, a second session will be held starting Tuesday, June 14, through Thursday, Aug. 4.

You may register via phone for this program as well. Other program information will be forth coming as it becomes available.

Louise Smullen recognized for years of service

tion to the program, including graduating high school seniors.

Smullen first became involved with Girl Scouts in 1960, when her daughter Christine was in second grade. Smullen said she received a call from a leader, who was also a teacher at one of the local schools, who was contacting the mother of every second grade girl in the town to see if they would be interested in helping out with Girl Scouts.

"I told her, 'I don't know anything about Girl Scouting,' but she said I could learn right along with the rest of them," Smullen said, and that was all it took for her to become involved.

At that time, Smullen said the badges the girls in her troop earned were somewhat different from what the girls today are learning. She said they would learn to sew and to cook and other various domestic skills, but as the years went on, she remembers bringing a Cohasset resident in to speak to the girls about taking care of the cars they would one day have, including how to change the oil. Today, Girl Scouts are earning badges in aeronautic and technical categories. "The girls have branched out so much since then," she said.

Smullen said from year to year, she always tried to have a well-rounded troop and expose them to a variety of different experiences, and camping was always a big part of that agenda. "I think camp helped the girls become self-reliant, while at the same time teaching them teamwork," she said.

Every year, Smullen and her girls would leave on a Friday afternoon for a camping destination. Sometimes they would camp out at Long Pond in Plymouth, or Brewster on Cape Cod, but they even traveled as far as Virginia.

"We tried them all and we'd be gone for the whole weekend," said Smullen.

Before every camping trip, Smullen said the girls in her troop would spend several weeks planning. They would write down the various things they wanted to do on their trip and because "we couldn't do everything," the troop as a whole would take a vote. The troops would also vote on meals they would make while on their trip, over an open fire.

Smullen said her girls would also go camping in the winter. Her troops would typically be comprised of roughly 30 girls in grades four through six, which is much less than the typical 10 girl troop of today, and the winter camping trips were a special treat for the oldest girls in the troop. However, Smullen said Mother Nature never cooperated, and as much as they might hope, it would never snow during their winter camping excursions. But the weather didn't matter when the girls went on indoor camping trips to the Boston Children's Museum and the Museum of Science.

But for all her years of experience, Smullen said it took her a long time before she would brave the great outdoors.

"It took me a while to go camping," she admits, adding there were always volunteers that were willing to take the girls on the trip, and she was happy to oblige. But one year, she was asked again to come along and thought to herself, "What the heck, I'll go," and she was hooked.

But these days Smullen is happy to sleep in her own bed rather than a tent or cabin in the woods.

"I just can't keep up with these young girls anymore," she quipped. However, Smullen said she still subscribes to Leader Magazine, the quarterly national magazine for adults in Girl Scouting, to keep abreast of what the girls in scouting are doing. "It makes me nostalgic," she said.

Smullen said she still keeps in touch with her former troop members and last summer, one of her former Girl Scouts invited her mother, who was a co-leader with Smullen, as well as some fellow troop members to her house for dinner.

"We all had a good time reminiscing," she said. Smullen said if nothing else, she hopes the years she spent serving as a Girl Scout leader had a positive impact on those in her troops, and that her goal of making each year a little better than the last came true.

Is Cook cooked?

enough that it will have to go back out to bid, pursuant to Chapter 30B, the state's procurement law. If 30B is an issue, the bidding process would need to begin all over again. The town would be required to issue another Request for Proposals; take bids, and go through the selection process, which would take months. If the heirs aren't willing to grant time for that process to be completed, Cohasset could have missed out on its opportunity to control development on the site.

"Every member wants to see something built up there and on-site (wastewater treatment) is the right thing to do," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer. However, he asked why Northland couldn't have presented the new proposal four months ago when there would have been time to figure out whether the project would need to go out to bid again. Dormitzer said in his opinion, there is a good possibility negotiations would need to begin again because it is such a material change and the town may simply not have the time.

Jack Dawley, vice president and director of acquisitions for Northland, said he did not believe the town would be breaking any procurement laws by enabling his company to build the project on a smaller scale. In fact, he said the project would stay the same — including the sale price for the combined Cook and adjacent town-owned land, which has been set at $5.25 million — except it would be built on a smaller, but exactly proportionate scale.

"I really think you have an opportunity before you," said Dawley, adding his company has a commitment to ensuring the mix of units remain the same as well as the level of affordability.

"I challenge you to have the conviction to get something done," he said, adding the town and Cook heirs will receive the compensation they expected, open space will be preserved with a reduction in units, the town will not have to worry about giving away sewer capacity for the project, and the company is willing to either give back the town's land or enter it into permanent conservation for further open space.

Dawley added he believes a change in the size of the project will not require a Town Meeting vote for approval, and new negotiations would not need to take place. "It's not our style to make threats, but if it goes in a direction like that, we'll do everything we can to protect our interests," adding his company has spent a lot of time and money digging holes at the South Shore Music Circus, the library, and neighbor's property to try to find percable land, to no avail.

But Dormitzer said in his view, the changes are significant and asked Dawley if his company would be willing to indemnify the town against others who may have bid on the project if they had known the town would have accepted something on a smaller scale.

However, Town Counsel Rod Hoffman said in his opinion, if the project is given the go-ahead and it is found to be in violation of procurement laws, virtually any developer could sue the town, whether they bid on the project beforehand or not, which leaves the town vulnerable on many fronts.

To ease the minds of the board somewhat, George McGoldrick, one of the developers who bid on the project, came forward and said for the record, he will not sue the town if Northland moves forward with a smaller project. "You will have no chapter 30B issue from us," he said.

Voters at the 2003 Special Town Meeting approved the allocation of $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre Cook parcel of land, which was then marketed with the town's adjacent 8.7 acres of land for $5.25 million for senior housing. The town is trying to meet an affordable housing threshold set by the state which it currently does not meet as well as provide housing alternatives for the town's senior citizens. There is expected to be a double closing, transferring the property from the Cooks to the developer, with the town making a profit.

Do they help or hurt the budget?

Multi-unit projects can impact the bottom line

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There are three potential developments on Cohasset's horizon and the specifics of each continue to change, making it difficult to pin down the exact financial gains or losses the town could expect in the future.

With very little affordable housing in town, developers have come to the table with plans to provide it. But there are up sides and down sides to every proposal which will greatly impact the town in both positive and negative ways. Residents, in turn, have become very passionate in their views regarding which projects should move ahead and which plans should be thrown out with the trash.

The argument has been made that building the Avalon, Cedarmere and Cook projects will bring in revenue to the town, and are therefore a benefit. However, the added pressures of new people in the community could put a strain on town services.

Director of Finance Michael Buckley said building permits are a one-time source the town can count on if the projects are built. Building permit fees are added to the operating budget, and are based according to the value of the construction. Depending on how the projects are ultimately built, the town could receive anywhere from roughly $400,000 to $600,000 depending on the number and type of units which are built.

"Property taxes are considered new growth," Buckley said, adding they too can be counted on, and will add to what the town can raise under Prop. 2-1/2 — the state law that caps the amount a town can raise its tax levy from year to year. Excise taxes would also be added to the operating budget.

However, bringing new residents to town could cost more money, as it will need to provide the same services to a larger number of recipients.

Buckley said roads to the developments will most likely be built to town standards and the DPW may end up being responsible for keeping them clear, and plowing would be an additional cost to the town.

"Ordinarily people in senior housing don't cause too much trouble," Buckley said, which will likely mean the police department will not be affected, however, senior housing developments typically increase activity at the fire department through ambulance runs. Buckley pointed out that because the town runs its own ambulance service, the town would be reimbursed for some of the costs associated with any extra runs.

"There will be an incredibly negative impact on the town financially to bring in 400 to 500 brand new housing units in the next two or three years."
— Peter Pratt, planning board

But the real looming financial question is what happens to the schools if there is a sudden influx of students. With the development of senior housing, "empty nesters" have someplace to flock to, so to speak. Young families with children could move to the area, increasing enrollment at the schools and putting a heavy burden on an already thinly-stretched school budget.

"There will be an incredibly negative impact on the town financially to bring in 400 to 500 brand new housing units in the next two or three years," said planning board member Peter Pratt. He said currently, there are roughly 2,900 housing units in town and to "bring in such a high number of new units would have a devastating impact on the community," as the total housing stock could potentially be increased by nearly 20 percent in one fell swoop.

Pratt said it is the lead role of his board as planners to make sure growth is handled responsibly, and he and the majority of the board believe the addition of units from all three projects will be devastating for the Cohasset school system in such a short period of time.

Cedarmere, with its 105 units of affordable and market rate town homes and condominiums could potentially open up homes for seniors currently living in town who are looking to downsize. However, there is nothing to preclude seniors from out of town from purchasing the units before Cohasset residents have a chance, which means there is no way to tell exactly what the impact will be until people start selling.

On the other hand, the Cook Estate project will likely offer a pre-sale period for Cohasset residents only, which could encourage residents to move out of their family homes, which would open up single family homes in town. However, the Cook Estate could be downsizing from 95 units to 65 units, which would in effect decrease the number of potential residents selling their family homes to move to the complex.

In addition to the children moving to single-family homes from Cedarmere and the Cook Estate, Avalon could not only have the same effect of empty nesters leaving their family homes, it could bring children with it.

Avalon will have 200 one- and two-bedroom rental units, which because it is not age-restricted, would allow children to live there. However, Vice President of Development for AvalonBay Communities Scott Dale said the development could just as easily provide homes for seniors, which is what the town says it wants.

"What we build seems to be an attractive package," for those in the 55-plus crowd, he said, adding in other mixed-income communities the company has built, roughly 20 to 25 percent of the units, on average, are occupied by 55-plus residents.

Dale said based on information compiled from previous communities built by the company, he would estimate Cohasset could see between 30 and 40 children spread throughout the 200 units, based on the number of bedrooms and the affordability structure, although that figure could be more or less in the end.

However, if Dale's calculations are right, with charges of roughly $8,000 per student, the town could see costs associated with only those children up to as much as $320,000, not counting the natural growth in enrollment that happens as families come into town to fill up the vacant homes, or have more children. In addition, with a school system like Cohasset's, there are some who believe the apartments could be an enormous draw to the town, and Avalon could receive many more children than it bargained for. But if the project is attractive for seniors, they may move into the development, taking the place the children would have occupied.

Although it has been said that revenue from water and potential sewer connections could help offset project costs, Buckley explained all fees collected by the Water and Sewer Departments are put into an enterprise fund which will only affect those departments. He explained enterprise funds serve as an accounting method which ensures funds charged for a specific purpose are used for that purpose alone. In other words, they ensure communities do not circumvent Prop. 2-1/2 by bringing in revenue for a specific department and using it to cushion the operating budget.

Increases in Water or Sewer Department revenues could potentially decrease water or sewer rates in the future or go to fund various department projects, Buckley said, adding Town Meeting ultimately has the say over how to spend enterprise fund money.

Town still shy of meeting state affordable housing benchmark

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"Affordable housing" may be two of the most bandied about words in local lexicon.

Everyone seems to be for it. Yet affordable housing projects built under Chapter 40B – that often involve higher density than towns normally permit — are controversial whether in Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate or Marshfield.

In fact no area town, with the exception of Hull, which has added 83 units in four years, is on the state list of communities showing significant progress in building affordable housing.

Cohasset, whose average-valued home is roughly $670,000, has only 76 units of "affordable housing" by state standards and therefore, is well below the threshold of 10 percent of the town's housing meeting the state's definition of low- and moderate-income housing.

This is significant because Cohasset remains vulnerable to 40B projects. Chapter 40B, also known as the comprehensive permit law, is a 36-year-old state statute that enables local zoning boards of appeals to approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions.

If the ZBA denies a 40B project and the town is under the 10 percent threshold, the developer can appeal to the state Housing Appeals Committee.

To measure the progress of cities and towns, the state uses the 2000 federal census to determine a municipality's total year-round housing stock, which in Cohasset's case is 2,752 units.

Although communities are adding new market-rate housing all the time, the "grand total" of a community's housing inventory to measure progress toward the 10 percent threshold stays the same until the 2010 census while the municipality can add to its affordable count before then, according to the state Department of Housing and Community Development.

As it stands now, Cohasset has 64 units of affordable housing for senior citizens in the Harborview Apartments, located on Elm Street behind the police and fire stations. There are an additional 12 units of affordable special needs housing next to Harborview, which are not designated for seniors. Both complexes are run by the Cohasset Housing Authority, and together, they comprise the only subsidized housing in Cohasset. The complex was built with state funds back in 1974.

There are currently three projects in the pipeline which would help the town boost its affordable housing inventory: Avalon, Cedarmere, and the Cook Estate, all of which have faced some stiff opposition in the community mainly because in aggregate they would add some 400 housing units to town. Some worry about the potential impact on the schools, public safety and town infrastructure from that much new development.

With its 200 units, Avalon, which is a 40B project, could provide enough affordable housing for the town to reach its 10 percent goal. Although only 50 units are actually affordable — because all 200 are rental units and the state encourages rental housing – all units are counted toward the 10 percent.

The zoning board of appeals granted the project a comprehensive permit almost a year and a half ago, which included plans for an on-site wastewater treatment system, but the water commission sought to annul the comprehensive permit because it believes the project's septic system could pollute Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. The water commission appeal is still tied up in court and until it is resolved, the town remains vulnerable to more 40B projects.

Avalon has also filed for a modification of its comprehensive permit that would allow it to hook up to the town's sewer treatment plant. Avalon asked the ZBA to determine whether there is adequate capacity and presented testimony during a public hearing in January from its own engineers, who say there is. The ZBA denied the request, deferring to the sewer commission which said any capacity that does exist should be given to existing residences. Avalon has appealed that decision to the Housing Appeals Committee, the arbiter on 40B project disputes.

Avalon says it is amenable to any one of three options: an on-site system, municipal hookup to Cohasset or municipal connection to Hull.

Scott Dale, vice president of development for Avalon, says despite the setbacks, Avalon will move ahead.

"We're not going anywhere," he said. "We've been involved with similar situations in the past and it can take a long time before construction can start."

"We are in this for the long haul – whether that's two years, five years, or a decade."

Two projects will be considered under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District bylaw, passed in the fall of 2002, a portion of which would add to the town's affordable housing stock through the state Local Initiative Program, dubbed LIP. LIPs or "friendly 40Bs" — which must serve those with incomes equal to or less than 80 percent of the area median income — are attractive to communities because they can have more control over the developments.

"LIPs give towns the ability to 'row their own boat,' rather than have a project dictated to them," says Philip Hailer of the DHCD.

The 105-unit Cedarmere project, slated for 41-acres off Beechwood Street, is already fully permitted. The property was recently sold, permits and all, to Leggat McCall Properties, LLC., and Senior Vice President Bill Gause said the company intends to break ground on the project in early summer.

Of the 105 units, there will be 27 for-sale, one- and two-bedroom affordable condominiums, located in a building with four, for-sale market rate one- and two-bedroom condominiums. The rest of the project will be a combination of for-sale market rate townhouses and condominiums.

Cedarmere was the first to file under the town's Senior Multi-family Overlay District Bylaw, which requires developments have an affordable component. The bylaw allows developers to build higher density housing than zoning regulations allow, in exchange for affordable units.

The project is filing its affordable units to be counted by the state as a Local Initiative Program Units Only project, which will allow the units to be considered by the Department of Housing and Community Development. All LIP projects are regulated by the DHCD. If it is determined the 27 units meet the state's criteria, then those units can be added to the town's affordable housing inventory.

There is a third project on the horizon which could further add to the town's affordable housing stock and provide another alternative for seniors in town. The Cook Estate project will follow Cedarmere as the second project to file under the town's Senior Overlay bylaw once a wastewater solution for the site is found. Plans currently entail building 95 units of senior housing, which would be made up of 58 for-sale condominiums and 37 rental apartments, however the option to downsize the project to 65 total units was floated Tuesday night. With 95 total units, twenty-eight of the apartments would be affordable rental apartments and nine would be market rate rental apartments, and the state would allow all 37 rental units to count. With 65 units, there could potentially be 20 affordable units on site.

There are two other apartments which were slated to count toward the town's affordable housing stock, but as of right now, do not. Tom Gruber of the Historical Society explained the two apartments located in the Paul Pratt Memorial Building — the former town library and current Historical Society headquarters — were built in 2004 and were designated as 55-plus housing. An income limit of "median" was set for the units, which at that time would not qualify them as being able to count toward the town's affordable housing stock. Gruber said he has spoken with Town Planner Liz Harrington and she thinks there may have been modifications that may permit the apartments to qualify under certain guidelines. Gruber said if so, the Historical Society will need to weigh the pluses and minuses to decide whether it would like to make the apartments formally count by filing an application with the state.

About 40B:

Purpose: To increase the supply and improve the regional distribution of low and moderate income housing by allowing a limited suspension of existing local regulations.

Role of ZBA: Holds a public hearing to address local concerns. Can issue a single comprehensive permit that substitutes all local permits and approvals normally issued by local boards. It can also issue a comprehensive permit with conditions or deny the permit.

Affordable units: Reserved for seniors or families who make less than 80 percent of the median household income for the area. Most earn less than $50,000 a year.

Progress: 33 communities have exceeded the 10 percent goal, up from 23 in 1997. 18 communities are at 8 or 9 percent.

Area inventory:

Cohasset: 2.8 percent
Hingham: 3.3 percent
Hull: 3.4 percent
Scituate: 4.4 percent
Marshfield: 4.5 percent

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Hey Callie Piepenbrink, Happy Birthday!!!! Our daughter Callie is 11 years old which I find so hard to believe but it is true. We all love you very much Miss Coconuts and hope that this year is a fantastic one for you.

CURTAIN RISES ON 'ANNIE'

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents the world's best loved musical, Annie, at the Cohasset Town hall on May 6,7,13,14,20 & 21 at 7:30p.m. and May 8, 15 & 22 at 2 p.m. Join Annie, the spunky depression-era orphan determined to find the parents who abandoned her years before on the steps of a New York City orphanage run by the cruel Miss Hannigan. In adventure after adventure, Annie foils Miss Hannigan's evil machinations, befriends president Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and finds a new home with billionaire Oliver (Daddy) Warbucks, his personal secretary Grace Farrell and a lovable mutt named Sandy.

An Annie Look-Alike contest will be held at all three Sunday matinees. Come dressed as Annie and enter to win exciting prizes. Tickets are $12 each and can be purchased at Buttonwood Books, Front Street Book Shop in Scituate Harbor, at the door, or by calling (617) 697-2115. Girl Scout troops receive a $2 discount per ticket when purchased by phone. Please contact Susan Jaffe at (781) 383-9858.

POST PROM PRIZES

The Cohasset Senior Post-Prom Prize Committee is calling out to all of our wonderful community members in search of creative prizes for this year's Post Prom Party. These prizes are ones that the students will have the ability to win and choose when they attend the party and should be fun, creative and useful. They can be anything from Gift Certificates to restaurants, sports tickets, manicures, fishing trips and well, you get the picture.

The committee is asking for donations that come from local people who want to do something to help support this event. If you have something that you would like to donate, please contact Jeanne Holway by calling her at 781-383-2158 or by emailing her at Jeanneh212@aol.com.

DIRTY CARS WANTED

Calling all dirty vehicles! A car wash, to be held on Sat., April 30, will benefit the Cohasset High School Varsity, as well as the Junior Varsity Baseball Team and is being sponsored by the Cohasset baseball boosters, the Diamond Club.

Stop by Coastal Nissan on Route 3-A to have your vehicle washed by team members. Donations are welcomed.

SUMMER ART CAMP

Students going into grades 1–4 can enjoy creative summer afternoons in the South Shore Art Center's popular summer art camps. The Art Center's summer Art Afternoons will be offered for six weeks beginning in July. Each week will have a different theme including: Oceans, South of the Border, Eric Carle, Egypt, Masks and Puppets and All About Me. The themes will help form the fun as students explore, create and investigate art in a variety of mediums including clay, drawing, painting, printmaking, collage, and sculpture.

There will be both group and individual projects in a fun, supportive, and air-conditioned environment and kids will take a break with a mid-afternoon snack. Children who have previously taken Art Afternoons at the Art Center are welcomed back for new artistic explorations! Art Weeks meet Monday through Friday, 12:30-3:30 and the cost is $155 ($140 for SSAC members) and are broken down in the following ways: July 11–July 15 Oceans; July 18–July 22 Eric Carle; July 25–July 29 South of the Border; Aug. 1–5 Egypt; Aug. 8– 12 Masks & Puppets; August 15–19 All About Me.

'Nantucket Nanny' book signing May 13

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Rt. 3A, Cohasset welcomes Hingham residents, Molly Manley and Janet Marshall, launching their latest collaboration, "A Nantucket Nanny" (Commonwealth Editions, $12.95) on Friday, May 13 at 3:30 p.m. Molly Manley will read from "A Nantucket Nanny" and Janet Marshall will display some of her clever artwork.

Design your own Nantucket collage and/or write a limerick. Finish this line in limerick form, "A Madaket Scallop Named Molly...." return your limerick to Buttonwood and it will be posted in the window.

Molly Manley is the creative talent behind the snappy text while Janet Marshall provides the bright and colorful tableau. Molly and Janet have collaborated on other delightful children's books including "Lola Tortola" and "Talkaty Talker". This is a free event and the public is welcome. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 or online at www.buttonwoodbooks.com to order a signed copy if unable to attend.

Don't miss 'Taste' of Hingham

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Greg Hall samples some clam chowder during last year's Taste of Hingham. This year organizers promise the event will be even more delicious.

The second annual "Taste of Hingham" celebration offers food, a fashion show, and all kinds of fun for people of all ages.

The event is planned for Sat., April 30, from noon to 3 p.m. along North Street. The rain date is May 7.

"We're praying for sunshine!" said Hingham Downtown Association (HDA) President Richard McManus.

North Street will be closed from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Proceeds will benefit more than 20 South Shore charities. The Hingham Congregational Church, the HDA, Eatwell Corporation, and the Friends are working together to make the event a memorable one. Last year's celebration was attended by some 3,000 people.

The event features food-tasting courtesy of 27 local restaurants; a fashion show at Tosca featuring summer styles and colors and makeup by Beauty and Main; and music, performers, face painting, balloons, hair braiding, sand art, ice cream, "make your own cookies," and other special features. A wide variety of different cuisine and desserts will be offered as well as a repeat of last year's popular chowder competition.

Equipment for "Touch a Truck!" will be provided by Greenbush contractor Cashman Balfour Beatty.

"The committee decided to invite the new restaurants at Derby Street Shoppes to participate. Committee member George MacKay repeatedly talked with the managers and owners of all these restaurants, but apparently some of the new restaurants do not feel prepared to compete with the more established downtown restaurants," said McManus. However, Burton's Grill and Bertucci's will participate. He further noted that the Square Café will be defending its "Best Chowder" title from last year while other restaurants compete in the new "Taste of the Town" competition for appetizers and other tasty foods.

A wide variety of different cuisine and desserts will be offered as well as a repeat of last year's popular chowder competition.

First-time participants include Burton's Grill, Bertucci's, Cinnamon Bear, Liberty Grille, and Salsa's Mexican Grill, which opened recently on Lincoln Street.

"There will be a wandering coffee person courtesy of Starbucks," McManus said.

Chowderfest competitors include Burton's Grill, Hingham Bay Club, the 99 Restaurant, Salsa's Mexican Grill, South Shore Country Club, the Square Café, Stars on Hingham Harbor, and Z-Chef Innovative Catering.

Competing in the new "Taste of the Town" competition will be Bertucci's Brick Oven Pizzeria, Blackfin, Caffe Tosca, Cinnamon Bear, Fruit Center, Liberty Grille, Muang Thai, Puopolo's Candies, Rocky Neck Seafood, the Snug Irish Pub, Starbucks, and Tosca.

"While there is no ice cream award this year, you will be able to compare the offerings of the downtown's own Brigham's and Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, and for the first time, Coldstone Creamery, located at the Derby Street Shoppes," McManus said.

Historic North Street will be closed to traffic from the harbor to Station Street. Wristbands are required for the food-tasting and are $10 per person or $25 per family.

OUR CLIENTS LOOK GOOD IN PUBLIC BECAUSE THEY TRAIN IN PRIVATE.

Kurt Jones

I just wanted to take a minute and tell you how happy I am with how things are going for me since I started at Fitness Together, Concord. In fact, I have already exceeded my initial expectations.

After a rough year, I had been finding more and more excuses NOT to work out. I usually fell back on the "I'm just too busy" excuse. Being able to make appointments makes it so much easier to fit into my busy schedule.

The experience wouldn't be the same without the staff you have. Frank, Johnny and Tim have given me the perfect mix of encouragement and challenge. I was never a big fan of gyms because I was a bit self-conscious. Having the private room and a trainer I am comfortable with has made all the difference.

Each month brings a new accomplishment. Here's to keeping it going!

Bald eagles make a comeback

Sightings reported on the South Shore

By John Galluzzo
CORRESPONDENT

The calls keep coming in, like the one from a gentleman in Plymouth. "I have a sighting to report," he said. "Something I've never seen before. I looked up and I couldn't believe my eyes. It was a mature bald eagle."

Another caller to the Mass. Audubon's South Shore Regional Office reported a similar sighting off Cove Creek in Marshfield, on the North River, and a third informant pointed out a sighting above Pembroke's Hobomock Pond. Another call came in of a bald eagle on the Jones River in Kingston.

A check of Mass. Audubon's online bird sightings list (www.massaudubon.org/Birds&Beyond/sightings) shows that single bald eagles have been seen throughout eastern Massachusetts, in Belmont, Gloucester and the Mystic Lakes in Arlington.

Are these occurrences out of the ordinary? Not really. Does that make sighting a bald eagle any less special? Not at all.

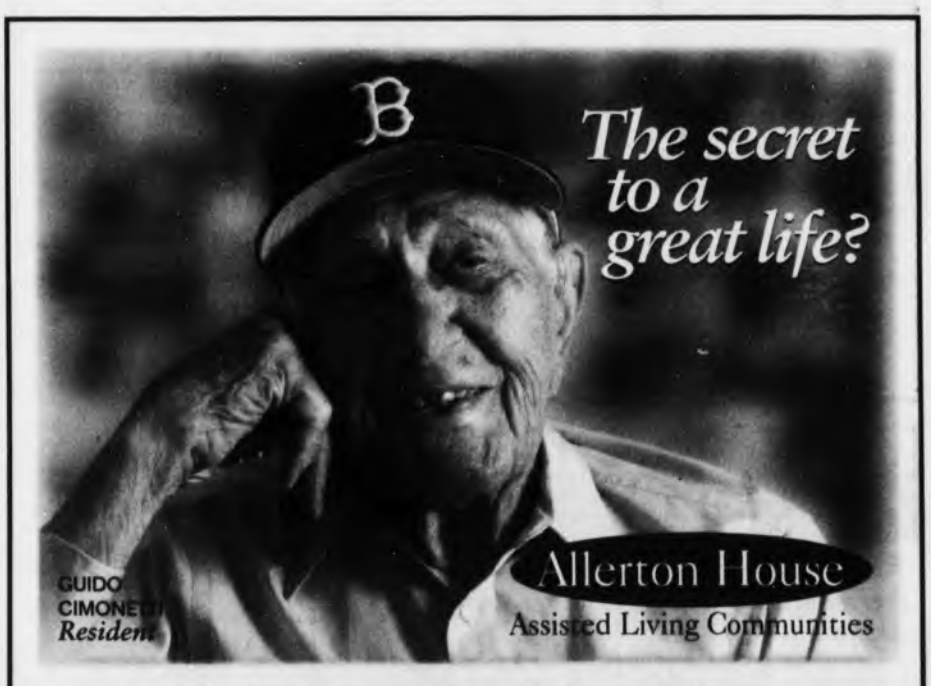
Bald eagles in Massachusetts, like wild turkeys, symbolize success in wildlife conservation efforts over the past century. Like many species, bald eagles were abundant in Massachusetts prior to European settlement. As hunters and fishermen competed for the same foods the bald eagle had traditionally eaten (bald eagles are classed with several other species world wide as "fish eagles"), the birds' numbers declined. When Mass Audubon and the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries and Wildlife teamed up to make attempts at reintroduction of breeding eagles in the state, they estimated that the last such pairs had disappeared at the beginning of the twentieth century.

Nationally, bald eagle numbers declined throughout the 1910s, '20s and '30s, but the birds received a reprieve from hunters' guns with the passing of the Bald Eagle Protection Act of 1940, "prohibiting, except under certain specified conditions, the taking, possession and commerce of such birds." Widespread pesticide use during the next three decades led to a rapid drop off in successful bald eagle births and an increase in adult and immature bird mortality. Pesticides like DDT that washed into freshwater feeding areas eventually made their way up the food chain into the choice fish of the bald eagle diet. Females laid eggs with soft shells or even no shells at all, due to an inability to produce calcium to coat the eggs, and the brooding parents often crushed their own young.

By 1963, only 417 known breeding pairs of bald eagles existed in the lower 48 United States. Our national symbol was quickly being wiped out.

Bald eagle sightings have been reported on the South Shore.

Two significant moments in the 1970s, though, signaled at least a chance for the birds' reemergence in America. First, in 1972, the federal government banned the use of DDT; then, a year later, President Richard M. Nixon signed the Endangered Species Act into law. On July 4, 1976, symbolically choosing the country's bicentennial celebration date, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service listed the bald eagle as a national endangered species. In 1995, the Clinton administration upgraded the bald eagle from endangered to threatened, and as of May 2004, the Bush administration is hinting at the bird's removal from the list altogether. Today, more than 7,500 known breeding pairs inhabit the contiguous "lower 48," with more than 50,000 birds occupying salmon-rich Alaska and British Columbia.



Here in Massachusetts, though, the road has been a bit tougher. In 1982 the joint effort to reintroduce breeding pairs to Massachusetts began with the importation of two eagle-puppet-fed chicks from Michigan. When those two birds successfully entered the wild, 41 more eagle chicks were transported from Michigan, Nova Scotia and Manitoba, and in 1989 two pairs of eagles successfully raised young at the Quabbin Reservoir in the central portion of the state. According to the Mass Audubon website, "By 2004, nesting eagles had spread across the state, with a total of eighteen territorial pairs." Regionally, bald eagles have set up their nests in the Lakeville/Middleboro area.

During the course of the winter the bald eagle population in Massachusetts climbs with the migration of birds from the north seeking open freshwater ponds in which to feed. "During the 2004 Midwinter Bald Eagle Survey," according to Mass Audubon, "a total of 61 birds were recorded, 39 of these at Quabbin Reservoir." When it gets cold enough to freeze the ponds and lakes of our region, as it has been for most of the 2005 calendar year to date, the eagles will leave those areas and head for rivers; hence the North River sighting in late January, and sightings along the Jones River on the South Shore.

Notorious as carrion consumers and scavengers — even chasing osprey and forcing them to drop their own catches — eagles were definitely not the favorite bird of statesman Benjamin Franklin. "I wish that the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country," he wrote, "he is a bird of bad moral character, he does not get his living honestly....Besides he is a rank coward; the little kingbird, not bigger than a sparrow attacks him boldly and drives him out of the district. He is therefore by no means a proper emblem for the brave and honest....For a truth, the turkey is in comparison a much more respectable bird, and withal a true original native of America."

Edward Howe Forbush, author of "Birds of Massachusetts and Other New England States," disagreed. Speaking of his first bald eagle sighting as a youth, he gushed, "My emotions on that occasion were somewhat similar to those experienced when I first viewed in the near distance the great dome of the capitol at Washington, for around both bird and building cluster many memories and traditions of a great country and a mighty people. Our eagle may deserve some of the epithets that have been heaped upon him; he may be a robber, a skulker and a carrion feeder; nevertheless he is a powerful and noble bird and a master of the air."

So is seeing a bald eagle rare on the South Shore of Massachusetts? Not as rare as it was a century ago, but the vision is still certainly a treat to behold.

The sweet scents of springtime

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

As I stroll through the landscape on a bright Sunday afternoon in late April, the sweet scents of springtime permeate the fresh spring air. Sparkling drops of moisture cling to branches, shimmering like strands of tiny jewels from our welcome April showers earlier in the day. In only a matter of days, it seems as if every tree and shrub has suddenly exploded into bloom. A profusion of lovely pink blossoms smothers the branches of cherries and plums creating a fairyland of delicate, fleeting beauty. The showy, satiny flowers of star and saucer magnolias are sensational this season although frosty evening temperatures in colder pockets nipped many of their delicate petals. Cheerful mounds of sunny yellow forsythia glow in the afternoon sun. Gardens are dotted with colorful clumps of early tulips, daffodils and grape hyacinths. Spring has surely sprung!

The heavenly perfume of hyacinths drifts across the garden carried by a warm gentle breeze; dense clusters of satiny, tubular bells on stocky, fleshy stems brighten the landscape in shades of royal purple, glistening white, and luscious shades of pink. Andromedas (Pieris japonica) provide the shrub border with an attractive combination of sweetly scented, dense clusters of milky-white cascading bells and attractive whorls of dark evergreen leaves. The distinctive scents of bronze fennel, lavender and catnip join these aromatic delights as I clip and rake my tiny herb garden.

As you make your annual springtime pilgrimage to the local nurseries this season, consider purchasing plants that offer pleasure for all the senses. Although visual enjoyment usually dominates our designs, few can deny the irresistible urge to stroke the soft, fuzzy leaves of lamb's ears (Stachys) or pat the silky foliage of Artemisia 'Silver Mound'. Ornamental grasses provide sound, in addition to texture and motion and are valuable additions to the fall and winter landscape. Fragrant plants, in particular, offer a lasting impression that often lingers from season to season. "Scents more than sounds or sights make the heartstrings crack," wrote Rudyard Kipling, and a landscape that includes strategically placed aromatic plants will be all the more pleasurable.

There are several ways to approach fragrance in the garden. Entire gardens devoted to fragrant flowers or foliages, such as rose gardens, or herb gardens, which may be both functional and aromatic, offer pockets of continuous intermingling scents. In my own garden, I prefer to plant for a sequence of sweet-smelling flowers and through the years, I have gradually accumulated a wide variety of woody and herbaceous plants that are visually attractive in addition to offering aromatic flowers or foliage. These fragrant plants are strategically located adjacent to various walkways, porches, doorways, or gates so that their pleasing scents may be enjoyed as we stroll by; others are planted near windows allowing their sweet-smelling flowers to permeate our home throughout the day.

As you make your annual springtime pilgrimage to the local nurseries this season, consider purchasing plants that offer pleasure for all the senses.

Fragrance, like color, tends to be extremely personal; each gardener is likely to have specific preferences, often due to associations with childhood memories. The wonderful scent of pine woods from my youth spent in the Catskills is revisited each time I spread shredded pine bark mulch. The sweet perfume of lilacs and roses reminds me of my mother's magnificent gardens when I was younger. We tend to describe and associate many flower smells with more familiar aromas, particularly those found in the kitchen. The wonderfully fragrant purple blooms of Heliotrope smell 'like vanilla frosting or a fresh-baked cake'. Numerous aromatic plants are described as 'lemon-scented, reminiscent of oranges, or clove-scented'.

Many fragrances are subtle and may require that you poke your nose directly into the flower to appreciate their scent or crush their leaves to release their wonderful aromas; others, like hyacinths, lilies, lilacs, or viburnum, pervade the garden with the slightest breeze. Mass plantings of a singular fragrant plant will produce a significant aroma such as a lilac or privet hedge. Plantings of individual aromatic plants may yield just the hint of their perfume, perhaps prompting further investigation to determine the source of the sweet smell. It should be noted that the level of perfume may also vary depending on the time of day, often in response to the pollinators that the plant has evolved to attract. The shrubby Carolina Allspice (Calycanthus) that I have planted next to the arbor leading to my backyard gardens releases a heavenly scent reminiscent of strawberries and oranges that is only noticeable during the afternoon and early evening.

Unfortunately, many of our newer hybrid plants, although often superior in their disease resistance, vigor, and showy blossoms, are considerably less fragrant than their ancestors. Old-fashioned plants may often best serve those in search of the most sweetly-scented blossoms, including species daylilies and antique roses.

Surround and infuse your landscape with fragrant plants. Judiciously selected ornamental flowering trees, shrubs, and perennials can provide a marvelous progression of attractive, sweet-smelling flowers from spring through fall. Herbs, including thyme, catmint, and lavender, planted along paths and walkways, will release their pungent scents when their leaves are crushed or brushed by passers-by. Wisteria, climbing roses, honeysuckle, and sweet autumn clematis supported by arbors, fences, pergolas, or lattice surrounding elevated decks will offer vertical structure to the landscape and pleasing perfumes throughout the growing season. Use container gardens on decks, patios and at entryways to further enhance this marvelous sensory journey. With thoughtful planning you will create a garden that will evoke fond memories for your children and appreciative visitors for the years to come.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Are we pro or con?

For the record, here at the Mariner we are neither pro- nor anti-development.

We'll admit to living in a house that is part of a subdivision that used to be a farm.

We're sure folks back in the early 70s when our house was built, bemoaned losing the open space and woodland. We wouldn't have blamed them.

When walking our neighborhood, we admit to being concerned about an "empty lot" and the specter of a 40-B project developer buying it, putting a road in and over-populating our area with people and traffic.

In our years as reporters, we've covered innumerable "developments" across the South Shore and nary a one went through without some opposition.

However, with that being said. Cohasset faces some real challenges. With three, large multi-unit projects on the horizon – without careful planning, the impact could affect the quality of life Cohasseters treasure.

We don't have the answers but will continue to follow the issues and report on them the best we can.

At the Mariner we have absolutely nothing to gain if any, all, or none of the projects come to fruition. But there is a lot at stake for Cohasset, we are aware of that.

We also wholeheartedly agree "a field is always better as a field." But, unfortunately, residents can't pull up the drawbridge after they move into a community and prevent further development.

Efforts to prevent change through the potential influx of newcomers is nothing new in Cohasset. According to historian E. Victor Bigelow, the Indian inhabitants of Quonahassit did not give Capt. John Smith – credited with being the discoverer of Cohasset — and the eight or nine English sailors with him a warm reception in the summer of 1614.

"Great excitement was aroused by these intruders, as though by instinct the savage heart felt the far-reaching consequences of that visit," Bigelow wrote in the "Narrative History of Cohasset" Vol. I. Capt. Smith and his men enraged several of the Indians who let their arrows fly at them.

As time marched on, the English took over the New World – and the rest is history.

If there is one important lesson here, it is not change but how a community plans for and handles change that is critically important. Arrows may not be the best way to keep developers at bay.

On a related matter, we have another catch phrase to share that we learned in neighboring Hingham.

In addition to "smart growth," and "strategic planning" – you can now add "echo effect." The "echo effect" means empty nesters could sell on an accelerated basis if they have attractive options in town. However, some would argue those seniors would sell eventually anyway. So the only question is do you want to keep the seniors in town or have them move elsewhere?

Schoolchildren are going to be a byproduct of subdivisions with single-family homes or multi-unit developments.

Congratulations, Mrs. Smullen

With all the contention around town relating to sewer capacity and multi-unit housing projects, it's nice to take a step back and get some perspective.

The Girl Scouts are going strong and to our knowledge are not embroiled in controversy.

We participated in the Girl Scouts through high school and those memories are still some of our fondest.

We went to New York City and camped on Nantucket, and marched in every Memorial Day Parade.

We were blessed to have creative, energetic Girl Scout leaders over the years who inspired us. The friendships formed in scouting can last a lifetime.

So it's nice to know the Patriots Trail Council has recognized a true Cohasset treasure, long-time Girl Scout Louise Smullen, who at 86 years young, has spent 45 years involved in Scouting.

We take our hats off to Mrs. Smullen – one of those "unsung" heroes whose has played a positive role in so many girls' lives.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt thanks from Coffeys

TO THE EDITOR:

Heartfelt thanks to the Rotary Club which organized the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk. Father Waldron's People in Need and the Bishop Roucco House for Girls are most grateful for the donations made in Fran's name.

We appreciate all who volunteered and participated to honor Fran in such a wonderful way. It meant so much to all of us.

Beware the rumor-mongers

TO THE EDITOR:

I suppose it is to be expected, but there are rumors that one or more of the Cook project supporters are on Northland's payroll. The credulous pass the allegation on, but it is untrue.

Northland was the winning bidder to develop and execute Cohasset's plan for the Cook estate, so it is true enough that there is a commonality of interest in seeing the project succeed.

Even though more detailed examination of the site revealed an absorption deficiency that initial tests had not shown, there remains the original reasons for Cohasset to gain control of the site to help satisfy its need for affordable senior housing, and there remains Northlands original reason to bid on participation. Hence it should not be surprising that people are working for a common goal: save the project. That's the reasonable motivation for all parties, not the nasty one suggested by the rumors.

Artist reception An opening reception will be held on Sunday, May 1 from 3-5 p.m. in the Meeting Room for Pembroke artist, Becky Haletky. Haletky is celebrating her 25th year as a professional artist with a retrospective exhibit at the library from May 1 to June 30. Known primarily for her realistic watercolors, Becky has also worked in several other media over the years. The show will include hand tinted photographs, photo collages, acrylics, and watercolors. All are welcome.

Upcoming author events. Reserve the dates. Richard Marinick, author of "Boyos," will discuss and sign copies of his book on Thursday, May 5 at 10 a.m. in the library's Meeting Room. Marinick grew up running with the Southie gangs during the Whitey Bulgur era and learned to write during a ten-year prison stretch. The event is sponsored by Buttonwood Books. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

Author Margaret McLean will discuss her book "Under Oath," a swiftly paced first degree murder and conspiracy trial in Charlestown, Mass. on Tuesday, June 21 at 10 a.m. All are welcome.

College admissions 101. College admissions consultant Marlena Alex, will present an overview of the college admissions process on Monday, May 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Meeting Room. Geared to high school students and parents just beginning to think about applying to college, the program will include information on how to come up with a list of schools, standardized testing, interviews, completing applications, working with your guidance counselor and how college admissions offices make their selections. All are welcome.

Holly Hill Farm lecture series. Through a series of three lectures to be held in the library's Meeting Room, participants will be introduced to the birds, wildflowers and outcroppings common to the South Shore. On Thursday, May 5 local naturalist and experienced birder Sally Avery, will provide a lecture on birds. Meg Moore, a local nature enthusiast, will present a lecture on wildflowers on Thursday, May 19. Professor of Geology, Peter Dillon, will present a lecture on outcroppings, rock ledges and geology on Thursday, June 2. The lectures will start at 7 p.m. and are open to the public and free of charge. For more information contact Jon Belber at Holly Hill Farm at 781- 383-1455.

Antique appraisal event. Sunrise of Cohasset invites you to bring a favorite collectible or treasure to be appraised by antique specialist Andrea Hunt on Sunday, May 15 from 2-4 p.m. Registration begins at 1:30 p.m. The event will be held at Sunrise of Cohasset, 125 King St. Admission is $10. Proceeds will benefit the library. R.S.V.P. to Sunrise 781-383-6300.

Book sale. The Friends of The Cohasset Library will be holding a book sale on Saturday, May 14. More details will follow.

Independent film series. Mark your calendars for the May 26 film night featuring "Wilby Wonderful." Scandal rocks the quiet town of Wilby Island threatening to change life for the residents forever. The film will be shown in the Meeting Room at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Refreshments will be served.

New Massachusetts history web site. Visit the "Mass Moments" web site at www.massmoments.org to learn more about the people, places and events that make Massachusetts history so rich. A project of The Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities, the site provides a story from history for every day of the year.

Readers invited to sign up

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Safety and the Greenbush Project...

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

We' like to say a word about safety. Safety is very serious stuff. Very shortly, the MBTA Greenbush project will begin work in Cohasset. When this starts, we will all need to be mindful that things are no longer as they were.

The MBTA has purchased the old right of way. It is theirs, and is no longer Cohasset's. Shortly, it will be the site of very hazardous construction. The entire right of way will be off limits to everyone. As a reminder of this, the MBTA will be erecting barriers to the right of way at each cross road along with "No Trespassing" signs.

Some of us have, for years, used the old rail bed as a beautiful walkway. Unfortunately, we will no longer be able to do this. Throughout Cohasset, informal pathways have criss-crossed the rail bed as shortcuts to various places. These paths are "off limits" as well. It would be a good idea to review these new rules with your children for safety's sake.

You might ask, why mention this when there doesn't seem to be anything happening now. Well, that's about to change, big time. First, the MBTA will begin marking trees and setting surveying stakes. These are crucial markers for the benefit of the abutters, so they know which trees will be removed, and which will stay. They are also for the benefit of the project so they can remove the proper trees and undergrowth and determine the layout accurately. It is important that these markers not be tampered with. After marking, giant machines will clear the trees and underbrush. These machines will make a tyrannosaurus look like a midget and are very dangerous. They have the capability to take down whole trees and spit out a pile of chips. Clearly not the thing children should be hanging around.

These machines will make a tyrannosaurus look like a midget and are very dangerous. They have the capability to take down whole trees and spit out a pile of chips.

After clearing, culverts and drainage will be constructed. The area where someone is able to walk today, might be a hole for a culvert pipe tomorrow, another hazardous change. Then, the right of way will be filled and graded in preparation for rail bed placement. Most of the basic right of way preparation work will be done in 2005. Also, 2005 will see the beginning construction of the station and the new bridge for Rocky Lane.

So what's the upshot of all of this? For your own safety, please stay off of the MBTA's property out of harms way. And, please review these safety issues with your children.

As a reminder, updated information directly from the MBTA can be obtained from WJDA, 1300 AM, at 11 a.m. to noon on the "Party Line" program on the fourth Tuesday of each month. In addition, on Saturdays in the "Local" section of the Patriot Ledger the MBTA has a general update for all five towns of the Greenbush project.

It will always take 'x' to pay for 'y'

COMMENTARY

ANDREW QUIGLEY

A candidate for School Committee during the recent election said we need to run the schools like a business. A speaker at Town Meeting stated that overrides for the schools "have to stop" and that the schools need to use "creative thinking" in order to avoid overrides in the future.

I am all for our School Department providing accurate and timely financial information to taxpayers so that we can have all of the facts to make truly informed decisions when it comes time for override requests. Surprise deficits such as we had this fiscal year not only are distressing and disruptive, but they also reflect poorly on the credibility of the schools at override time.

However, what the critics of our schools fail to acknowledge is that even if every monthly financial report from the schools is accurate to the penny, it will not change the bottom line. It still will cost "x" Cohasset taxpayer dollars to educate "y" students. Moreover, both "x" and "y" will vary from year-to-year depending on factors such as state and federal education aid formulas, new state and federal mandates, and unforeseeable special education costs, just to name a few of the variables our schools must deal with.

Cohasset's need for annual overrides is not unique. The same financial pressures facing Cohasset are being felt not only by communities in Massachusetts, but throughout the country because of decreased federal funding to the states, which then have less money for local aid. The problem is particularly acute in towns such as Cohasset because of our lack of a commercial tax base, which leaves almost all of the tax burden on homeowners.

The criticisms of the Cohasset schools are mindful of my experience some years ago with two other school districts. In 1985, the mayor and city council of Revere demanded that the Revere School Department hire an outside auditor because of chronic, unbudgeted expenses which would crop up in the middle of the fiscal year, year-after-year. So the city hired the big accounting firm of Peat, Marwick, and Mitchell to audit the School Dept. Peat made a number of recommendations to improve financial reporting and accounting by the schools which made the mayor and council feel vindicated with their criticisms of the schools.

...there must be an acknowledgment that our schools are not widget factories. Manufacturing a widget is not the same as educating a child.

But then Peat produced a recommended budget which made the mayor and city council see red. Peat said the Revere schools needed $15.8 million in order to provide an adequate level of education to the children of Revere, a figure which was even more than the School Committee would have requested. Peat told the mayor (who said the city could afford only $13.8 million for the schools) that the choice was simple: raise taxes to make up the $2 million difference or lay off 70 teachers.

The same situation happened in the early 1990s in the Town of Winthrop. Once again, outside auditors pointed out a number of deficiencies with the School Department's accounting practices, but they also determined that there was no waste of tax dollars and that the Winthrop schools were being underfunded.

I guarantee to any of those who advocate bringing their business experience to the Cohasset schools that if the town were to hire an outside consulting firm such as McKinsey Co. to examine our school budget, while they certainly might have suggestions for improving the budgeting process, they too would conclude that the Cohasset schools are underfunded and that there is no magic bullet of "creative thinking" which is going to stop overrides from being needed in the future. As one thoughtful resident stated on the floor of Town Meeting, Prop. 2-1/2 never has been and never will be a workable guideline for determining the rate of increase in our taxes, particularly in the realm of public education.

Finally, there must be an acknowledgment that our schools are not widget factories. Manufacturing a widget is not the same as educating a child. Most of corporate America is able to turn a profit these days only because it makes its widgets in Third World countries by employees who are paid a fraction of what Americans used to be paid. But I am not aware of any suggestion that we outsource our children's education to the Third World.

The override question on the May 21 ballot has nothing to do with the non-issue of School Department financial practices. But it does have everything to do with whether we as a community want to continue to provide our children with a quality education which will enable them to meet the educational standards of the 21st century.

HEALTH NOTES

'Protect our children and our future'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Earth day for Cohasset is tomorrow the 30th, a week late. Earth day is the day in spring when people are called to do something for the environment. According to the Earth day web page, http://www.earthday.net :

Earth Day, which began in 1970, is now celebrated by millions of people worldwide. This year is its 35th anniversary, and around the world, hundreds of thousands of non-governmental organizations, governments, teachers, and faith-based groups, among others, are making plans to declare that they are part of a worldwide movement to protect our planet, our children, and our future.

This year, Earth Day Network's theme is "Protect Our Children and Our Future." Despite the extraordinary and often false obstacles that we face in our efforts to protect our natural resources and our biodiversity, few will dare argue with the moral imperative to protect our children from harm. As a consequence of that imperative, the movement calls on governments, corporations, faith-based organizations, and all people in our troubled world to work with us to ensure that children everywhere are healthy, educated, and free from oppression.

This Earth Day, hundreds of major events will take place around the world, in communities large and small, in classrooms, in parks and on beaches, in places of worship. From Kiev to Beijing, from India to Romania, from Africa to the Americas, we will demonstrate our diversity and our resilience. We look forward to your participation and working with you to make this Earth Day the beginning of a global effort to protect our children's future.

Organizations in Cohasset which are sponsoring Earth day goals are the Water Resource Protection Committee's Green Space effort as well as the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, several Cohasset garden clubs including the Community Garden Club and Cohasset Garden Club, and the Board of Health.

We have to realize that the complex mechanisms in our ecology are affected by many subtle changes in our patterns of living and using our resources.

But the real secret to protecting our children and our future is knowledge. Not only that learned in school by our kids, but knowledge about the way our planet works. We have to realize that the complex mechanisms in our ecology are affected by many subtle changes in our patterns of living and using our resources. And the results change the environment, not necessarily for the worse, but certainly there will be a change. Thus if we load our lawns with more fertilizer than is normal, there will be a change. If we eat more than our bodies need there will be a change. If we burn more fossil fuel, there will be a change.

It's optimistic to think that by declaring one day in which we do for our planet those things which we should know to do every day, we will change anything. But perhaps, each of us can think about one habit we can adopt which will help us learn more about the world we live in. For example a recent article about poisons in the National Geographic gives a creative insight into the effect of miniscule amounts of a variety of substances on the human anatomy. The article points out that all substances in appropriate doses are lethal. It's mainly when the substances are used in doses too large for our bodies defenses or capacity to absorb, that they become harmful.

Certainly this concept applies to Mother Earth in some way. If we add too much pollution to a place on earth the effect must be harmful. By the same token, if someone applies a very strong poison in an appropriate dose and by an appropriate method to an invasive species, the result may be beneficial to the environment as a whole.

I see people picking up cans and bottles while they're walking. Who's to say that such an act isn't the beginning of a movement which would over time, help solve the solid waste problem. If it'll help to remind you to do something to help the environment, the Board of Health has Earth Day T-shirts at our office in Town Hall.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Down with the home run!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Robert Lipsyte, the onetime sports columnist who quit the New York Times to write novels, has come up with a proposal that is all but guaranteed to end baseball's not-too-enthusiastic struggles with steroids.

He wants to outlaw the home run.

Under the Lipsyte rule, a ball hit over the fence would be out and the big league record for home runs would revert to the 61 hit by Roger Maris of the Evil Empire back in 1961, presumably without the aid of any chemical stronger than sour mash.

Right on, Bob, and I say this as a guy whose only career home run came on a field off Bickford Road in East Braintree when Holly Black couldn't find the ball in the brush in Franny Nordahl's backyard. That field today is called Cape Cod Lane, but I digress . . .

The home run has been what's wrong with baseball ever since baseball's owners discovered that large numbers of people are willing to spend even larger sums of money to watch that fellow Ruth hit balls out of the park.

Maybe if we wound the yarn a little tighter around the core, they said, and outlawed those pitched balls that did tricks like the spitter and the shine ball and kept putting fresh, white balls into play, batters could hit them farther.

The result was 54 homers by Babe Ruth (talk about sour mash!) and a whole new game that was baseball in name only.

"The grand swat has marginalized thinking, finesse and planning in America's pastime," wrote Lipsyte in USA Today, "and as life imitates art, the homer may just be a kind of metaphorical weapon of mass destruction. As such, we should get rid of it."

I'm not encouraged that the Lipsyte rule will ever be adopted by the lords of baseball. For the past 80-odd years, their every action has been directed toward helping their hired hands jack another one into the bleachers.

Remember Greenberg Gardens?

When the Detroit Tigers sold Hank Greenberg, who once hit 58 homers for them, to the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Pirates moved the left field fence in 30 feet and called the new home run territory "Greenberg Gardens."

Greenberg lasted only a year with the Pirates but they still had Ralph Kiner, another 50-homer man, so they left the fence where it was and rechristened the area "Kiner Korner."

"Home run hitters drive Cadillacs," said Kiner. "Singles hitters drive Fords."

Before Ruth hit 29 in 1919, home runs were rare. The Chicago White Sox as a team hit only six when they won the American League pennant in 1906. Frank Baker's 15-year lifetime total of 93 earned him the nickname "Home Run."

The major league record was 27 set by Ned Williamson of Chicago in 1884 when the Cubs played their home games in Lakefront Park with its left field fence only 180 feet from home plate. He hit all but two of the 27 at home.

"You like offense, you loved Lakefront," said Bill Veeck, baseball promoter extraordinaire. "It was so small that early homers counted as doubles."

Not a bad idea! What do you say, Bob?

Concerned Taxpayers group meets May 10

The Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers is hosting a forum on May 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Cottage to discuss the crisis in the budget with impending yearly operational overrides and the impact on services and taxes with the push to quickly increase population by hooking up Cook, Avalon and Cedarmere and thus all other developments to the Hull treatment plant.

Answers as to why the town needs two very similar senior projects, Cook and Cedarmere, that will be ready for occupancy at approximately the same time and how the town will deal with a potential huge increase in educational needs from increased sewered development and the turnover of senior houses to families will be pursued.

Also to be discussed is the school budget and if all avenues have been explored to mitigate the soon to be needed $1 million annual school budget increases that were disclosed by the Superintendent.

Town officials have been invited and all are welcome to attend. For further information call 781-383-0024.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is holding its fourth annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh, III Memorial Scholarship Fund tomorrow (Saturday, April 30) at 27 Hill St. 8 a.m. to noon. (Rain Date: May 7)

The committee has been awarding this scholarship to a deserving Cohasset graduating senior since 1978. Several years ago, committee members held their first yard sale to held finance the scholarship fund. Because of the tremendous amount of community-wide support they received, the Cohasset Democrats have made their yard sale an annual event. This year's yard sale will be held on Saturday, April 30 and, as always, all proceeds go towards the scholarship fund.

If you have donations, wish to volunteer some time, or want further information, call McCann at 383-0222.

OUR WORLD

Call 781-383-3198 for information. The museum is located at 100 Sohier St., just behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Estate Sale — Those interested in dropping off donations for Our World's upcoming estate sale can do so on Saturday, April 30 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Our World. Donations of all types of furniture, mirrors, pictures, rugs, lamps, tableware, table linens, books and brick-a-brack are being sought.

The Estate Sale, which will be coordinated by Cohasset's own Lord's & Ladies, will be held at Our World on Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. Proceeds generated from this Estate Sale will go towards the installation of the Museum's new Bio-Diversity exhibit slated to open September 2005.

In addition to April 30, Our World is also open for drop-offs on Wednesdays from 4 -6 p.m. and Thursdays from 12 - 2 p.m. You can also call the Museum's Director, Michele Dupuis at 781-383-3198 to arrange a specific drop-off time.

Live telethon, online auction to benefit Cohasset PSO

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset school system would be at a great loss without the contributions of the Parent School Organization. From guest speakers to playground equipment, library books to physical education supplies, the PSO has generously contributed to many different educational facets that enrich students' lives.

To help keep the funds coming, the PSO will be hosting the Second Annual PSO Telethon, Wednesday, May 4 from 7-9:30 p.m. The event will be aired live on Comcast television channel 22. In addition, it will be hosting an online auction, which will run from May 1-May 6 and can be accessed at www.psotelethon.cmarket.com.

PSO fund-raising chair Claudia McKeon said during the telethon, a live talent show will be aired featuring students from all three Cohasset schools. Between the performances, parents will be asked to make their pledge to the PSO, akin to the telethons seen on WGBH. Depending on the amount of the pledge — $100, $75, $50 or $25 — those who donate will be entered into a corresponding raffle category. With a $100 pledge, names will be entered into all four raffle categories, with a $75 pledge, names will be placed in the $75 and under categories, and so on. The telethon was made possible by the generous sponsorship of local businesses including Coldwell Banker Real Estate Brokerage, Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, and Graham Waste Services, Inc.

Some of the items to be raffled off include restaurant gift certificates, swimming lessons, sports tickets, car detailing service, a sterling silver bracelet, and tickets to the South Shore Music Circus. Winners for the raffle will be drawn at the end of the night.

Tons of talent!

A live talent show featuring performances from students in many grade levels will be broadcast during the PSO telethon, Wednesday, May 4. Performers include:

Playing piano:
Derek & Adam Benson & Alexandros Deligiannidis - grades 2 and 3
Julia Canney - grade 5
Elizabeth Hagearty & Emily Dormitzer - grade 4

Singing & Instrumental:
Megan Green - grade 5
The Brown Sisters - grades 1, 4 and 5
Rebecca Dickenson - grade 7
Erika & Katrina Reardon & Jeanne Thomae - grade 8
Anna & Thomas Buckley - grades 8 and 6
Martin Buckely - grade 2
Caitlin O'Connell - grade 11
Hollis Hunnewell - grade 2

Dancing:
Alexandra Weissman & Danielle Healy - grade 5
Carly Salerno - grade 8

"This is a really neat event," said McKeon, adding "I don't know of any other schools around which are doing fund-raising on live TV."

McKeon, along with other active PSO members Nancy Froio, Lisa Dooley, Michelle Skolnick, Suzie Montgomery, Lucia Flibotte, and PSO President Sarah Porter, have been working hard to bring back the telethon for the second year in a row. She said because last year was the first attempt, although it was a success, there were a few kinks that needed to be worked out spontaneously as live television does not lend itself to second takes. In light of their ability to keep the show moving along and remain graceful under fire, Flibotte along with Rich Ofthson will be returning as the hosts.

Calls will be answered by the Answer Quick professional calling center, and tax-deductible phone pledges can be made using a Visa or Master Card. Answer Quick has been handling public television annual phone drives as well as many school, radio, and nonprofit companies for over fifteen years. Their operators will be answering the phone lines and securely taking credit card pledges.

"Last year we had a great time and we raised $12,000," McKeon said.

In addition to the raffle, McKeon said for the first time this year, some of the "larger ticket" items which were donated will be showcased online during the PSO online auction. The auction will be held for the entire week leading up to the telethon, from May 1 until 9 p.m. on May 6. Items up for grabs during the auction include a gift certificate for $3,000 worth of orthodontic work, estate planning services, a cooking demonstration including dinner and wine for six at Blackfin Restaurant, and an afternoon sailing trip around Boston Harbor.

Every school has its own active branch of the PSO, which all operate under the larger umbrella of the general PSO. McKeon said therefore, the funds raised by the general PSO through these fund-raising events will be equally divided among the schools, and each school PSO along with the principal, teachers, and any parents who would like to attend a meeting of the PSO, will take a vote to decide how the funds could best be spent. PSO funds are spent on programs that enhance the curriculum in place for each school.

Live telethon, online auction to benefit Cohasset PSO

McKeon said the PSO is very cognizant of the fact that there have been many different fund-raisers held for various organizations over the past few years due to budget constraints, and therefore it made the decision this year to only hold three fund-raisers spread out over the year. The telethon and auction will be the last and largest of the three fund-raising events held this year.

"Times are tough and the town has been under fire for budgetary issues," she said, adding the PSO is trying to respect that. "So far, I think it's going well," she said, adding the public has given very positive feedback.

The Second Annual PSO Telethon will be held Wednesday, May 4 from 7-9:30 p.m. and will be broadcast on Comcast Channel 22. Be sure to phone in your tax deductible pledges at 1-800-939-0139. Raffle drawings will take place from 9-9:30 p.m. The on-line silent auction begins May 1 and ends May 6, and can be accessed at www.psotelethon.cmarket.com.

Tracksters off to winning start

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Both the Cohasset boys and girls track teams started their season right with wins over Hull on Tuesday.

The girls won convincingly, 81-34, with the boys taking home a solid 73-51 victory.

Senior co-captain Nicole Whitney starred for the Lady Skippers, winning four events on the day - the mile, 200m, long jump and triple jump. While coach Al LaFountain figures Whitney will be a state meet qualifier in the sprints, he is confident that she can excel in just about any event.

"She's probably the most versatile female athlete I've coached," LaFountain said. "She is willing to do whatever we ask of her. She really understands the concept of a team player."

Senior co-captain Lindsay Kennedy was Cohasset's first state qualifier of the year, running the 100m in 13.3 seconds to qualify in that event. Kennedy also finished second in the long jump and triple jump.

Other individual winners for the Skippers included sophomore Sarah Malone (400m), sophomore Alyssa Hoffman (800m), freshman Corinna Durham (100-hurdles) and Nikki Dugan (javelin).

The relay teams also excelled for the Cohasset girls, with both the 4x100 and 4x400 teams winning. The 4x100 team consisted of Durham, Kennedy, freshman Olivia Kimla and sophomore Shelea Daly.

The 4x400 squad was senior Jen Daley, Dugan, sophomore Lauren Strazzula and freshman Flossie Clougherty.

Other bright spots included second-place finishes from junior Aileen Fortunado (shot-put), Kimla (100m) and Clougherty (discus).

LaFountain says the girls are aiming for a South Shore League title, something the program has not done in nearly 30 years. There are 15 athletes total on the team, and with the leadership of Whitney and Kennedy, the coach is expecting some good things this season.

"Their workouts are spectacular to watch," LaFountain said. "We have a young team, but these are all quality kids who are hungry, fast and strong."

Defending league champ Carver and Mashpee figure to be among the favorites for the league championship.

The boys' effort was highlighted by two first-place finished apiece from sophomores Anthony DiPaolo and Brent Daly. DiPaolo won the javelin and discus, while Daly took the 100m and triple jump.

LaFountain says DiPaolo is a good athlete who can likely perform well in running events as well as the season goes on.

Other wins included Paul St. Pierre in the high hurdles, Reed Wendorf-French in the 300-hurdles and Justin Alexander in the shot put.

Like the girls, both the sprint relay teams for the boys were also victorious. The 4x100 team of DiPaolo, St. Pierre, Robert Silvia and Alexander joined the 4x400 team of Colin Conway, Mike Devlin, DiPaolo and Silvia as winners.

Top-three finishers for the boys included Adam Harcz (second place, two-mile), Andrew Chang (third, two-mile), Daly (second in the half-mile and long jump), Andrew DiVitre (second, 200m), Conway and St. Pierre (second and third in the discus). St. Pierre also finished third in the shot put.

LaFountain admits the boys are in somewhat of a building mode, but they are going in the right direction with 15 athletes on the team (compared to single-digit turnouts the last two years). Of the 15 kids, 11 are freshmen or sophomores.

The coach hopes that as many of those athletes as possible can qualify for the state meet.

Coming up on the track schedule is tomorrow's state relay race and a home meet Monday against Harwich.

Boys pick up two more wins; girls defeat Marshfield

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The past week has been a good one for Cohasset High School lacrosse.

The girls got back on the winning path with a solid 13-2 win over Marshfield Tuesday, while the boys earned two more wins over Holliston last Saturday (8-5) and Martha's Vineyard on Monday (16-11).

Seniors Lauren Rizzotti and Mackenzie Holway paced the offensive attack for the girls against Marshfield. Rizzotti scored a season-high seven goals, while Holway had two goals and four assists.

Head coach Torin Sweeney said the two teamed up to form an unstoppable tandem on Tuesday.

"They worked brilliantly together," Sweeney said. "They were connecting well on their passes. The whole team passed the ball well that day."

Lindsay Durkin had two goals and an assist, while sophomores Kara Wilcox and Kristin Dooley also had a goal apiece.

Wilcox and Dooley lead a number of sophomores who have played well for Cohasset in the increased amount of playing time they have been getting lately. Sweeney mentioned Emily Coggins and Kielgh Swain as others in that group who have been performing well and giving the team depth.

Against Marshfield, juniors Joanna Hamilton and Marissa Evans also played a good game. Hamilton made nine saves in net, while Evans led a strong defensive effort.

"Marissa won a lot of possessions for us; she was probably our strongest defender in that game," Sweeney said.

The Lady Skippers faced a tough task when they traveled to Close call for girls tennis

Cohasset comes up big in battle for first place in SSL

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Just about everyone figured Tuesday's Norwell-Cohasset girls tennis match would finish 3-2 one way or the other, and that is exactly what happened.

Unfortunately for the Clippers, they were the two in the equation, and they came away with their first South Shore League loss of the year.

The match was decided at third singles (the last match to finish, taking well over two hours), where Cohasset freshman Sally Meehan took the win over Norwell's Marissa Dalferro, 6-3, 6-3.

Cohasset senior co-captain Elizabeth Stone said she and her teammates knew they were in for a tough match coming in, and were more than pleased to get the win.

"Our team was very excited," she said. "The people who needed to step up did exactly that. It was great for Sally to close out the match for us; she played really well."

Stone, at first singles, and the first doubles duo of Meg Anderson and Emilie Shea earned the other two points for Cohasset.

Taylor Cleaves earned a point for Norwell at second singles with a dominating 6-3, 6-0 win. The second doubles team of Mackenzie Shute and Alexandra Dalferro also got a hard-earned point at second doubles with a three-set (3-6, 6-0, 6-2) win over Cohasset's Rachel Garber and Remy Lee.

The Anderson/Shea combo came back from a 6-2 loss in the first set against Norwell seniors Carly Arena and Kathryn Ankner to win the next two sets, both by a 6-1 score.

Arena said afterward said the Cohasset first doubles team really showed up to play after a quick first set.

"They just stepped it up, went out and did their job," said the

A walk in the park for softball team

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Thirteen hits and 13 walks is generally a favorable equation.

It worked out well for the Cohasset softball team on Tuesday, as their offensive attack carried them to a 23-12 win over Norwell.

The offensive stars were numerous for the Skippers. Senior co-captain Casey Anderson went 3-for-4 with a double and four RBI. Sophomore Christina Pinkus was 2-for-3 with a triple and two RBI. Senior co-captain Cecelia Chapman had a double and knocked in two runs, while freshman Anna Haggerty had three hits on the day.

Pinkus turned in another impressive pitching performance. In relief of classmate Virginia Spofford, Pinkus pitched four innings, giving up two hits and striking out 11. Head coach Deb Bostwick said afterward there are several reasons why her star pitcher is so effective.

"She's really smooth. She's 5-foot-7 or 5-8, has an incredible first step, and has long and lanky arms," Bostwick said.

Although Spofford is in a bit of a slump at the moment, the coach expects big things from both halves of her pitching duo.

"They really compliment each other and help each other out," Bostwick said.

About the only downer for the Skippers on the day was an injury to shortstop Katie James, who has been having herself a nice season both at the plate and at shortstop.

It was another frustrating loss for the Clippers, who remain winless on the season. Their top hitter was sophomore center fielder Kristin Capaldo, who was 2-for-4 (including a triple) and an RBI.

Norwell did not help themselves with their errors, something that continues to frustrate head coach Jack Browne.

"We have to find a way to cut down on our mistakes," he said. "What should have been routine outs weren't. There is no real consistency in our fielding."

Cohasset plays Norwell again on May 12. The Skippers were scheduled to travel to Mashpee yesterday, host Abington on Tuesday and travel to Carver on Thursday.

All-Scholastic gymnastics team

Cohasset's Nancy Durkin named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

Several of the young women and men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

After consulting with area coaches, though, we do feel secure that we chose the top 13 gymnasts in Marinerland for this honor:

Nancy Durkin - Senior
Cohasset

Nancy Durkin

Consistently the top scorer on a team that barely missed out on the state tournament... Qualified for the state individuals meet in the all-around, and had a solid meet there...Was probably at her best on the floor exercise and beam, where she generally scored in the mid to high 8's...Placed fifth in the all-around at the Cranberry League meet with a 33.15...Scored an all-around career high of 34.2 in Nor-Coh's meet against Bridgewater-Raynham, the team's best meet of the season (130.7 points as a team)...Has practiced gymnastics since she was three years old...Will attend Stonehill College in the fall

Samantha Rosen - Senior
(Capt.)
Norwell

Samantha Rosen

A good all-around performer for the Nor-Coh's this season, culminating in a trip to the state individuals meet... Scored an 8.25 there on the vault and floor exercise, the two events Rosen says are her favorites...Earned two medals at the Cranberry League meet (needing a top-six finish to medal)...At that meet, scored an 8.5 on the vault to take second place (Nor-Coh's highest finish during the competition), and finished sixth on bars with an even 8.0...Has been practicing gymnastics since she was six years old...Has spent this term interning with the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association...Plans to study nursing at Fairfield University

Molly Fanning - Senior (Capt.)
Hanover

Molly Fanning

A standout performer on the Hanover gymnastics team for several seasons, Fanning got the Lady Indians off to a great 4-0 start before a torn ACL cut her final HHS season short...A seasoned performer on all four apparatus, Fanning won the All-around in all four meets in which she competed...Racked up a season-high 36.7 in the all-around in a win over Pembroke...Had personal bests of 9.5 on the floor exercise, 9.2 on the vault, 9.2 on the uneven bars, and 8.9 on the beam...A Patriot League All-star throughout her career, Fanning qualified for State Individuals in three events last winter and placed sixth overall on the bars...Had surgery in January to repair her torn ACL and is healing ahead of schedule...A year round performer with Ellis School of Gymnastics in Braintree, Fanning teaches the sport to youngsters there and at Hanover Middle School...Fanning plans to attend Providence College in the fall.

Kelly Longo - Junior
Pembroke

Kelly Longo

Not a bad person to build a new program around ... Led the Titans to the Patriot League title in the school's first year of existence. ... Team MVP, League MVP, qualified for state individuals on the all-around, where she scored an 8.7 ... Stepped up when it really counted, tying for first with Randolph/Milton's superb all-arounder, Hilary McDonald, to help Pembroke clinch the league title in its last match of the season ... Dedicates herself to the sport by training year round ... A class act who leads by example ... Coach Meredith Fogarty: "She is constantly trying to improve her skills."

Hilary Labonte - Junior
Pembroke

Patriot League all-star made it to the state individual meet on beam and floor ... Scored an 8.0 on the floor and an 8.55 on the beam (good for 15th place) in Beverly ... Helped the Titans capture the Patriot League title with her consistency and determination ... .Powerful legs and graceful movements make her a joy to watch on the beam ... Coach Meredith Fogarty: She's a tremendous athletes with a lot of grace. She's just a beautiful performer.

Jackie Wescott - Sophomore
Silver Lake

Jackie Wescott

Endured as much pressure as any gymnast on the South Shore and did not wilt ... Thrust into the spotlight after stars Kelly Longo and Hilary Labonte left to attend new Pembroke High ... All she did was help pace the Lakers to a 7-3 record, earning Patriot League all-star recognition ...Finished second to Longo on floor ... She and twin sister Katie finished 1-2 in many events for the Lakers ... Just missed an invitation to the state individual meet ... Small and powerful, she seems to explode off the mat during her floor routine ... Coach Lindsay-Leigh Consolati: "She's equally good on all four events."

Emily Farley - Senior (Capt.)
Braintree

The Lady Wamps' top all-around gymnast, Farley helped lead the program to their first Bay State Conference championship in over two decades...Qualified for the state individuals meet in the all-around...Overcame a sprained ankle suffered late in the season to compete in that event...Was consistently scoring in the low 9's on the floor exercise by the end of the regular season, a remarkable accomplishment for a high school gymnast...Saved her best for Braintree's huge win over perennial league champ Framingham, earning a 35.5 all-around...As the last athlete to perform in the last event at that Framingham meet, scored a 9.0 on the floor to clinch the victory...Will compete for the state team next month in Florida, as one of Massachusetts' top seven senior gymnasts

Laura Gavin - Junior
Braintree

One of Braintree's most consistent performers, Gavin was an all-around star for her team...Competed in the all-around at the state individuals in Beverly last month...Was a solid performer in all four events, but was her best on the vault...Scored her highest mark of the year in that event in the Framingham meet with a 9.1...Also scored an 8.45 on the bars in that meet, contributing to an impressive 34.3 all-around score...Certainly figures to be one of Braintree's all-around athletes next year as a senior

Amy Caldwell - Sophomore
Braintree

Caldwell continues to establish herself as one of the area's top high school athletes...Also an outstanding soccer player...On the outdoor track scene, has already qualified for the state track meet this spring in multiple events...Qualified for March's state gymnastics individuals meet on the bars, beam and vault events...Along with Gavin, was one of Braintree's top scorers at the state team meet on the vault, which was the team's best event at that meet...Against Framingham, had an 8.65 on the floor and 8.5's on the bars and beam, all good enough to finish in the top three in those respective events...Also competed in the all-around at a few meets, including a first place finish against Weymouth with a 33.875

Casey Quinn - Junior
Weymouth

Casey Quinn

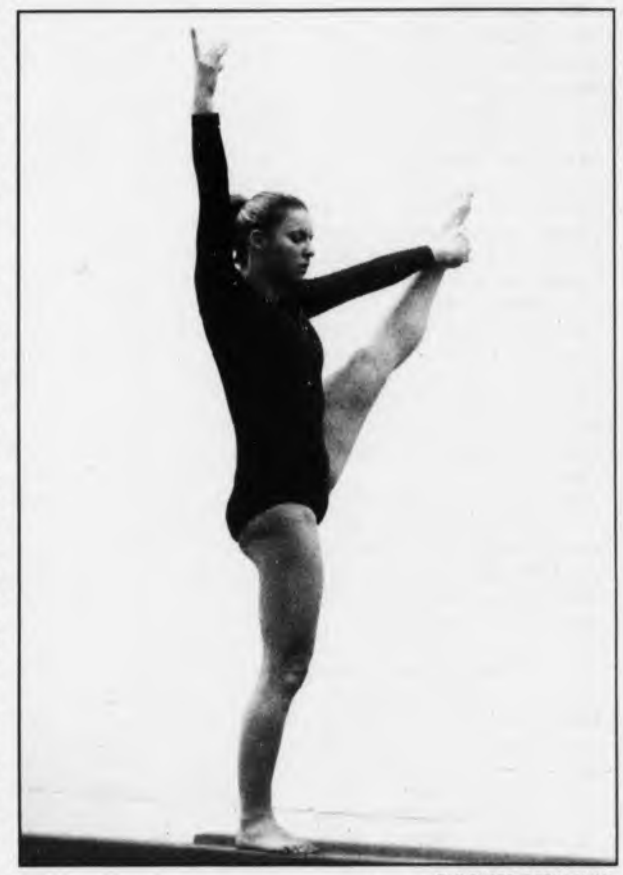
Mighty Quinn ... Made it to the state individual meet, where she scored a respectable 9.0 on vault, 8.95 on beam, 8.85 on floor and an 8.75 on bars, good for 17th overall. ... Overcame an early season ankle injury to re-establish herself as one of the best gymnastics in the Bay State Conference. ... League all-star in the all-around ... Earned second trip to states with her typically solid all-around scores ... Coach Nicki Agnew: "She's one of the most reliable gymnastics you'll she. Her scores don't fluctuate very often"

Jenn Lamm - Junior
Weymouth

Lamm showed her chops during the state individual meet, scoring an 8.85 on the bars, an 8.4 on the beam, and 8.025 on the vault and an 8.45 on the floor. ... Won beam at the Bay State Conference meet, placed fifth on the floor ... Named team MVP for the way she stepped up after teammate Casey Quinn was lost for several weeks because of an ankle injury Coach Nicky Agnew: "She came up big for us when we really needed it"

Boys

Matt Tocchio - Senior
(Capt.)
Braintree



Stepped up in a big way this year as one of the state's best all-around performers... Consistently scored in the 50's throughout the year, a nice improvement from last year...Scored a 52.35 all-around in the state championship meet...Helped break the school record on the pommel horse during that meet with an 8.85 score...Earned first place in the all-around at the Salem Invitational with a 52...Also scored a 9.1 on the parallel bars...Will join teammates Dan Hwang and Adam Archila in Florida next month as representatives of the Massachusetts team in the national competition, one of only eight seniors in the state to earn that honor

Greg Ducach - Sophomore
Braintree

Stepped up in his second year of high school gymnastics as a solid performer for the now three-time state champions...Was a standout at the Salem Invitational, taking second place on the floor exercise (8.3) and third on the vault (8.6)...Also placed in the pommel horse at the state title meet to contribute to the record-breaking performance...With some practice in the offseason, Ducach should be a strong candidate to be an all-around athlete for Braintree next year

Honorable Mentions:

Molly Cook - Sr. (Capt.) - Braintree
Lisa Spirito - Jr. - Cohasset
Dan Hwang - Sr. - Braintree
Adam Archila - Sr. - Braintree
Joe Ponticelli - Fr. - Braintree

Cohasset junior Lisa Spirito is an honorable mention for the Mariner All-Scholastic gymnastics team.

Close call for girls tennis

FROM TENNIS, PAGE 17

Norwell captain. "Meg was so good at net, and her serves were awesome."

Stone said her doubles teammates compliment each other well on the court.

"They are a great team; they're just so confident together," she said. "I think they work well together because they have such different games."

The Cohasset senior was part of a match that many tennis fans were anticipating; a showdown with Norwell freshman Susan Bitetti. The first set went 6-0 in favor of Stone, but Bitetti kept her composure and took a 5-4 lead in the second set.

At that point, Stone says she was encouraged by head coach Gigi Meehan to "embrace the challenge," and she finished off the match with three straight games for a 6-0, 7-5 win.

Stone came away very impressed with her opponent.

"That is a hard position to be in [with everyone anticipating the match], and I thought she did really well," Stone said. "Susan is very mature for a freshman on the court; she has a lot of poise. It was fun to play her."

The Norwell/Cohasset rematch is set for May 12 at Milliken Field in Cohasset. Arena says the Clippers will take what they can from Tuesday's contest to prepare themselves for the rematch.

"I think we'll be more ready because now we really know what to expect," she said.

Cohasset traveled to Mashpee yesterday and to Ursuline today in a rematch of their only loss to date. Next week, the girls host Abington on Tuesday, travel to Carver Thursday and host Falmouth on Friday.

Norwell still on top in boys tennis

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

There had been some rumblings around the local high school boys tennis circuit that this could be the year Cohasset knocks Norwell off of its South Shore League perch.

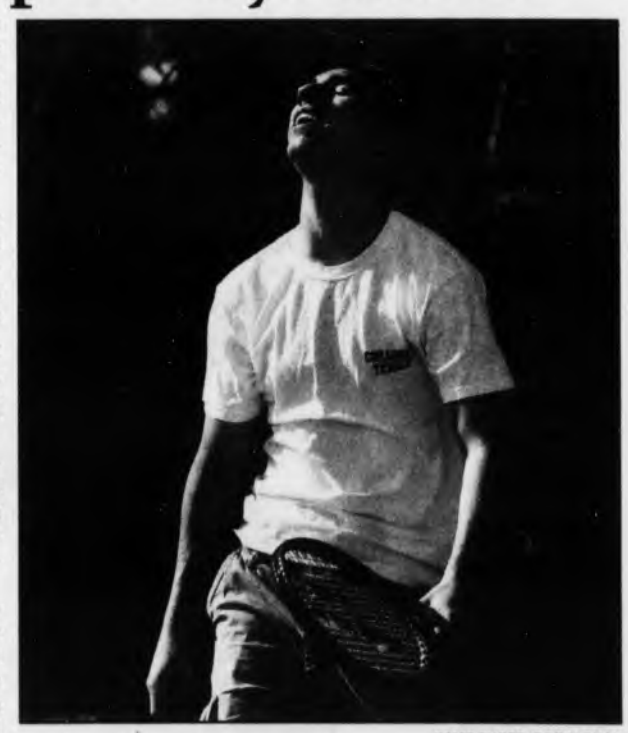
While there will be a rematch on May 12, Round One on Tuesday went the same way as all the others in the past decade: advantage Norwell.

The Clippers took on a somewhat undermanned Skippers team (missing two regulars) at Milliken Field in Cohasset and came away with a convincing 5-0 win.

Freshman Rob Ankner turned in a dominant performance at second singles, defeating Cohasset sophomore Blain Morin (who regularly plays third singles) 6-1, 6-1.

The Clippers also got impressive performances from both their doubles teams. In the first spot, Brett Cleaves and Gabe Weeks defeated the Cohasset duo of Brendan Michaud and Zack Murray, 6-0, 6-4. The set scores were reversed in second doubles, where Norwell's Andy Bogaty and Shamus Keohane were victorious over Chris Donze and Kyle Dattola.

Norwell coach Jay Swartz was clearly impressed with both doubles teams afterward.



"Brett's forehands were big in this match, and Gabe made some really important volleys," he said. "The second doubles team just took control of the net in the second set. They played more aggressively, and that made the difference."

One match that had both Swartz and Cohasset coach Kent Parrot raving was the third singles contest between Norwell junior Scott Kitchen and Cohasset freshman Ryan Crough. Kitchen won 7-5, 6-3, but Parrot was clearly pleased with how well Crough played against one of the area's best third singles players.

"Ryan has played mostly doubles this year, and he did a great job today," Parrot said. "He hung in there and was very, very competitive against a very good player."

The longest match of the day was at first singles between Norwell's Ryan Sweeney and Cohasset's Nils Sceery. After Sweeney won the first set 6-4, the second set went into a prolonged tiebreaker.

With both athletes amusing the crowd with their vocal self-motivation - and entertaining them with some great play - Sweeney made a couple big plays at net to come back from a 7-6 tiebreaker deficit to win it, 9-7.

It was that type of day for Cohasset number-one doubles player Brendan Michaud and the rest of the Skippers, as he looks skyward after committing an unforced error in their match against Norwell on Tuesday.

Swartz, who knows Cohasset will have some extra motivation for the rematch, said it was a great day of tennis all around.

"Cohasset is well-coached and they play hard. All of these matches were a pleasure to watch," he said.

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

U11 – Blue Team at Hingham

The Cohasset U11 Blue squad traveled to nearby rival Hingham for a post-vacation week match-up.

As with all Hingham games, the play was spirited and exciting. Cohasset got on the board first with Conor O'Brien scoring on a nice fastbreak feed from Christian Davis. Hingham responded with three scores of their own. Conor Green played strong in the Cohasset net, making a number of quality saves and keeping the score close, 3-1, at the half.

The second half saw more back and forth action with Cohasset's goaltender Brendan Queenan, and the Hingham keeper making a number of fine saves. O'Brien netted his second of the game on another fastbreak feed from Mark Brown.

Unfortunately for the Cohasset squad, Hingham had a little more in its tank and scored three more second half goals, making the final 6-2 Hingham.

U11 – White Team at Home against Bridgewater

Cohasset White had a break-out game against Bridgewater, with many of the newer players contributing at a high level.

In the first half, Max Montgomery made a great goal after rounding behind the crease. Ryan McGovern also scored early and was very aggressive at the crease throughout the game. Mark McKenna was aggressive at attack with a few strong shots.

Newcomer Henry Brown played aggressively in both defense and offense. Anthony Nahill was also quick thinking with a break to the crease, and a pass to Tommy Powers who scored a goal. Third grader Powers came back with a face-off to a fast break and a goal, and then scored again in the third quarter for three goals for the day.

Bridgewater was tough throughout the game with a strong face-off squad, and well executed plays to the crease. Nate Morse made his debut as goalie with a number of good saves while controlling the defense. Colin Whelan was also fast to ride a breaking Bridgewater with some aggressive defense across the midfield line.

The game would have been tied at the final, but Bridgewater capitalized on three face-offs, and the final score ended with Cohasset 6 and Bridgewater 9.

U13 - Blue Team at Hingham

The Cohasset U13 Blue team came away with a come-from-behind 7-3 win.

It was Hingham ahead 3-2 at halftime. In goal, Chris Murphy played a strong first half as he stopped nine shots and came out of the cage many times to disrupt Hingham.

In the second half, Chase Murphy shut out Hingham with six saves and intercepted many passes. The defense, which improved throughout the game, was led by Alex Kinnealy, Jack Nelson, Nate Brown, and Derek Froio.

The second half, which Cohasset won 5-0, saw three goals by Flibotte, another assist by Neaves and a goal by Christian Allard. Sam Richardson had an assist, and with Grasz brought the ball upfield many times from the middie position.

Other players who played more than one position to help on both offense and defense were Gus Helbock, Coleman Hernon, and Alex Evans.

U13 – Silver Team at Norwell

Cohasset and Norwell played a fantastic game on Sunday, with Norwell coming out on top, 12-11.

After a third quarter surge by Cohasset that was led by the dominant face-off play of Brendan Horrigan, Norwell capitalized on a number of Cohasset penalties to complete the fourth quarter comeback.

Cohasset received a strong offensive effort from Patrick MacCormack and Matt Swanborg. In the midst of the furious rally by Norwell, Cohasset was the beneficiary of gutsy performances by Adrian Dunn, Derek Froio, and Scott Wilson.

U15 – White Team at Home against Bridgewater

Cohasset shrugged off its vacation-week initial sloppiness, and put together a nice effort against a competitive visitor.

Cohasset got on the board early with a goal from Will Wise on a nice feed from Geoff Evans. The first quarter continued with unassisted goals coming from John Kearney and Thomas Lemaire, with the visitors netting two of their own.

The second quarter was evenly played as both teams had good play at both ends of the field. Kearney scored his second of the day with an assist to John McKenna, and Bridgewater added two more bringing the score even 4-4 at the half.

The second half saw more back and forth action with Cohasset's goaltender, Wes Ulmer, and the Bridgewater keeper making a number of quality saves. Bridgewater ended the third quarter up 6-5, with Cohasset's only score coming on Wise's second of the game.

Cohasset owned the fourth quarter, with scores coming from McKenna and Danny Brady. Cohasset ended the day on top 7-6.

U15 – Blue Team at Hingham

The rain held off and the field was in excellent shape for a lacrosse match.

Cohasset's transition game was on, but they were prevented from converting shots as Hingham jumped to a 4-0 lead in the first quarter. The Blue continued to play hard but were down 7-2 at the half.

After a quick strategy session at half time, Cohasset pounced on Hingham in the third quarter taking them by five goals to one. Down just 8-7 starting the fourth quarter, and despite excellent goaltending, we couldn't hold on as Hingham posted a 12-8 win.

At the attack position, Dean Driscoll netted one goal while Conor Queenan and Max Shipp put up one and three assists respectively. At the middie position, Logan Chase and David Toomey each had one goal. Charles Mushin assisted once.

Andrew Smith had one goal and three assists, and Andrew DiPaolo had four goals and one assist. Cohasset was six players down due to school vacation, but look to make a strong comeback at home Sunday against Abington.

Girls youth lacrosse wins four of five on April 24

Cohasset's girls youth lacrosse teams – hurt by vacation absences – merged forces to host five home games on Sunday, April 24, and came away with four impressive victories and one loss in a long day under shifting weather conditions.

Instead of playing in its standard Blue and White teams, the girls played combined teams, which had some of the 13-and-Under players running through three full games in the span of six hours.

The most impressive performances of the day were from the 15-and-Under girls (grades 7 and 8), who not only remained unbeaten, but who continued a string of total domination. The teams from Falmouth and Marshfield facing Cohasset's oldest girls learned why the locals have now outscored their opponents by a combined total of 86-16 this year.

Gabriella Flibotte scored twice in the two minutes against Falmouth, her second goal converting a feed from Lesen Haracz. Falmouth answered with a score before Kaley Madge and Chelsea Silvia scored two more to bring the lead to 4-1; Cohasset dominated the rest of the half, but missed on its scoring opportunities so that it only had a three-goal lead at the break.

The second half was all Cohasset, with Flibotte scoring two more and feeding Madge for her second of the game. Amy Meikleham, Lindsey Allard and Silvia had solo markers and Olivia Sullivan converted a direct-free position, as Cohasset scored seven unanswered goals before Falmouth snuck in a score in the final minute to make the final 11-2.

Thomson Jaffe made three saves in the Cohasset net, and the defense of Natalie Hunt, Liz Tetrault, Mimi Mahoney, Lindsey Hill, Lauren Blaze and Kate O'Callaghan never allowed Falmouth to get momentum going.

Following the Falmouth game, the Cohasset girls turned right around to play Marshfield, and simply continued the barrage that had started in the second half of the first game. Flibotte scored four first-half goals, Madeline Leahy scored twice, Allard notched a goal and an assist, and Meikleham, Isabelle Franklin and Paige Smith had solo markers as Cohasset raced to a 10-2 halftime lead.

The locals slowed things down to play more ball-control in the second half. Hill, Hannah Burgess and Grace Clougherty all scored their first goals of the season, and Silvia added a solo goal to go with an assist she picked up on the very first shift of the game, as Cohasset closed out a 14-5 win.

Thomson Jaffe stopped five Marshfield shots in the win.

At the 13-and-Under level (grades 5 and 6), Cohasset split two games against Falmouth teams, and dominated Marshfield.

Against Falmouth 1, Cohasset controlled the action early, but spent much of the first half being frustrated by the visiting goalie. Ultimately, the teams got in a two-to-one rhythm, with Anna Michalowski and Lindsay MacNaught scores being answered by a Falmouth goal, before Hope Kissick and Merrick Sease scored, only to be answered by Falmouth as the game went to the half at 4-2.

MacNaught took over the early portion of the second half, scoring a natural hat trick on three consecutive drives from behind the goal. From there, Falmouth scored twice, before Scarlett MacQuade fed Kissick to give Cohasset a two-goal cushion heading into the last two minutes of the game.

Falmouth snuck in a late score, but couldn't get any closer, as the game finished 8-7.

Whitney Jaffe and Michalowski combined to make five saves in the contest.

It was a different story when the team played its second game of the day against Falmouth 2.

The visitors jumped out to a 4-0 lead, and while Kissick scored three times to bring the home team back, the rest of the game belonged to Falmouth, which stretched a 5-3 halftime lead to a 9-4 final. Danielle Healy scored Cohasset's second half goal on a direct-free position, and Michalowski – who saw more rubber than a referee at a dodge ball tournament – stopped nine shots to keep the game respectable.

Luckily, the squad had the chance to bounce back at day's end against Marshfield and, after a slow start caused by poor shooting, that's precisely what happened.

Madeline Manning and Kaci Kucinski sandwiched two scores by Kissick, and Cohasset got to the half with a 4-1 lead.

Cohasset solved its shooting issues in the second half, and blew things open to complete a 12-2 win. Kucinski scored two more goals, MacNaught scored twice, and Olivia Murphy, Whitney Jaffe, Alison Whelan and Healy had solo scores en route to the win.

Michalowski and Bridget Cahill split the goaltending, and the defense of Eliza Kinnealey, Dylanne Axelson and Taylor Kennedy turned Marshfield mistakes into Cohasset scoring opportunities throughout the contest.

On Sunday, April 17, the Cohasset 15-and-Under girls played Billerica at Nickerson Field on the campus of Boston University, prior to "senior day" for the highly ranked Terriers women's team.

Lindsey Allard opened the scoring herself, then fed Franklin as Cohasset jumped out to a 2-0 lead. Franklin fed Gabriella Flibotte to answer a Billerica score on a direct-free position, and Burgess fed Kaley Madge to increase the lead to 4-1. Leahy answered another Billerica score as the teams went to the half with Cohasset ahead 5-2.

Billerica converted two direct-free position shots after Cohasset penalties to close to within one early in the second half, but Allard, Amy Meikleham and a Flibotte-to-Maura-Barnes-to Flibotte give-and-go salted the game away and let the Cohasset girls adjourn to watch the Terriers game, eat some pizza and enjoy the day.

Cohasset's girls return to the field on May 1 in Hingham.

Lax teams on winning note

FROM LAX, PAGE 17

undefeated Norwell yesterday. Tomorrow, they will host Plymouth North-South (6 p.m. start).

Games next week at Notre Dame (Monday) and at home against Marshfield (Tuesday) give Cohasset (2-3-1 heading into yesterday's Norwell game) a good chance to be in contention for a postseason berth after that stretch of games is over.

"If we play well, we have a chance to get back to .500," Sweeney said. "Our goal is still to make the tournament."

On the boys side of things, head coach Stu Curran knew his team was facing a challenge when they hosted Holliston last Saturday morning. The Skippers got off to a great start right on the opening face-off, however, as freshman Mike Grimm continued his excellent play of late with a goal 15 seconds into the game.

The Skippers did not look back from there. Despite facing a stingy defense that consistently doubled their two leading scorers, Jake Previte and Aidan Buick, Cohasset played some great defense of their own for the win.

Goalie Chris Simms, whom Curran says has been playing better and better each week, made 14 saves on the day. That, combined with how well Cohasset rode their Holliston opponents, were the key factors to the victory.

"How we rode that Holliston team may have made the difference," Curran said. "It's a lot like rebounding in basketball; you have to want it more than the other team. If you do it well, you can win a game because of it."

Cohasset improved their record to 4-3 overall with Monday's win over Martha's Vineyard. The defense of seniors Crandon Leahy and Casey Coleman helped lead the team to victory over another good team.

Coleman, in particular, drew Curran's praise for his efforts on Vineyard star Ed Parsanese, a player that the Cohasset coach says would be good enough to start for Duxbury. Kevin Dinsmore also contributed well to the defensive effort.

Leahy also scored a big goal in the fourth quarter to put his team ahead, 12-11.

The rest of that period belonged to senior middie Joe Durkin, who scored all four of his goals in the frame, including a couple in the last few minutes to ice it.

Cohasset also got solid play from the Grimm brothers, Jon (two goals) and Mike (one goal, two assists).

"They really have a good sense of where the other one is going to be on the field," Curran said. "They have a lot of subtle looks, and suddenly one of them has the ball right in front of the net."

Mike Grimm is part of a group of freshmen, including Peter Ernst, Mark Flibotte and Chuck Czerkawski that has Curran excited for now and for the future of the program.

The boys were scheduled to host Norwell yesterday and Plymouth North-South tomorrow. After traveling to Marshfield on Tuesday, the Skippers face a huge test at home against Hingham on Thursday, May 5 (6 p.m. start).

SPORTS NOTES

New American Red Cross Learn-to-Swim Program offered at Cohasset Swim Center

This new Swim Program provides instruction to help swimmers of all ages and abilities develop their swimming and water safety skills. It is designed to give students a positive learning experience.

Learn-to-Swim teaches aquatic and safety skills in a logical progression. The objective is to teach people to swim and to be safe in, on and around the water.

The six learn-to-swim levels and the objectives for each level include:

Level 1 - Introduction to Water Skills: helps students feel comfortable in the water and to enjoy the water safely.

Level 2 - Fundamental Aquatic Skills: gives students success with fundamental skills.

Level 3 - Stroke Development: builds on the skills in Level 2 by providing additional guided practice.

Level 4 - Stroke Improvement: develops confidence in the strokes learned and to improve other aquatic skills.

Level 5 - Stroke Refinement: provides further coordination and refinement of strokes.

Level 6 - Swimming and Skill Proficiency: refines the strokes so students swim them with ease, efficiency, power and smoothness over greater distances. Level 6 is designed with "menu" options. Each of these options focus on preparing students to participate in more advance courses, such as Water Safety Instructor and Lifeguard Training.

These options include:

≠ Lifeguard Readiness
≠ Fitness Swimming

Learn-to-Swim is the most comprehensive and effective program of its kind available anywhere.

More detailed information can be found in the Cohasset Swim Center brochure along with the registration forms which should be arriving by mail the first week in May. Swim Lessons will be offered in three Two-Week Sessions. Session I: July 11 - July 22, Session II: July 25 - August 5 and Session III: August 8 - August 19.

Cohasset cheerleading clinic scheduled

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the 3 day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee for this unique opportunity essential to anyone who plans to join the cheerleading squad, for either Fall or Winter sports, is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Cohasset Recreation Department offers U.S.C.G.A. Boating Safety Course

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a 2-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. U.S.C.G.A. instructors will teach the 2-session course, which will be held on 2 consecutive Saturdays, May 14, and May 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 781-383-4109, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on first call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Evan's Run set for May 22

The 5th Annual Evan's Run has been scheduled for Sunday, May 22 at 10:30 a.m. at Norwell High School.

The race, which offers a 5K run and walk and a 10K run, is named in honor of Evan Henry, a Norwell native who passed away in July of 2000 at the age of 11.

Evan was autistic, and the Henry family decided soon after his passing to set up a foundation that raises funds for organizations that help autistic children like Evan. Thus, the Evan Henry Foundation was born.

The first Evan's Run had great numbers, but attendance and participation has waned in the last three years. The Foundation has organized quite an event this year, including live entertainment from the Jon Frattasio Band. There will be a bandstand set up at the high school, where the race begins and ends, and the entertainment is scheduled for 8 a.m. to noon.

A post-race party has also been planned, and will be held at McGreal's Tavern in Norwell Center. Festivities there are set to begin around 1 p.m.

Cost to register for the race is $20 ($10 for the various children's races that have also been set up), with proceeds going to the Evan Henry foundation. If you just want to watch the race and enjoy the music, that is totally free of charge.

For more information about the race, or to register, go to the Foundation's website, www.evanhenry.org, or call the race hotline at 617-347-2068.

South Shore senior softball league

Turning point on the diamond

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Up 11-10, the Cohasset baseball team was four outs away from a huge league win against Norwell on Tuesday.

Until, that is, the Clippers' Patrick Laffin and Brian White changed the game.

Laffin, a freshman shortstop, came up to the plate with two outs and no one on in the top of the 6th and belted a solo homer to tie the game at 11.

White, who had taken the mound in relief of Andrew Aizenstadt in the second, came out in the bottom of the 6th and struck out the side on nine pitches.

The Clippers then scored five runs in the top of the 7th, and came away with a 16-13 win.

Norwell head coach Tom Jacobs said the momentum clearly changed in favor of his team in that 6th inning.

"After White struck out the side, the team sprinted off the field. There was a lot of enthusiasm," he said. "We were four outs away from defeat, but after Laffin's homer and the pitching, we knew we had a good shot at winning."

Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta was left to ponder what could have been a statement-making win.

"We just seemed to have some mental breakdowns that hurt us badly," he said. "I feel it was a matter of us going into the last inning against a good team that knows how to win. When the chips are down, teams that win like they do find a way to win those games."

Laffin was 3-for-4 on the day - including the homer, a triple and a single - and knocked in four runs. White pitched 5 1/3 innings to get the win.

In the 7th, a double by Dave Liffers, a single from Matt Greenberg and a walk by Aizenstadt keyed a five-run rally. Cohasset got a couple runs in the bottom of the frame, but White held on to preserve the victory.

Senior catcher Luis Blanco was one of the stars of the day offensively for Cohasset, hitting a single and a double and knocking in three runs. Tim Pilczak and Teddie Straughn each had two hits, as did leadoff hitter Chris Ofsthun, who scored four runs.

For Norwell, Greenberg had himself a day at the plate, smacking a three-run homer in the first to go with the 7th-inning RBI single and three walks. Liffers, White and Greg Thornton all had two hits each.

The game got off to a wild start, as neither team's pitcher - Aizenstadt and Cohasset's Chris Bryan - was on top of his game. The Clippers were up 3-0 after three batters, as both Thornton and right fielder Gerry Good got on base for Greenberg. The senior catcher's homer was his first of the year.

A Laffin RBI single, plating White, gave Norwell a 4-spot in the first inning.

The Skippers came right back with two in the bottom of the inning. Ofsthun and Pilczak set the table with a walk and single, respectively. Straughn, starting at third base on the day, smacked an RBI single to center to score Ofsthun.

Aizenstadt then hit Blanco, and the bases were loaded with nobody out. The Norwell hurler battled from there, getting the next two batters out without giving up a run. With two outs, however, the Skippers' Nick Zappolo legged out an infield hit to make the game 4-2.

After Bryan held Norwell scoreless in the top of the second, the Skippers got five in the bottom of the inning. They took advantage of five walks, a single by junior Stefan Parnell and a sacrifice fly from Jim DeGiacomo to take a 7-4 lead.

The Clippers got a couple runs back in the top of the third, capped off by an RBI single from Aizenstadt. The back-and-forth action, needless to say, continued from there.

One thing that did not help the Skippers was their defense (six errors). That was part of the reason Bryan threw 108 pitches in four innings, something Gallotta knows is going to have to change if the Skippers are going to turn things around.

"We give opponents far too many outs," said the coach. "He may have only pitched four innings, but [Bryan] essentially pitched a whole ballgame because we gave them four or five outs in an inning."

Gallotta says his team is playing "marginally in all capacities" of the game, and that the pitching, hitting and defense all have to improve.

The Skippers (2-5, 1-5 in the league at press time), got their first shot at redemption yesterday - weather permitting - at home against Mashpee. The Falcons defeated Cohasset, 6-5 ,in the team's season opener. Next week Cohasset travels to Abington on May 3 and hosts Carver on May 5.

Norwell improved to 5-4 overall with the win, 5-1 in the South Shore League.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

REGAL EAGLE

Chris Collier, an educator with the Vermont Institute of Natural Science, shows a golden eagle to kindergartners during a special outreach program recently at the Osgood School. The program "Raptor Encounter" provided a great introduction for the students to eagles and owls. Touchable artifacts and hands-on materials rounded out this special experience. The program was sponsored by the PSO.

Recovering addicts speak at Middle School

Dr. P.S. Kishore, president and founder of the National Library of Addictions (NLA) and NLA "ambassadors", recovering addicts who recently graduated from high school, will share information with the seventh graders and their parents of Cohasset Middle School regarding the harmful effects of drug use and abuse.

The event will be held on Wednesday, May 4 from 9:30-11:15 a.m. at the Cohasset Middle School. NLA Ambassadors will speak about how they got addicted and how they managed to begin and continue recovery treatment. There will be time for questions.

For parents only: PAC meets Tuesday

On May 3 the Parent Advisory Council will hold a "Parents Only Meeting" at The Osgood School Library, promptly at 7:30 p.m.

This is an opportunity for parents to discuss with the PAC Board any issues, concerns and positive information that they would like to share regarding the school district. The PAC Board would like as much feedback regarding what your needs are in order to take steps in planning for next year.

Mark your calendars for June 7: Parent Advisory Council last 2004-2005 meeting to be announced.

Seventh-grade spring summit

The Cohasset School Department and Project Safeguard announce that the 2005 Spring Summit for Seventh-Graders and their parents will be held Wednesday, May 4 in the Middle-High School Auditorium from 7:50-11:50 a.m.

Results of a recent survey of Cohasset Middle School students examining student pressure and risky behavior will be addressed by health care professionals. Motivational speakers, health professionals, educators and special drug ambassadors will present at this event. The day will also include role-playing and workgroup sessions to help students and parents gain hands-on experience in addressing current pressures. Valuable, practical information will be provided to both students and parents to help support our students in making productive and healthy choices in their lives.

For more information about the event, contact Nancy Oddleifson, at fiveodds@aol.com; or Sheila Toomey at toomey6@comcast.net.

Summer art camp

Students going into grades 1–4 can enjoy creative summer afternoons in the South Shore Art Center's popular summer art camps. The Art Center's summer Art Afternoons will be offered for six weeks beginning in July. Each week will have a different theme including: Oceans, South of the Border, Eric Carle, Egypt, Masks and Puppets and All About Me. The themes will help form the fun as students explore, create and investigate art in a variety of mediums including clay, drawing, painting, printmaking, collage, and sculpture.

There will be both group and individual projects in a fun, supportive, and air-conditioned environment and kids will take a break with a mid-afternoon snack. Children who have previously taken Art Afternoons at the Art Center are welcomed back for new artistic explorations! Art Weeks meet Monday through Friday, 12:30-3:30 and the cost is $155 ($140 for SSAC members) and are broken down in the following ways: July 11–July 15 Oceans; July 18–July 22 Eric Carle; July 25–July 29 South of the Border; Aug. 1–5 Egypt; Aug. 8– 12 Masks & Puppets; August 15–19 All About Me.

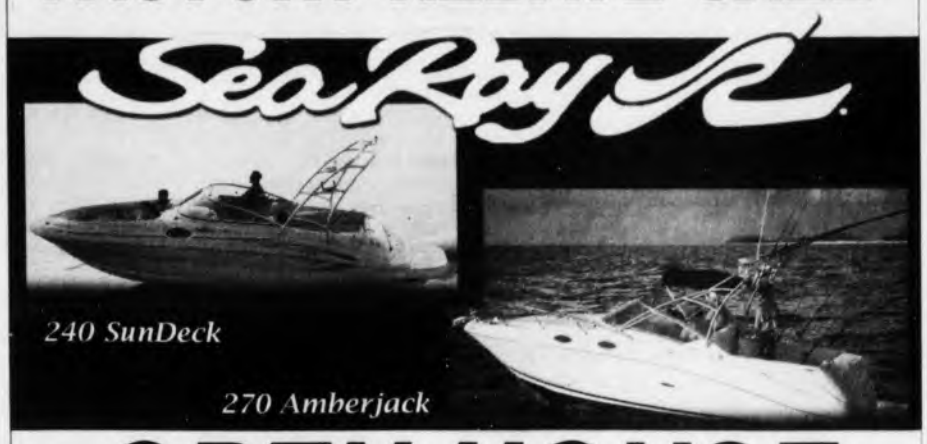
Author to discuss 'The Pressured Child'

South Shore Hospital's Adolescent Suicide Prevention Project will present its annual community education program on Monday, May 9, from 7 to 9 p.m. at Hingham Middle School, 1103 Main St., Hingham.

"An Evening with Michael Thompson, PhD" will feature the psychologist and author discussing his latest book, The Pressured Child: Helping Your Child Achieve Success in School and in Life. He is also the author of the New York Times bestseller Raising Cain: Protecting the Emotional Life of Boys. Dr. Thompson is the clinical consultant to the Belmont Hill School and has worked in more than 250 schools in the United States as well as in Central America, Europe, and Asia. The program is being funded through a grant from the Sean McDonough Charitable Foundation and is being offered to the community free of charge.

Since its creation in 1995, Adolescent Suicide Prevention Project's curriculum-based programs have been implemented in more than two dozen public, private, and parochial schools throughout the region and have trained more than 2,000 educators, parents, and students themselves to identify and appropriately respond to "at risk" behaviors which can be early indicators for suicide. Its mission is to prevent adolescent suicide through early intervention and educational outreach through collaboration among school and law enforcement personnel and medical and clinical representatives of South Shore Hospital.



Registration open for Summer Arts at Derby

Applications are now available for Summer Arts at Derby 2005 at Derby Academy in Hingham. Dates of the program are June 27 to July 29. Summer Arts is a five-week comprehensive arts program for students, ages eight to 15, that serves students from over 25 Massachusetts communities.

Students at Summer Arts select their own schedules from over one hundred courses. Classes are taught by professional artists and include offerings in visual arts, drama, dance, music, sports, gymnastics, writing, media, and photography. There is a full-scale musical production and a daily newspaper. The program culminates with an Arts Festival at which students demonstrate and share their talents through theatre, gymnastics, music, and dance. There will also be exhibits of pottery, painting, photography, 3-D art, and sewing projects. Original film and video projects will be shown.

Don't miss out on a creative and dynamic summer. For brochures and more information about Summer Arts, call 781-740-4766.

Water main flushing starts

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur and residents are advised not to wash clothes during flushing.

The Water Department will perform its semi-annual flushing of water mains through May 31. Flushing will generally take place Monday through Thursday between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. In general, the flushing program will be conducted according to the sequence indicated below:

- King Street and Beechwood Street Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Scituate line and Brewster Road Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Hingham Lumber and Sohier Street Area;
- Lower King Street, Cedar Street, Forest Avenue and North Main Street to Ripley Road Areas;
- Pond Street, Clay Spring Road, Pleasant Street and Hillside Areas;
- Ripley Road, Highland Avenue, Beach Street, Elm Street and Atlantic Avenue Areas;
- Border Street, Summer Street and South Main Street Areas;
- Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road and Linden Drive Areas.

Temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the cable channel for schedule changes.

During the flushing program, some temporary discoloration of the water may occur and residents are advised not to wash clothes during flushing. If your water is discolored, run the cold water faucet, preferably outside, for a short time until the discoloration clears and avoid using hot water until you flush your hot water tank by opening the valve at the bottom of the tank. If clothing becomes stained it can be cleaned by using "Iron Out", which is available free from the Water Department.

Please call the Water Department at (781) 383-0057 with any questions.

IT'S HAPPENING

Plant sale is May 7

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its plant sale with Mothers' Day in mind. The sale will be held on Saturday, May 7 in Ship Cove Park on South Main St. in Cohasset Village from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Shoppers may choose from professionally designed pre-planted inserts that will provide instant color solutions for winter-weary porch containers and window boxes. Experienced gardeners will be on hand to offer advice and take orders for custom container plantings.

Hard-to-find perennials and favorite plants from club members' gardens will delight eager gardeners. Talented flower arrangers will provide cut flowers, fresh arrangements, and small bouquets specially designed for children to present on Mothers' Day.

The sale will offer pre-planted inserts that can be dropped into the buyer's own porch containers, window boxes or urns.

Proceeds from the plant sale will support the Community Garden Club's educational and landscaping projects in Cohasset.

Car wash to benefit CHS Baseball program

With spring finally upon us, it is ideal driving weather and the perfect time to rid your car of the grit and grime accumulated from all those winter storms. The Diamond Club, the Cohasset baseball boosters organization is sponsoring a Spring car wash on Saturday, April 30 at the Coastal Nissan on Route 3A.

CHS Varsity and JV baseball team members will be on hand to scrub and wash your car and welcome your donations to help support our team.

Oarswomen and oarsmen!

Your help down at the boathouse off Parker Avenue is needed Saturday (April 30). think of it as a work day with a lot of reward. Volunteers will get started at 9 a.m. and work until 1 p.m. anyway and then try and get a couple of fours out on the water for some rowing.

Thanks to the crew known as "Old Men and the Sea" the boat house was cleaned up, trash removed, and organized last weekend. Now it is time for all the other rowers to pitch in and help.

Here's what can be accomplish this Saturday with your help:

- Fix up the Alden racks and bring the Alden's down from the Loft
- Pick up loose trash and old boards from the yard around the boathouse, right down to the creek
- Repair several broken windows
- Inventory what's up in the Loft and take the unusable stuff to the dump
- Scrape and paint the red and blue Gloucester Gull dories
- Rebuild the boat dolly and maybe build a second one
- Take the old, rusted dolly to the dump

ASP holds yard sale

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be holding a Yard Sale/Flea Market/Craft fair fundraiser on April 30 (rain date May 7) between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the Super Stop & Shop parking lot on Route 3A in Cohasset. Fun for the whole family, including face painting, food and lots of interesting items to peruse.

HSO Pops season finale is April 30

Hingham Symphony Orchestra presents its fun and festive season finale Pops concert on Saturday, April 30 at 8 p.m. at F1 in Braintree, the upscale kart-racing and corporate team-building facility just off the highway on Wood Rd. The Pops combines a high-energy venue with lively music and entertaining extras, all to wrap up the HSO concert season.

The program, with Jin Kim conducting, features Leonard Bernstein's Symphonic Dances from "West Side Story" and the Overture to "Candide," John Williams' Star Wars Suite, and Sousa's rousing march, Stars and Stripes Forever.

The audience is seated at tables of 4 to 8, and may purchase from a variety of wines contributed by Gourmet Wine Importers and small plates of sweet or savory treats provided by the chefs at F1's acclaimed Ascari Café.

There will be several exciting opportunities to win something fun, all to benefit the HSO. In an annual moment not to be missed, one fortunate high-bidder will conduct the HSO on the spot in Stars and Stripes Forever, after a three-minute coaching session from Jin Kim.

Tickets are available in advance at Hingham Public Library, La Petite Maison and Noble's in Hingham Square, Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Book Store in Scituate, Marsh's Liquors in Norwell, or call HSO at 781-740-5694. You may also order tix online at www.hinghamsymphony.org. Adult $30, senior $20 and youth through age 18 is $10. Please call HSO to reserve a table in your name.

Yard sale benefit

On Saturday, April 30 is the fourth annual yard sale to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship Fund, sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee. 27 Hill St. 8 a.m. to noon. (Rain Date: May 7)

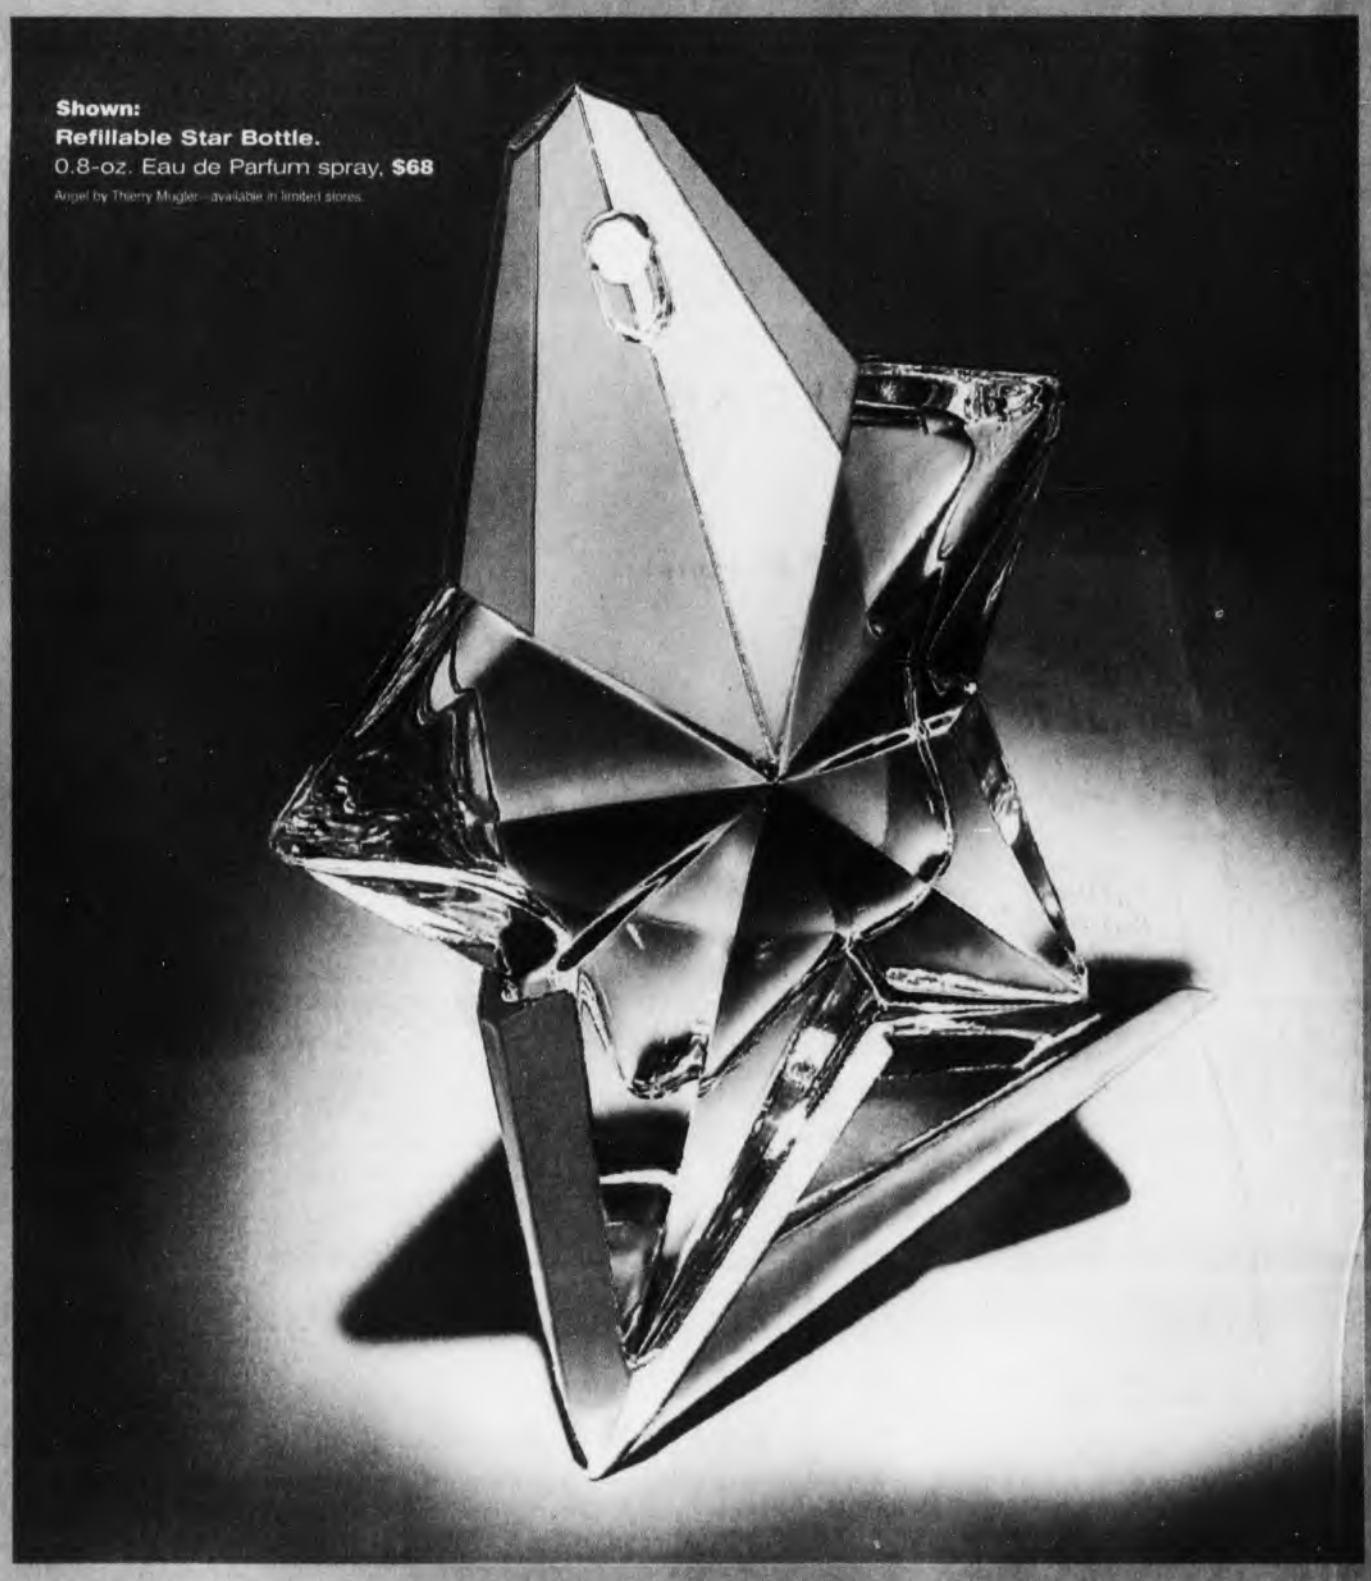
'Annie' comes to town

The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents the world's best loved musical, Annie, at the Cohasset Town hall on May 6, 7, 13, 14, 20 and 21 at 7:30 p.m. and May 8, 15 and 22 at 2 p.m. Join Annie, the spunky depression-era orphan determined to find the parents who abandoned her years before on the steps of a NY city orphanage run by the cruel Miss Hannigan. In adventure after adventure, Annie foils Miss Hannigan's evil machinations, befriends president Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and finds a new home with billionaire Oliver (Daddy) Warbucks, his personal secretary Grace Farrell and a lovable mutt named Sandy. An Annie Look-Alike contest will be held at all three Sunday matinees. Come dressed as Annie and enter to win exciting prizes.

Tickets are $12 each and can be purchased at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Book Shop in Scituate, at the door, or by calling 617-697-2115. Girl Scout troops receive a $2 discount per ticket when purchased by phone. Contact Susan Jaffe at 781-383-9858.

Lifesaving Museum 'Lifebuoy' exhibit

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is hosting the opening reception of our newest exhibit "Lifebuoy Saves Lives" on Friday, April 29 at 7 p.m. at the Point Allerton Life-Saving Station located at 1117 Nantasket Ave. in Hull.



This exhibit highlights the Lever Brother's advertisements of the late 1800s and early 1900s that featured images of heroic coastal lifesavers beside exhortations about new ideas of hygiene and sanitation. The remarkable, early images compare the battle for household sanitation with the drama of rescue on stormy seas while, by the 1930s, the ad campaigns focused on the egregious social faux pas of "B.O." The exhibit will examine 19th and 20th century public health and gender roles, the rise of advertising in popular culture, British "utopian" factory towns, and the life of Lord Leverhulme, the grocer's son who created a business empire.

Admission to the opening reception is $20 for members, $25 for non-members and includes hors d'oeuvres, wine and pastries. For more information about this exhibit, please contact the Hull Lifesaving Museum at 781-925-5433, or email us at lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net or visit our web site www.lifesavingmuseum.org

The "Lifebuoy Saves Lives" exhibit is opening at the Hull Lifesaving Museum.

GIMME SHELTER

Derrick

My name is Derrick and I was rescued last year from the cold winter by some great humans. I am a one-year-old black, shorthaired cat who is very playful, sleek, smooth, shiny, and almost looks part Siamese. I love to play with other cats and would adapt well to any family.

All Hull Seaside Animal Rescue pets have been tested, vaccinated and spayed/neutered. Hull Seaside has lots of other great pets needing loving homes and are always looking for foster homes. If you'd like to meet our pets or volunteer your services, please call toll-free at 1-877-378-1195 or visit: www.hsar.org to learn more

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a 501(3)c non-profit organization staffed entirely by volunteers.

Casino Night at Atlantica tonight!

Call a couple of friends and come on down to Atlantica tonight (Friday, April 29)for a great evening! Don't wait till Memorial Day weekend to get a start on the 'summer'. With only a $15 ticket admission bought at the door at you'll be in "Oceans 44" (Oceans 11 & 12 filmed in Las Vegas - Atlantica is at 44 Border Street). Roulette, Blackjack, Poker, Money Wheel and some Texas Hold'Em Tournaments will all be rolling from 8 pm to 11:30. Some wonderful finger food, great lounge music in the background and the water view from Atlantica will make this a beautiful evening. The Cohasset Lacrosse Club is hosting the evening and is looking forward to seeing many Cohasset residents — absolutely no lacrosse knowledge needed!

The Lacrosse Club committed to provide the necessary support, $8,500, for the JV lacrosse student athletic program at the high school. The school budget supports the Varsity program only. With the growth of lacrosse for boys and girls (over 260 in the youth boys and girls programs) and with local lax student athletes playing at the college level - Division 1 -3, the Lax Club really hopes to keep the JV program going.

The costs incurred for J.V. are for coaches, travel and referees. The athletic department has scheduled approximately 10 games each for both the boys and girls J.V. squads. Last year's J.V. program funded by many "Friends of Cohasset Lacrosse" was a great success and enabled all of our players to get real game playing time and continue to improve their skills. Check out the Cohasset Lacrosse web site www.cohassetlacrosse.com for the High School and Youth game schedules and catch a game.

Tonight there's going to be professional dealers for you experienced players and some very fun 'known' dealers to help you learn a game and have a laugh with friends and family. The Texas Hold'Em Tournament tables will be active and if you'd like to sign up for the early tables just send an email to info@cohassetlacrosse.com or call 781-383-2579 and let them know you're in for the 8 o'clock or 8:30 start! The Club Board encourages you to come with your 'Casino' name "Oklahoma Johnny", "Amarillo Slim", "Miami John", "Daytona Tony", "Pocket Rockets" "Moneymaker" or "Joanie Jett", Peppermint Patty, Shady Sadie, Hit Man Pam, to name only a few. If you've got an Elvis impersonation ready to debut, just contact the Lacrosse Club.

OBITUARY

Brian W. Marsden

Raised in Cohasset

Brian W. Marsden, age 54, a real estate executive and tennis player, died Wednesday morning, April 20, 2005 at his home following a long illness.

Born in Hingham, he was the son of the late William H. and Marie (Fitzgerald) Marsden. He grew up in Cohasset and attended Wilbraham Academy and graduated in 1973 from Franklin Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa.

At college, he established himself as a dominant force on the tennis court with three victories at the Middle-Atlantic Conference Championships. Thereafter, he achieved the number one tennis ranking in New England and a top ten spot nationally. He was captain of Team Talbot and was twice victorious at the Bermuda Open.

A member of the Cohasset Golf Club, Mr. Marsden was a board of director and former president of the Hingham Tennis Club, or what he called his "tennis heaven." His proudest moment of his tennis career occurred in July 2002 when he and son Brian, Jr. finished fourth in the National Grass Court Father-Son Championships at Longwood Cricket Club in Chestnut Hill. He was recognized by the USA Tennis-New England Association for his lifelong commitment to tennis, both as a player and instructor.

His business career began in Boston and included Hines' Interests and the First Winthrop Corporation. In 1994, he joined the D.L. Saunders Companies in Boston and was its vice president. Highlights include leasing transactions for Todd English's "Bonfire," McCormick and Schmick's" seafood restaurant, and brought "Smith and Wollensky's Steakhouse" to the Park Square Castle building in Boston.

He leaves his devoted wife, Mary (Zakas) Marsden, his cherished children, Brian, Jr. and Trevor, all of Hingham; his loving sister and brother, Ellen Marsden-Gilman and William H. Marsden, both of Cohasset; several nieces and nephews; and he will be lovingly remembered by his lifelong fraternity brothers, "The Sacred Six."

A Mass of Christian Burial was celebrated at Resurrection Church in Hingham on April 23.

Brian W. Marsden

Interment was in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

Funeral arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Cohasset.

Donations may be made in Brian Marsden's memory to the inner-city tennis program: Tenacity, 1266 Soldier's Field Road, Brighton 02135 (www.tenacity.org); and/or to The Hospice of the South Shore, 100 Bay State Drive, Braintree 02185.

Edith B. Quigley

Member of Second Congregational Church

Edith Belle (Whitcomb) Cavanagh Quigley, 90, formerly a long-time resident of Cohasset, died April 19, 2005, peacefully at the home of her daughter in Old Lyme, Conn.

Born on March 2, 1915 in Jamaica Plain to Paul and Angelina (Houghton) Whitcomb. Following the death of her mother, she and her late brother Houghton Whitcomb were raised by their grandparents, Willard Henry Stevens and Edith Belle (Wincell) Whitcomb Stevens in Brookline.

She married Charles Cavanagh in 1942 in Brookline. He died in 1951.

She leaves a daughter, Charlotte (Cavanagh) Quigley. Her sons, Richard Cavanagh and Willard Henry Stevens Cavanagh predeceased her. She also leaves six grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. She married Thomas Quigley in 1982 in Cohasset. He died in 2002.

In Cohasset, she was an active member of the Second Congregational Church, the Mayflower Society, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Historical Society, the Massachusetts Sumi Society and the South Shore Art Center. She enjoyed playing tennis, painting and participating in Power Squadron events. In later years, she also lived in Palm City, Fla., where she was active in the local art association, garden club and Power Squadron.

A memorial service is planned at the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset at a later date. She will be buried at the Walnut Hills Cemetery in Brookline.

Hedlund hosts seminar on stem cell research

The stem cell research bill invoked a significant amount of feedback from members of the South Shore community because of the moral implications the issue raises. In response to the many phone calls, letters, and e-mails received by his office, Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, R-Weymouth, has scheduled a forum on stem cell research for his constituents, where he will discuss the consequences of the legislation.

The forum will be held Tuesday, May 3, at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium at Hingham Town Hall, 210 Central St.

Stem cell research is one of the most complex and technically challenging pieces of legislation that has been debated in Massachusetts in recent years. The details of the science involved, and questions of the ethical nature of stem cell research have been at the heart of the contention and confusion of this practice.

In an effort to inform and educate the community on the last result the stem cell research legislation will have, Hedlund asked Sen. Bruce Tarr from Gloucester to serve as a guest speaker for the event. Tarr is co-author of the Senate Stem Cell Research bill 2028 and is a leading expert on the issue in the Massachusetts Legislature. Tarr's knowledge and experience assisted many in the Senate debates as he answered a number of questions on stem cell research, its proposed benefits, and the procedure involved.

"I welcome and encourage community leaders, constituents, friends and media to take advantage of this seminar and learn more about this historic and critical issue facing the commonwealth," Hedlund said.

For more information about the forum, call Hedlund's office at (617) 722-1646.

BUSINESS NOTES

Neal Finnegan

Neal Finnegan to be honored

Operation A.B.L.E. (Ability Based on Long Experience) of Greater Boston, Massachusetts' premier provider of training and employment services to mature workers aged 45 and older, is honoring Cohasset resident and former Citizens Bank of Massachusetts Board Chairman Neal Finnegan at its 10th Annual Starfish Thrower Awards Gala on May 3, at Boston's Seaport Hotel.

A past President of Operation A.B.L.E.'s Board of Directors, Finnegan is being recognized for his outstanding contribution to improving the lives of many Massachusetts residents.

In addition to his distinguished business career as Citizens Bank of Massachusetts Board Chairman, Finnegan has always been extremely active in the Boston community. Currently, he is Chairman of the Northeastern University Board of Trustees, serves on the Board of Directors of Catholic Charities, and is a Trustee and Executive Committee Member at public television station WGBH.

In 2004, Operation A.B.L.E. presented the Starfish Thrower Award to James C. Curvey, retired Vice Chairman of Fidelity Investments and a past President of Operation A.B.L.E.'s Board of Directors.

For 23 years, Operation A.B.L.E. has helped more than 25,000 people return to work through counseling, job listings, referrals, and job fairs; its highly successful operation Employ/ABLE computer and office skills training program; the Operation Service. Customer service education and job placement partnership; and the federally funded Senior Community Service Employment Program (SCSEP) for low-income workers age 55 and older.

The agency serves individuals from economically, racially, and occupationally diverse backgrounds who have been adversely affected by downsizings, mergers, and relocations, and advocates for mature workers at the local and state levels.

The event honoring Finnegan will take place from 6 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, May 3, at the Seaport Hotel in Boston. For more information about Operation A.B.L.E., visit www.operationable.net.

Bia Bistro bakes for Breast Cancer Fund

More than 100 pastry chefs from participating area restaurants, including Bia Bistro of Cohasset, are contributing proceeds from special 'Mother's Day' desserts being offered the week of May 2-8, to benefit the Eva Brownman Breast Cancer Fund at the Gillette Center for Women's Cancers at Dana - Farber Cancer Institute.

All proceeds from the 6th annual "Boston Bakes for Breast Cancer" will go to the Fund, a non-profit grassroots organization that supports breast cancer research and education at Dana-Farber. The Eva Brownman Breast Cancer Fund was developed by Marjie Brownman Shapiro and her sister Carol Brownman Sneider in 1991 as a tribute to their mother, Eva Brownman, who lost her battle with breast cancer in 1973. The organization was created in the hope that no child would lose a mother, no husband a wife, no mother a daughter and no one a friend, to breast cancer. This year's dessert promotion is in memory of Mary Klein, mother of Pigalle pastry chef Stacy Klein, a participating sponsor.

In conjunction with Boston magazine, the Professional Pastry Guild of New England, Charles River Publishing and FOX-25 TV, the Eva Brownman Breast Cancer Fund has raised over $130,000 for Dana-Farber through this annual event .

Restaurant goers are encouraged to patronize any of the participating restaurants and order these special desserts being offered from May 2 through 8 in the hopes the Fund will one day realize its important mission.

For a listing of participating restaurants and chefs and further details, visit www.bostonbakesforbreastcancer.org.

Judy Neer

Judy Neer heads cornerstone division

Rick Hooker, President and CEO of The Pile Companies, announced Judy Neer, the Managing Partner of Pile and Company Consulting, has been named President of the company's cornerstone division. Ms. Neer joined Pile and Company in 1996 as a Senior Consultant and quickly established herself as a critical player in the burgeoning Agency Selection and Evaluation practice.

"This move is long overdue," shared Mr. Hooker. "Our leading position in the Agency Selection business is largely the result of Judy's leadership and keen understanding of client-agency relationships. Her skill and insight, combined with our proven processes have really helped Pile and Company Consulting provide extremely valuable service to our clients."

Ms. Neer notes, "I am genuinely appreciative of this acknowledgement but view it not as end but the beginning of a new chapter in our work. Nearly twenty years ago, Pile and Company Consulting was one of the forces in creating the entire Agency Selection category. A lot has changed since then and we see numerous opportunities to add capabilities and services that will only further the quality and longevity of client-agency relationships. I'm excited to have the opportunity to continue to guide that evolution."

Judy lives in Cohasset with her husband, Frank and daughter, Jenna.

Womack takes the country road back to concert stage

Grammy Award-winning vocalist plays Plymouth Friday

After a dalliance with pop stardom — thanks to the crossover success of her 2000 mega-smash single "I Hope You Dance" and the million-selling album of the same name — Texas-born singer Lee Ann Womack returned to her traditional country roots with the February release of her latest album, "There's More Where That Came From" and a tour that brings her to Plymouth Memorial Hall on Friday.

Womack may have scored the biggest hit of her career so far with "I Hope You Dance," but her similarly pop-infused 2002 follow-up album, the prophetically named "Something Worth Leaving Behind," proved to be of little interest to record buyers. "I Hope You Dance' is a terrific song, because it connects with so many people. It was a country hit first and then a crossover and it really lasted a long time. I loved being able to perform it for people all over the world, but I also got burned out. Its success was a double-edged sword, too, because if you sell millions and millions of records then the label wants you to come back and do it all over again," explained Womack by cellphone last week from her tour bus. "I worked harder than I have ever worked on the follow-up to that album and it just went nowhere."

Womack, 38, didn't go anywhere, either, opting instead to retreat both from the recording studio and the road to the Nashville home she shares with her husband and two daughters. "It was really great to get off the road for a while and just be normal again. I was able to take the kids to school and see movies with them. I love to tour, but the hardest part is saying goodbye to my girls and getting on the bus."

The two-time Grammy Award winner is making the sacrifice, however, in support of her seventh album. "I've never been more proud of anything in my entire career. I love country music which is what this one is all about. This is an album I have dreamed of recording since I was a young girl listening to Loretta Lynn, Dolly Parton, and Connie Smith."

Produced by Byron Gallimore, Womack's latest release on MCA Nashville features 12 new songs, including one the singer co-wrote with Dale Dodson and Dean Dillon enitled "Twenty Years and Two Husbands Ago. "I was in my office talking to my assistant. She asked me a question and I said I can't remember - Lordy, that was 20 years and two husbands ago," laughs Womack. "That kind of says it all about the new album - pretty country and pretty much like my life."

Lee Ann Womack - with special guest Chad Burdick - will perform at Plymouth Memorial Hall, 83 Court Street, Plymouth Friday, April 29 at 7:30 p.m. For tickets, call TicketWeb toll free 866-468-7619 or visit www.ticketweb.com <http://www.ticketweb.com>. Tickets are also available at all Strawberries locations.

Two-day Monoprint at the South Shore Art Center. Robert Siegelman, art instructor at the School of the Museum of Fine Arts Boston, the Art New England School at Bennington College, Tufts University and the Eliot School in Jamaica Plain, brings his unique talents to the South Shore for an intensive workshop exploring printmaking. While many printmaking classes focus on technical development, this class, for artists of all ability levels, will focus on content and image development within one's work. Students will create easily produced monoprints and monotypes, and will have the opportunity to work independently while receiving individual attention and support. Demonstrations of various techniques will be given, as well as projects designed to push creative growth and process. Siegelman's exhibition experience includes the Gallery NAGA, Boston, The Mills Gallery in Boston, The Fitchburg Art Museum and the Cambridge Art Association's National Prize Show. The workshop meets April 30 and May 1 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost is $185 ($165 for members of the South Shore Art Center). For more information visit www.ssac.org or to register call 781-383-2787.

NOISE RELATED HEARING LOSS

The National Institutes of Health reports that more than 10 million Americans suffer from permanent noise-induced hearing loss. This can be explained, in part, by reports by the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health that some 30 million Americans are exposed to daily noise levels that will eventually reduce their ability to hear. The really troubling aspect of hearing loss in this country is the age at which it occurs. One in eight children between ages 6 and 19 already have some degree of hearing loss, and adults who are losing their hearing are doing so at earlier ages. The greatest increase in noise-related hearing loss now occurs in people between ages 45 and 64.

Unfortunately, many people don't realize they have exposed their hearing to dangerous noise levels until it is too late. Fortunately, it is becoming the norm these days to see people from all walks of life with ear protection. If you or a loved one has suffered hearing impairment due to excessive noise, injury, disease, or the aging process, remember, you've got a friend at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, our goal is a straight forward one - help the hearing impaired through our expertise, personal service, and the latest technology. Ph: 781-337-1144

P.S. Hearing loss now occurs almost 20 years earlier than what experts have come to expect, largely due to our increasingly noisy environment.

Warm to New Brunswick's rich sea creature experience

By MICHAEL SCHUMAN
SPECIAL TO THE HERALD

KOUCHIBOUGUAC NATIONAL PARK, New Brunswick - We were knee-deep in bathtub-warm salt water swinging nets along the ocean bottom like shortstops scooping up ground balls, halfway up the eastern coast of the Canadian province of New Brunswick, where those not in the know would think a dip in the water would be suitable only for polar bears.

But people do come to swim at the beaches of Kouchibouguac National Park (pronounce it "koo-she-boo-gwack" and you may pass as a local). They also travel to this eastern corner of Canada to bike, watch birds and explore the seven preserved ecosystems here, which combined were initially the raison detre for the formation of the national park in 1969.

At that time this was a sparsely settled residential area, and about 1,200 people were relocated in order to save this singular land from further development. A sculpture here paying tribute to the people of the region incorporates a picnic table surrounded by four human figures: an Anglo-Canadian in overalls with suspenders, an Acadian with a beret upon his tete, and a native Mi'kmaq (pronounce it "mik-mak") mother and her child mashing a bowl of blueberries.

My family's net-weilding activity was part of a guided program at Kouchibouguac, a Mi'kmaq Indian word that roughly translates as "river of the long tides," taking us into a salt-filled lagoon separated from the mainland by a line of low lying sand dunes. Led by Parks Canada interpreter Marieve Therriault, it's one of several park programs, including puppet shows and active inspections of native culture at a recreated wigwam. The purpose of ours, officially referred to as a "learning quest," was to offer an up-close and personal inspection of the lifestyles of the shelled and scaly.

After 20 minutes in the water our group of roughly 15 emptied into Tupperware-sized tubs the results of our net scrapes, everything from moon snails to jellyfish. It seemed as if the entire clientele of Spongebob Squarepants' workplace, the Crusty Crab, was in the tubs at our feet.

As Therriault held a jellyfish, she invited us to take turns sticking our fingers in the floppy blob's mouth. Nearly everyone under the age of 15 took her up on her offer before she informed them, "You just put your finger in the jellyfish's mouth. At the same time you just put your finger in the jellyfish's anus."

Ewwwwwwww!

This being a national park, all our catches were released back into the water, where they are once again safe to enjoy a crabby patty in Spongebob's underwater world.

Kouchibouguac National Park

Such guided explorations are the best way to experience Kouchibouguac. Like Cape Cod National Seashore, this is not the kind of park that can be appropriately enjoyed from the inside of a car. No massive mountain peaks or erupting geysers here. The pleasures are more subtle.

There is at least one walking trail traversing each habitat, taking leisure strollers along jaunts through forests and bogs, lagoons, salt marshes and low lying dunes. Staffers recommend the two-kilometer Bog Trail for those seeking gentle variations in flora and the 11.7 kilometer Kouchibouguac River Trail as the best place to see wildlife such as moose and black bear.

The prized sights to birders are the majestic osprey, emblem of the park, and the bald eagle. Another rare sight is the diminutive piping plover, which makes its home in the dunes and is an endangered species. More commonly spotted are terns, whose colony here is the second largest in North America.

Our only view of an osprey was via bicycle. Bike trails encompass roughly 36 miles and range from easy to "ouch." We cycled a series of trails, most wide, flat, paved and well-marked. The biking trail system took us past a driftwood-strewn beach, a boat rental outlet, piney forests and trail-side markers that shed light on park aspects from the local bird population to the long, tidal Kouchibouguac River.

Of course, some will want to head straight to either Kelly's or Callander's beaches, named for relocated families. The Gulf Stream contradicts the park's northern latitude. The temperatures of the lagoon salt waters, located between the park mainland and the dunes, can range in summer from 68 to 80 Fahrenheit and swimmers often dive in as early as May. The waters of the Northumberland Strait, on the outside of the dunes, are also warm in summer.

IF YOU GO...

The park: Kouchibouguac National Park is open year-round, but the majority of visitors come between May and October, with the busiest time being from June 20-Labor Day.

As with most national parks, the best place to start is the visitor center. A 20-minute-long, nine projection, multimedia show utilizes music but no dialogue to present a taste of the park in all four seasons, and it is well worth seeing.

Staying there: There is camping at the park (call 877-737-3783 or go to www.pccamping.ca) as well as motels in nearby Richibucto and Saint Louis.

For more information: Call 506-876-2443 or go to www.pc.gc.ca/kouchibouguac

Spring is sprouting at Holly Hill Farm

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Little seedlings are sprouting in the greenhouses at Holly Hill Farm, and students have been paying close attention to see how fast they'll grow. With a little patience and some tender loving care, the children will oversee their growth into fruits and vegetables fit to be served at the dining room table.

Tucked in the woods on Jerusalem Road, Holly Hill Farm will draw a variety of children from various South Shore towns throughout the spring and summer months, looking to gain some hands-on experience in tending and nurturing the farm's crops. Through the farm's educational programming, offered through its nonprofit branch — the Friends of Holly Hill Farm — students are being exposed to every facet of farm life from growing and harvesting organic produce, to tending to the animals, to the required maintenance and upkeep of the farm grounds and buildings.

Tony town?

AdCom floats paying for report

In light of the need for yearly overrides, the advisory committee is looking at whether some of the town's spending practices should change.

With the help of Municipal Benchmarking LLC — a Waltham company that analyzes town spending and prepares reports to aid in the budgeting process — the advisory committee said the town could find ways to curb unnecessary spending and run more efficiently.

The committee met with a representative from the company and who gave a preliminary presentation outlining some of the information a benchmarking report could provide. Since that discussion, the committee is now considering purchasing the entire report for $7,500.

"I was personally impressed," said Advisory Committee Chairman Donna McGee.

Tempest in a teapot? Or has memo Cooked controversy?

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Sparks were flying at Tuesday's selectmen's meeting.

But that's nothing new. Selectmen's meetings in Cohasset became a blood sport years ago.

So it should come as no surprise that "memo-gate" has some residents crying foul over a "confidential email" that surfaced last week which included a legal opinion sent by Town Counsel Paul DeRensis last November, and was not distributed to all members of the board of selectmen.

Now, not only do all selectmen have the email but so do dozens – or perhaps hundreds — of townspeople who received the memo through forwarded emails.

Were Selectman Michael Sullivan, who was chairman, and then selectman Ronnie McMorris trying to hide the fact that DeRensis stated private sewers in town are a "no-go" under current Cohasset sewer rules?

Both Sullivan and McMorris deny allegations they were trying to keep that information from becoming public. The email was also sent to interim town manager Michael Buckley.

In fact, Sullivan and McMorris say the email, which was one of three that day between DeRensis and the board contained nothing new and was an affirmation of what was currently understood.

Although not sent to every individual member, the email was apparently accessible to the entire board at Town Hall. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer referenced it as part of a chronology of events relating to the Cook project at the April 26 selectmen's meeting solely dedicated to the Cook issue.

Sullivan pointed out in a telephone interview Tuesday, if DeRensis had said private sewers were an option for the Cook Estate and Avalon, then that would have been a big deal. He noted the email was in response to a question of whether a private sewer for Cook was an option. At the time, Avalon was talking to Hull about a potential connection, which prompted the question of whether Cook could tie in if Avalon was successful.

But the DeRensis email memo said Avalon running a sewer main

Minot Ledge Light looks ghostly in a coat of white ice last winter. A new book on lighthouses includes Minot's tower which some claim is haunted by the Portuguese Phantom.

Minot makes list of haunted towers

Book retells tale of Portuguese Phantom

By Jillian Fennimore
JFENNIMO@CNC.COM

When it comes to haunted lighthouses up and down the eastern seaboard, Sheryl Monks is a true ghost writer.

With her new book, "Ghostly Lighthouses from Maine to Florida," the writer from North Carolina retells the tales of 15 haunted lighthouses including one that is very close to home— Minot Ledge Light and the "Portuguese Phantom."

Local historians have written about the April storm in 1851 that toppled the original spider-legged Minot Ledge Lighthouse and claimed the lives of its assistant keepers Joseph Wilson of England and Joseph Antoine of Portugal.

"The thirty-ton structure toppled over and smashed against the very rocks it had warned of. Perhaps one of the (keepers) courageously volunteered to face the storm head-on by climbing the ladder in those final moments to try and relight the lamp, while the other desperately hammered the fog bell…"

So describes the chapter in Monk's book on Minot Light and the Portuguese Phantom that some say haunts it to this day.

According to Monk, Wilson and Antoine were left alone to man the lighthouse that fateful day. They were under orders of the light's first keeper Isaac Dunham, who had gone to Boston that day but ordered his assistants to be on guard at the lighthouse at all times. Even as the storm raged. Wilson and Antoine stayed at their post and sadly went down with the lighthouse.

"It's mind boggling how brave how and intrepid people can be to withstand forces of the Atlantic ocean," she said about the lighthouse keepers. "That story really demonstrates how those guys risked their lives."

Legend has it, Monk said, that since the construction of a new tower in 1860, keepers encountered peculiar happenings at the Minot Ledge Lighthouse . Mariners have reported a "phantom" hanging from the bottom rung of the lighthouse ladder, "as if clinging for dear

New Cook plans are work in progress

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Cook Estate project could be back at square one, as selectmen discussed completely revamping the Request for Proposals sent out during the first bidding process to incorporate new housing ideas for the site.

Although nothing is set in stone and the new RFP has not been finalized or sent out to prospective bidders on the project, Selectman Gary Vanderweil said in his opinion, he would like to see the project scaled back even further to roughly 50 or 55 units. In addition, he said he wouldn't rule out building on the three Cook acres located on the opposite side of Sohier Street, which would have served as a buffer for residents on Fair Oaks Lane.

Vanderweil eyes 3-acres across Sohier Street

"I absolutely want it to be a part of this project," Vanderweil said of the three acres.

Vanderweil said he has sent copies soil tests — performed at the town's expense on the Cook Estate by Coler and Colantonio and John Cavanaro Consulting — to Dan Coughlin of Tutela Engineering Associates for review. Vanderweil is a former sewer commissioner and Tutela has provided engineering for the town's sewer projects.

Vanderweil said he had only spoken briefly to Coughlin, but he had indicated from his first glance at the tests, that there could be severe limitations on the site. "He was concerned it wouldn't support 60," said Vanderweil.

Vanderweil said it might be in the town's best interest to bring Coler and Colantonio back or hire another engineer to complete further testing on site, to determine exactly how many units can be built before sending out another RFP. He also suggested the company test the soils on the three acres on the Fair Oaks Lane side of the street to determine whether they could support development.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he was against building on the opposite side of Sohier Street. He said there would be too many issues with abutters, who had been told the project would not be built in

Hedlund on hot seat in stem cell forum

Some unhappy with vote on bill

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

State Sen. Robert Hedlund hosted a forum at Hingham Town Hall Tuesday packed with pro-life constituents who expressed their disappointment in the senator's vote approving a bill on embryonic stem cell research that is before the Legislature.

The Weymouth Republican — who himself is pro life — can usually count on support from voters who are part of Massachusetts Citizens for Life, Friends of the Unborn and similar organizations, but not this time.

Where the roughly 125 citizens in the hall and the bill part ways is on the definition of when life begins: at conception or 14 days later.

That's the crux of the issue that will no doubt continue to be divisive as the bill moves through the House and then to Gov. Mitt Romney's desk for an expected veto.

Those who spoke in the marathon-long forum asked Hedlund to support Romney's veto.

"The Catholic Church teaches life begins at conception and I believe that from my heart," said Paul Morrell of Hingham. "It makes sense to default to the most conservative point which is at conception — how can you draw the line at 14 days?

"From the scientific point of view if we landed a spaceship on Mars and found a 14-cell object, headlines would scream 'Life exists on Mars!'"

State Sen. Bruce Tarr, R-Gloucester, a co-author of the bill and guest speaker, soon realized he was in unfriendly territory. At one point he told the audience which was prone to interrupting his explanation by loudly voicing their objections that he would respect their views if they would respect his.

About stem cells

Stem cells are the basic building blocks for the cellular development of the body

Stem cell research is divided into two groups: embryonic stem cell research and adult stem cell research. The main ethical issues pertain to embryonic stem cell research.

Ethical concerns: Harvesting embryonic stem cells unavoidably involves destroying the human embryo.

Adult stem cells are referred to as "multipotent" insofar adult stem cells are currently less versatile than "pluripotent" embryonic stem cells.

According to a summary from the State House News Service, "the bill stipulates a regulatory role for the Department of Public Health; bans reproductive cloning; and prohibits use of embryonic material more than 14 days old, a de facto definition of when embryonic material crosses the threshold of humanity."

Hedlund told the crowd the issue was the most complex from both a moral and scientific standpoint that he has had to grapple with in his years in the senate.

Tarr explained the current state law which allows stem cell research is not adequate to deal with scientific advances. He noted within a 10-mile radius of the State House, the foremost experts in the world are doing embryonic stem-cell and adult stem-cell research.

"It's significant that we have a cluster of people pushing the edge.

...It's easier to have a regulatory framework in place before something happens than after because then people perceive you're taking something away."

After fertilization but before the 14-day benchmark the embryonic cells are either "totipotent" or "pluripotent" meaning they can become anything in the body, after that the spinal column starts to appear and the cells differentiate into adult stem cells which are "multipotent" and less versatile.

Peg Whitbread, president of Mass. Citizens for Life, drew loud applause when she said the bill is really about money, "big money" that would be coming through grants for this type of research.

She explained that adult stem cells are any that do not come from embryos. "Even a baby has adult stem cells," she said.

"Scientists can run amuck," Whitbread said. "Just because a scientist wants to know something doesn't mean we have to him a license. This bill gives a scientist a license to kill."

Linda Thayer, who spoke from the audience, described the bill "as revisionist self-serving nonsense." She said if something is genetically human and alive – the individual is fixed and not conferred after 14 days.

Tarr, the senator from Gloucester, noted the current state law allows embryonic stem cell research with fewer restrictions than this bill would put in place.

Michael Jovanovic of Quincy, a native of Serbia, spoke up that he was for anything that benefits life including abortion to save the life of the mother and embryonic stem cell research if it can save lives.

"People that do embryonic research sacrifice one life so that many other lives may live," he said. "I'm for anything that promotes life – long live life!"

His remarks were not popular and some members of the audience shouted that he was in the wrong room.

Hedlund said he struggled with trying to understand the biology and the science before casting his vote to which one person shouted, "why not vote for the unborn child, we trusted you!"

Hedlund responded, "I'm not sure I voted against the unborn child."

The Rev. James Rafferty of St. Paul Church said the issue revolves around the central moral question of whether a human organism is endangered by the process.

He said the determination that human life begins 14 days after conception is arbitrary. "Human life begins at conception," he said.

Dr. Mildred Jefferson, a graduate of Harvard Medical School, said the ethical issue cannot be ignored. "There is never a justification for killing of an innocent human being no matter or small or young that being might be." She said government should not be destroying life but rather be guaranteeing the right to life for everyone.

Sen. Hedlund represents the Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

About the bill

The bill clarifies the Legislature' support and encouragement of stem cell and other regenerative medical research in Massachusetts, creates a licensing and oversight mechanism for institutions conducting embryonic stem cell research, requires informed and voluntary consent from donors, prohibits human reproductive cloning and provides criminal, civil and administrative penalties for violation of the bill.

Ballpark oversight could head to Town Meeting

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It may take Town Meeting action to clear up the question of who has jurisdiction over the Beechwood Ballpark. Although the selectmen believe they have control and appointed a committee to oversee improvements to the field, members of the recreation commission believe they are being circumvented.

Town Manager Bill Griffin has been in contact with Town Counsel Paul DeRensis on the matter since Dick Barrow, 283 King St., who has served on the recreation commission for the past 26 years, raised the issue with selectmen. Barrow said when looking through the 1963 Town Report, he found an article that clearly states his board has control over all playgrounds in town.

The article states: "The laying out, use and control of playgrounds in Cohasset...shall be exercised by and are hereby placed under the Recreation Committee." Therefore, Barrow believes the recreation commission has jurisdiction over any improvements to the Beechwood Ballpark.

Griffin contacted DeRensis about the issue in March, and correspondence from DeRensis states unless the ballpark was acquired or received as a gift and at that time placed under the jurisdiction of the recreation commission, the land is held under the jurisdiction of the board of selectmen pursuant to state law. After conducting some research, DeRensis found the town took custody of the ballpark in January 1932, and there is no reference on the deed that the land was placed under the jurisdiction of the recreation commission.

However, the ruling did not address the fact that the town passed an article in 1963 that gives the recreation commission control over all playgrounds in town. Griffin provided the information to DeRensis and asked him whether taking that into consideration would change his opinion.

Correspondence from DeRensis states in order to clear up the situation, "Our first solution is to propose that an article be placed on the warrant for the next Town Meeting," that would confirm which board has jurisdiction over the field. Such a Town Meeting vote, specifically mentioning the field, "would conclusively put to rest this 20 to 30 year issue," he wrote.

A second solution would be to have both the selectmen and recreation commission "jointly concur in jurisdiction over the field because the confused state of the town's records makes it difficult, if not impossible, to provide a conclusive, doubt-free answer," DeRensis wrote.

Although DeRensis offered other alternative solutions for correcting the dispute, such as tracing the title of the land at the registry and searching old Town Hall records, the legal work involved would be costly. Therefore, it was his recommendation the town adopt one of the simpler options, and bring it to a Town Meeting vote.

'Cat fights' could limit public comment

As a result of public comments made during the Tuesday May 3 selectmen's meeting regarding a memo from Town Counsel to two members of the board (see related story), Selectman Gary Vanderweil said he would like the board to discuss potentially only having the public comment period on the agenda perhaps once a month.

"We're never going to get the town's business done if we're getting into these cat fights," he said.

However, Karen Quigley, 27 Clay Spring Road, who had come to the meeting specifically to make comments about the Cook project said she takes "great exception to elected officials who are elected by the public to do public business, thinking it's an imposition to listen to the public. Thinking it's an imposition to listen to the public is inappropriate and doing away with public comment time is not the way America should be run."

Vanderweil said when watching the House of Representatives or Senate on television, "The public isn't there raising their hands."

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he thought it would be best if the board discussed the matter at a different time, but said he doesn't see what good it would do to bring up a point at a meeting, but make residents wait two or three weeks before they can comment on it.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said as far as public comments go, "I value when people bring insights and even ask questions that enhance the discussion," and the town is currently trying to move forward and if residents can bring information that adds value to what the town is trying to accomplish, that is what he wants to see.

Selectman Rob Spofford said he does not want to see any restrictions put on public comments and added, "My door is always open. We have an obligation to listen, and I will, even if I don't like the person or don't want to listen." Spofford quipped there aren't many people in town he doesn't like anyway.

Taking a look at how Cohasset measures up

Municipal Benchmarking would compile a 150-page report called "The Municipal Yardstick," which would compare Cohasset with 20 other municipalities specifically chosen for their demographic similarity. Cohasset would be measured on many criteria including various general government, educational, and public safety expenditures and land assessments.

By "benchmarking" or comparing the town of Cohasset against municipalities with comparable attributes, Municipal Benchmarking can find ways for the town to run more efficiently.

"We have to understand where we deviate from the norm," said member Pat Waters.

Member James Gilman agreed. "We need to make sure the town's getting the most bang for its buck."

Bringing in the professional from Municipal Benchmarking is part of a larger effort of the board to help curb the need for overrides.

"We have to understand where we deviate from the norm."

— Pat Waters, advisory committee

Gilman has been working for the past two years, comparing Cohasset against similar municipalities, and has found it is one of the most expensive towns on a per taxpayer basis. He said it was interesting to see his numbers closely match the figures provided by Municipal Benchmarking.

The advisory committee would like to host a roundtable discussion with various town boards where a representative from Municipal Benchmarking would be available to provide information and answer questions. McGee said that way, the other boards could decide whether the information would be useful for them during the budget process and secondly, whether they would be willing to pay $7,500 for a full report for the town as a whole to use.

The advisory committee thought the report might be eye-opening.

"This is a great tool, but it is only as great as the people who are willing to use it," said Waters, adding some have a pre-conceived notion of what is "out of whack" and this third-party company can help dispel the myths. He said there has been a proverbial line drawn in the sand, where there is a feeling of "are you a school person" when the budget is brought up. This report could help bring the budget together as a whole, he said.

To Waters' point, member James Gilman said in actuality, the preliminary report compiled by Municipal Benchmarking stated Cohasset schools are running about average in terms of spending, but it is the police and fire departments that are running at a higher cost. From his own data collecting, he has found Cohasset spends an average amount of money on its students, but receives a higher product in the end.

McGee added she was shocked to find how little the town spends on its library compared to other towns when it is seen as a highly valuable resource.

Members of the advisory committee will be in touch with Municipal Benchmarking about providing another presentation to the larger group free of charge. The committee said it would like to invite the board of selectmen, town manager, director of finance, and the capital budget committee to the presentation, and get their recommendation as to whether the report would be useful for them. The committee will meet again Thursday, May 12 at 7 p.m. at Town Hall.

Cook project to go back out to bid

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A downsized Cook Estate housing development is on the horizon.

Selectmen voted 4-0 in an unprecedented Friday evening meeting last week to issue another Request for Proposal and solicit bids for the project.

Selectman Michael Sullivan did not attend the meeting due to scheduling conflict with prior commitments.

The proverbial gun was at the selectmen's heads because the heirs to the Cook Estate refused to extend the April 30 deadline for the town to have a viable wastewater solution, hence the April 29 meeting.

The 95-unit project planned by Northland Residential could not go ahead as planned because soils at the site could not handle a septic system for a development of that size. Municipal sewer was not an option, the sewer commission said.

So selectmen had to decide whether to kill the project and recoup the $200,000 deposit but lose the roughly $250,000 spent so far on consulting, engineering and legal fees – or move forward with fewer units whose wastewater could be handled with an on-site system.

"I believe we should move forward and take a risk with the $200,000," Selectman Rob Spofford said. "We owe it to the town to do that and maintain control over this property with minimal risk to the town."

Selectmen said a substantially downsized project wouldn't pass muster under state procurement law, dubbed Chapter 30B.

But choosing to draft a new Request for Proposal (RFP) and solicit new bids is not without risk. The board said there is a chance the town would not receive any bids. In that case, the town could be out the entire $450,000. But if an acceptable new proposal surfaces, the town could recoup the money from the sale.

"We're supportive of the town and what the selectmen have decided to do and we're eagerly looking forward to the RFP package and anticipate actively participating in the process."

— Jack Dawley, Northland Residential

Selectmen noted the issue isn't entirely about money but over control of the site. In other words if the town steps away from the plate, the Cook heirs could sell their acreage to a developer who could build single-family homes when the town is in need of housing options for senior citizens.

Northland Residential, the developer chosen after the first bidding process 14 months ago, is not out of the picture. Selectmen said state bidding laws wouldn't allow the town to negotiate with Northland for a smaller development, but they expected Northland would seek the new RFP.

Jack Dawley, a partner at Northland, said his company looks forward to continuing a positive relationship with Cohasset.

"We're supportive of the town and what the selectmen have decided to do and we're eagerly looking forward to the RFP package and anticipate actively participating in the process," he said.

Selectmen said they could terminate the RFP awarded to Northland in March 2003 because Northland never signed the Land Disposition Agreement, which is similar to a purchase and sale.

Dawley said Northland did not sign the LDA because the key issue of how to handle wastewater disposal at the site had not been resolved.

Voters at the November 2003 special Town Meeting gave the go-ahead for the town to purchase the 22.4 acre Jane Bancroft Cook Estate off Sohier Street to develop age-restricted housing for those 55 and older and preserve open space.

The Cook Estate, then valued at $4.5 million, would be combined with the 9.8-acre parcel the town owns near Stop & Shop and Red Fox Lane, to create a mixed-income senior housing community. The three-acre parcel across Sohier Street (between the Mobil Station and Fair Oaks Lane), which is part of the Cook Estate, would be retained by the town as open space.

At a simultaneous closing, the town would give the Cook heirs $4.5 million for their property, and Northland will give the town $5.425 million for both the Cook property and the town's parcel of land, leaving $925,000 for the town. The minimum bid price set by the town was $5.2 million for both parcels.

With the $925,000, the town could pay back any expenditures accrued during the process.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Special Town Election on May 21, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, May 21, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open.
- Physical disability.
- Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by May 21 to be counted.

Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you b the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Scouts show community pride

AROUND TOWN
JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

COMMUNITY PRIDE

For the past two weeks, the Wolf Scouts from Den 7 have been cleaning up glass from the top of the look out above Lightkeeper's Cottage. This spot has an incredible view of Cohasset harbor and is a popular hang out for many. Unfortunately, years of misuse and disrespect have marred this natural setting with an inordinate amount of shards of glass.

The six boys and their den mothers chose this project as the final requirement for their Cub Scout World Conservation Award. They will receive this badge next week. The boys are Brad Dimodica, Curtis Golden, Garrett Church, Cameron Steele, Jake Johnson, and Ford Murphy.

Although the boys made great progress, there is much more glass to be picked up. This is an ongoing project and hope that other community minded groups and/or individuals can participate to keep Cohasset clean! All it takes is a garbage bag, some gloves, and a little community pride.

DIVE, SWIM TEAM

Attention returning swimmers and divers: The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2005 season sign-up for returning swimmers and divers will be held on Saturday May 14 from 9 a.m.-noon at Town Hall. In addition, The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team is also seeking a highly motivated, responsible individual to assist the coaching staff in swim practices, swim meets and general organization of the swim team. Interested individuals should send qualifications to PO Box 651, Cohasset, MA 02025.

CURTAIN RISES ON 'ANNIE'

Looking for a wonderful way to spend your Friday or Saturday evening or Sunday afternoon? This weekend is the opening weekend for the Cohasset Dramatic Club's performance of Annie. The show takes place at the Cohasset Town Hall on Friday and Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. for the next three weekends.

On Wednesday, May 11, a special benefit performance is being held at 7:30 p.m. to benefit the Cohasset Public Schools Music Department. If you would like to purchase tickets for any of the weekend shows, please go to Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or the Front Street Book Store in Scituate Harbor. Each ticket is $12.

To purchase tickets for the benefit performance, call Susan Jaffe at 781-383-9858.

CAR WASH SATURDAY

A car wash, to be held on Sat., May 7, will benefit the Cohasset High School Varsity, as well as the Junior Varsity Baseball Team and is being sponsored by the Cohasset baseball boosters, The Diamond Club. Stop by Coastal Nissan on Route 3-A, Cohasset, to have your vehicle washed by team members. Donations are welcomed.

Scott Faber studied away in Prague for the Spring 2005 semester. A sophomore at Connecticut College, Faber is one of many students to take advantage of the wealth of study away options offered each year by the college. Faber, a 2003 graduate of Cohasset High School, is the son of Lesley and Stephen Faber of Cohasset. This sounds like a great experience Scott.

SILHOUETTES OFFERED

Carriage House Nursery School will host renowned Silhouette Cutter Carol LeBeaux the weekend of May 21-22. Silhouettes will be done of children or anyone you want to bring along. Each silhouette is original and will surely become a treasured keepsake for years to come or a great gift for Father's Day or the Holidays. Appointments need to be made in advance at Carriage House Nursery School located in the Unitarian First Parish Church on Monday, May 9 from 9:30-11a.m. and 1-2:30pm. A 50 percent deposit of the base package ($29) and a $6 donation per child is required at the time of appointment selection.

This event will be held from 9a.m. to 5p.m. at Carriage House Nursery School on Saturday, May 21 and on Sunday, May 22 at Atlantic Brokerage Group, at 9 Depot Court. A portion of the proceeds from this exciting event will be used to purchase computer equipment for the School.

VOLUNTEERS SOUGHT

The Cohasset Consignment Shop is in need of volunteers. Proceeds from the shop benefit the Social Service League of Cohasset which funds fabulous programs such as Meals on Wheels, educational programs for our schools, and Wellspring in Hull, to mention a few. If you love to shop, love a bargain and most of all love to support a good cause come join the team of volunteers....contact Patty Smith at 781-383-1043 for more information.

Volunteers clean up Black Rock Beach

Four-year resident of Cohasset, Bill Burnett, 35, took it upon himself to organize a half day clean-up project at Black Rock Beach. To his knowledge this was a first-time effort by residents.

On April 29 at 10a.m., the Berube, Burnett, Crumley, Good, Mahoney, Stanton, and Wipf families along with Richard Ford gathered at the beach wearing gloves at the intersection Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road carrying trash bags, rakes, and shovels.

The volunteer crew worked for two hours picking up debris brought in from the ocean and left by residents.

" It was a total mess," said Burnett. "People don't want to bring their families to the beach when it is covered with garbage." The team took six truckloads of trash to the town dump.

"Our team of volunteers did an amazing job. The beach has never looked better," said Burnett.

Burnett predicts that the Black Rock Beach volunteers will meet annually and at least two more Saturdays throughout the summer.

"We're a great community and we need to protect our resources," Burnett said. Anyone interest in volunteering call Bill Burnett 383-3499.

Don't miss May Arts Night next Thursday

Exploring Art from Around the World is the theme for this year's May Arts Night to be held jointly at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools on Thursday, May 12 from 6 - 8:30 p.m.

Artists and musicians will showcase a wide range of culturally enriching works for the students to enjoy throughout the evening, including performances by the Boston Ballet, the High School Jazz Ensemble; Chinese Brush Painting, Renaissance Painting, Scottish Bag Pipes and more.

Refreshments will be served at the International Food Court, and bus service will be available from the music circus.

Spring is sprouting at Holly Hill Farm

"It is essential for kids and adults to learn about where their food comes from and what it takes to get it to the table," said Educational Director John Belber, which is why he says the work the Friends programs are doing is so important. He said throughout the year, there are many different programs offered for both children and adults, which take advantage of the roughly 140 acres Holly Hill has to offer.

Holly Hill is an organic farm, and roughly 4 acres are used for farming. Those who participate in its programs are taught not only about the importance of eating food which has been grown without the help of chemical fertilizers or pesticides on a person's health, but the benefits organic farming methods have on the environment.

Throughout the school year, Belber said there are many different school groups that use the farm as an educational resource. He said many students from Cohasset High School have completed community service projects at the farm and students from the South Shore Charter School in Norwell have a garden on site which they regularly tend to, as do students from the Inly School in Scituate. Students from Wampatuck School in Scituate also take annual field trips to the farm.

"We've got our fingers in a lot of different areas," said Belber.

But students aren't limited to the school day to learn about the farm. This year, for the first time, the farm offered after-school programs beginning in April which allowed students to come to the farm two afternoons per week to learn about spring planting, soil study, and the care of young plants. Belber said while he understands children are often participating in many other after-school activities, "We're trying to put out another option for kids. One that will get their hands dirty a little bit," he said. In addition, classes were also offered for the first time during April vacation week.

For those students who are too busy during the school year, the summer months can provide another opportunity to learn about farm life. Belber said children's summer farm programs are offered for children ages 5-12, and during the classes, students are taught how to grow their own vegetables, how to tend to the "education garden" and are instructed in carrying out age-appropriate farm tasks.

"The kids who come really do love it," said Belber.

Belber said while the summer programs are only three days long, there are always plants in various stages for the children to take care of, which gives them a better understanding of seed development. In addition, the organic farm lends itself to lessons in natural farming methods, especially healthy soil composition.

"They learn how to make their own compost and how to monitor the soil," to ensure what they plant will have enough nutrients to grow strong and healthy, said Belber. He went on to explain that oftentimes chemicals in the soil will deplete it of its natural nutrients and building healthy soil helps sustain new plants.

Living on the water, Belber said the students learn how kelp can be used as a very effective, natural fertilizer. In addition, he said students learn to make compost from grass clippings and leaves and learn about crop rotation to ensure the land has the ability to replenish itself and plants can grow strong enough to fend off insects naturally.

"Students get experience with organic methods of farming and sustainable agricultural practices," Belber said.

For the past four years, Holly Hill Farm has offered a Young Farmer's program for teens, which is an expansion of the programs offered for children. Students participate in a week-long session which begins at 8:30 a.m. and ends at noon. Young farmers are given a "real" work experience, as they sow seeds, transplant vegetation, weed the gardens, harvest and sell their own produce at the Holly Hill Farm stand. Students who participate also spend one day at the neighboring Weir River Farm in the barnyard, working with the animals.

At the end of the week, students plan a menu and prepare a special meal for family and friends, made up of all the fresh produce they harvested during their stay. Young farmers also receive a small stipend for their efforts during the week.

By being exposed to farming on a local level, Belber said it helps children realize they are able to play a role in what they eat. "It is vital for them to learn food is not just at the grocery store, it's right in their own backyards," he said.

Programming at the farm is not limited to children as there are many programs intended to educate adults. Area naturalists have been invited to lecture and guide nature walks along the hiking trails at the farm, teaching adults about local bird life, plants and the geological wonders of the town.

"We try to bring in local experts and they each have a specialty," said Belber, adding they are able to enlighten adults on the natural wonders the farm has to offer.

In addition, there are organic gardening workshops for adults which are offered in the spring, summer and fall months. Classes are taught on growing organic seedlings, growing garlic, growing and cooking with herbs, growing, arranging, and caring for cut flowers, and creating the perfect compost.

Holly Hill Farm is a working, for-profit farm with a non-profit educational branch, and the two work together to educate the community on the benefits of local farming. In fact, Belber said Holly Hill Farm will be having a plant sale May 21 and 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. during which time raffle tickets will be sold and the proceeds will go to benefit the educational programs at the farm. The ultimate goal is to build a new greenhouse on the property which will be used for educational purposes.

For more information on any Friends of Holly Hill Farm programs or workshops, please call John Belber at the farm at (781) 383-1455 or visit the farm's Web site at www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Guided walks and lectures

The Friends of Holly Hill Farm will host three guided tours and illustrated lectures throughout the months of May and June. Lectures will take place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, located at 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, on the Thursday evening immediately preceding the Saturday walk at the farm, located at 190 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. Lectures are open to the public and are free of charge. Guided walks are free for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members and $5 for others. Participants should prepare for wet paths and dress according to the weather during the guided walks. Cameras, notebooks and sketchpads are always welcome. Pets are not permitted.

- Saturday, May 7 at 8:30 a.m. Sally Avery, a local naturalist and experienced birder from Cohasset will lead a walk about the farm's salt marsh, along its field edges, and through its woods. Binoculars are recommended for better viewing.
- Thursday May 19 at 7 p.m. Margaret Moore, an avid gardener and nature enthusiast from Cohasset will give a lecture on the wildflowers and shrubs on the farm's growing fields, meadows, and woods. Saturday, May 21 at 10 a.m., Moore will lead a tour around the Holly Hill Farm property.
- Thursday, June 2 at 7 p.m. geologist Peter Dillon will give a presentation on the beautiful ledges and outcroppings scattered about the farm and reveal some of the age-old geology that produced them. Dillon will lead a guided walk beginning at 10 a.m. on Saturday, June 4.

Tempest in a teapot? Or has memo Cooked controversy?

along Route 3A to connect to the wastewater treatment plant in Hull, with a connection to be offered to the Cook Estate, was not lawful and not worth further consideration. The sewer commission's rules and regulations prohibit private sewers along public ways.

Now that the email is in the public domain, some think it was purposely withheld.

Wig Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave, who came to Tuesday's selectmen's meeting said, "there's something rotten in Denmark." He asked why the memo was not distributed to the other board members.

Sullivan said because the information was nothing new, "I put it aside." Sullivan said the issue of tying the Cook project into the sewer didn't surface again until recently. Two sewer commissioners said at a recent public meeting of the Cook working group they would be willing to discuss the possibility of running pipes to Hull if every project on the table for consideration was allowed to tie in and all lawsuits were cleared as a result, Sullivan noted.

Sullivan pointed out in a telephone interview Tuesday, if DeRensis had said private sewers were an option for the Cook Estate and Avalon, then that would have been a big deal.

Sullivan added the issues brought forth in the memo were the same as the Jerusalem Road Estates development, which had asked the sewer commission to allow it to install pipes in Cohasset roads to tie in to the Hull wastewater plant. The sewer commission denied the request, but could have allowed it by changing the regulations. "I think you're just trying to make an issue," Sullivan said.

"We live in a democracy the last time I checked," said Pierson, adding the public has a right to information about the town and its projects. "One reason we're behind the eight ball is because this memo didn't surface until last week," he said.

The conversation got very heated and allegations were flying. Sullivan, feeling personally attacked, said to Pierson, "I'm tired of your shenanigans. You have every intention of vilifying me!"

At that point, Selectmen Chairman Fred Koed pounded the gavel to bring the meeting back to order. He said the board has been talking for some time about updating its rules and regulations. One new procedure would be a binder with rulings from Town Counsel that can be easily accessed by the public and would be continually updated as confidential items become public documents.

Selectman Rob Spofford noted the email was supposed to be a confidential document and now it has been forwarded all over town.

McMorris attended the meeting and addressed the comments which were made, saying her name and reputation have been put on the line. "This is much ado about nothing," she said.

McMorris explained the memo was one in a series of three that were sent by DeRensis that day involving wastewater and Cook Estate issues. "To take any one piece is wrong," she said, adding sometimes when members of the board ask for an opinion, DeRensis will send back his response only to those who asked for it, and other e-mails on the sewer issue sent later in the day that referenced the earlier email were sent to all members of the board.

New Cook plans are work in progress

their neighborhood and with that assurance may have voted to allow the town to enter into an agreement with the Cook heirs at Town Meeting.

"You want to shift the financial burden across the street," said Spofford.

However, Selectman Michael Sullivan said it is his understanding the soils across the street were tested by John Cavanaro, and they cannot support development.

Spofford also said hiring another engineer is a cost he would expect a new developer to incur as part of their due diligence process. "I don't feel really comfortable incurring any more costs to the town," he said.

Soil tests and other fees combined have already cost the town $250,000, but Vanderweil said, "If we can put the sewer issue to bed for $15,000 to $20,000 more, why not?"

However, Spofford pointed out Northland, which he hopes will submit another bid in the second RFP process, already completed its due diligence with round one. Representatives for the company said the site can handle the wastewater for 65 units.

The board will continue to work toward coming up with criteria for the new RFP. Sullivan said it makes the most sense to work with the old RFP. "We can pare it down to do it with less units," he said, but in his opinion the project should remain relatively the same.

The board will meet again Tuesday, May 10 to discuss the Cook project, and hopes to be able to meet with engineers from Coler and Colantonio, John Cavanaro Consulting, Tutela Engineering and McSweeney Associates, the engineers the Cook heirs hired to complete due diligence on their behalf, to gain information on how many units the site can support.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln, left, talks with Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz about the sewage that bubbled out of the manhole onto Pond Street and Rte. 3A on Tuesday.

Sewage spill mopped up

Sewage spilled onto Pond Street Tuesday, causing the Cohasset Fire Department, sewer commission, and water commission to rush to the scene.

Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said the problem arose as the result of a perforated valve, which has now been replaced.

Kasperowicz explained there are two pumps at the Route 3A pump station, both of which have check valves. The valves act like the chambers of a heart, and pump the effluent up to the top of Pleasant Street, and then it rolls down the hill to the wastewater treatment plant. "The check valve keeps the dirty water from flowing back," he said.

The check valves look like giant hockey pucks, and Kasperowicz said with the perforation, water was able to flow backwards and manifest itself as a puddle at the intersection of 3A and Pond Street.

Kasperowicz said the fire department was extremely helpful and was able to divert the dirty water away from the storm grates, which eventually lead to the water supply. He said in addition, the water department came to the scene and sprinkled chlorine in the dirty water puddles to kill any bacteria that might be present. "We even reported it to the DEP, just to be good doobies," he said.

Register to vote for Special Town Election

Friday, April 29, will be the last day to register to vote for the upcoming May 21, Special Town Election. Registration sessions will be held at the Town Clerk's office on April 29, from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home. Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

Elections are generally held at the Town Hall Auditorium. Because of a previously scheduled event, the election will be held at the Second Congregational Church (which is adjacent to the Town Hall) from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Polling site change

A Special Town Election will be held Saturday, May 21, to vote on two questions.

COOK PROJECT ON OUR TOWN

Next Monday at 9pm and Tuesday at 9:30pm on OUR TOWN, Mark and Pat sit down with Karen Quigley to sort through the recent Cook Estate Developments while Roving Reporter Rich Ofsthun presents a recap of his season's best.

Watch a new show starting Thursday, May 12 at 8:30 p.m. when the upcoming $400,000 town operational budget and 50/50 sewer overrides are discussed.

Stay tuned Cohasset and Stay informed! All on Comcast channel 10.

Question 1 is a general operating override. Question 2 is a debt exclusion override.

Elections are generally held at the Town Hall Auditorium. Because of a previously scheduled event, voting for both precincts will be held at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., (which is adjacent to the Town Hall) from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Water main flushing

The Water Department will perform its semi-annual flushing of water mains through May 31. Flushing will generally take place Monday through Thursday between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. In general, the flushing program will be conducted according to the sequence indicated below:

- King Street and Beechwood Street Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Scituate line and Brewster Road Areas;
- Chief Justice Cushing Highway from Pond Street to Hingham Lumber and Sohier Street Area;
- Lower King Street, Cedar Street, Forest Avenue and North Main Street to Ripley Road Areas;
- Pond Street, Clay Spring Road, Pleasant Street and Hillside Areas;
- Ripley Road, Highland Avenue, Beach Street, Elm Street and Atlantic Avenue Areas;
- Border Street, Summer Street and South Main Street Areas;
- Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road and Linden Drive Areas.

Temporary street signs will be placed strategically around the affected area on the day of flushing. Notice will also be provided on the local cable access channel, Channel 10. Residents should monitor the cable channel for schedule changes.

Please call the Water Department at (781) 383-0057 with any questions.

Mother Dearest

Mother's Day is Sunday, and here are some quotes that say it all about what an important role mothers play in all of our lives. Happy Mother's Day!

"The Mother's heart is the child's schoolroom." H. W. Beecher.

"Let France have good mothers, and she will have good sons." Napoleon I.

"All that I am, or hope to be, I owe to my angel mother." Abraham Lincoln.

"To describe my mother would be to write about a hurricane in its perfect power." Maya Angelou.

"Grown don't mean a thing to a mother. A child is a child. They get bigger, older, but grown - in my heart it don't mean a thing." Toni Morrison.

"As a mother, even at the risk of her own life, loves and protects a child, so let a man cultivate love without measure toward the world." Buddha.

"The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world." W. R. Wallace.

"A mother who is really a mother is never free." Honore DeBalzac.

"Men are what their mothers made them." Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"By and large, mothers and housewives are the only workers who do not have regular time off. They are the great vacationless class." Anne Morrow Lindbergh.

"The most important thing a father can do for his children is to love their mother." Author unknown.

"No matter how old a mother is, she watches her middle-aged children for signs of improvement." Florida Scott-Maxwell.

"We have only one mom, one mother in this world. Don't wait for tomorrow to tell mom you love her." Author unknown.

"Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee Calls back the lovely April of her prime." William Shakespeare.

Alternative energy committee

TO THE EDITOR:

The alternative energy committee is looking for a few volunteers to serve on this exciting committee. So far four people have volunteered. There are openings for five more.

This committee will be looking at all types of alternative energy for electricity. This could be wind turbine, solar panels, water energy, buying our electricity in a different way than we do know. The sky is the limit for the committee.

Last year alone we spent almost $56,000 just on street lights. This committee can look at these expenses and see how we could reduce them. I saw in the paper today that the electricians union off the southeast express way in Boston is going to put up a wind turbine. It will generate enough electricity for their building and the school next to it.

This committee could be a lot of fun and hopefully it will get started soon. All you need to do is contact the Selectmen's office in writing to be appointed.

Vote yes on override to protect our schools

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm going to vote in-favor of the approximately $400k override for The Cohasset Town Budget. Here's why:

My daughters are in college now, so I could "take the money and run." But that would be very unfair. Every child deserves the great education of the sorts my daughters received in the Cohasset Public Schools, where they were educated from kindergarten right through to graduating from Cohasset Middle High School.

The Cohasset Public Schools prepared them for colleges very well. I'm proud of both the Cohasset Public Schools, and my daughters Lydia and Jessie Guild.

On May 22, 2005, Lydia will be graduating from the University of Vermont with honors (thank you Cohasset Public Schools). Jessie is in her first year at Colby College in Waterville, Maine. She loves it. Colby is challenging, but the Cohasset Public Schools prepared her to standout and to continue to excel. For her first semester, she got on the dean's list, as did a number of Jessie's former classmates at Cohasset High School at their respective colleges. An impressive number made the grade.

Living in Cohasset has been the best decision of my life. I had no idea years ago just how good a choice Cohasset is, but my gut told me that this is the place.

We owe it to current students and future students to continue Cohasset's tradition of education excellence. Real estate prices in Cohasset are higher than in surrounding towns. Discerning home buyers pay a premium to live in a town with an outstanding school system, as any real estate broker will tell you, so vote in favor of the over-ride. The money will come back to you, when you sell your house. If you want to stay in your house, but the taxes are more than is in your budget, then take out a reverse mortgage. With a reverse mortgage you get cash, when you take out the mortgage loan with your house as collateral and the loan is paid off, when your house is sold.

Because you voted in favor of this override, there will be plenty of equity in your home for a reverse mortgage. We want you to stay, so please look into a reverse mortgage, if you are thinking about leaving. Don't go.

In a "Narrative History of Cohasset - Volume III," the author, Jackie Dormitzer chose these lines attributed to Van Wyck Brooks as an epigraph - "I predict that on the last day on this planet, when the sun hangs cold in the sky, only two men will be left to face it. One will be a Chinaman, and if you ask the other he will say, 'O yes, I was born in Cohasset.' And more significantly, he was educated in the Cohasset Public Schools.

In order to maintain and improve upon our town's greatness, please vote in-favor of the upcoming $400K override.

Classic 'bait and switch' at selectmen's meeting

TO THE EDITOR:

I just returned home from the selectmen's meeting at Cohasset Town Hall and I am dumbfounded. I distinctly remember attending the town meeting when the Cook Estate was being discussed and voted upon. One element of concern to Fairoaks Lane residents, conservationists and other town citizens is the land owned by the Cook family on the Fairoaks side of Sohier Street. More than 50 percent of Fairoaks Lane residents and other citizens of Cohasset attended that town meeting and were assured that the Cook land on that side of Sohier would not be developed. In fact, it was voted on by the citizens of Cohasset as part of the overall RFP which would be sent out to developers.

The town would buy the land and then resell it to the developer with the highest bid with the provision that this part of the land would not be developed. This land would be preserved as conservation land. The citizens voted on this. Isn't this why we go to town meeting in the first place? That is the beauty of democracy.

Okay, so here's the part where I become dumbfounded. As I said, I just came from the selectmen's meeting. Apparently, our new selectman Gary Vanderweil has proposed that the selectmen override the people's decision and look at that land, which we voted would become conservation, for erecting buildings. He stated that one or two abutters should not get in the way of decisions that must be made by the selectmen. He also made the suggestion that the citizens who sit in on the selectmen's meeting (and there we're more than 15 present) should remain silent at those meetings and that perhaps a monthly meeting could be established for the people to make their views known.

One or two abutters. Give me a break! We're talking about a town vote here. We're talking about town meeting where the good citizens give up a good part of their day to vote on these things. This is a classic bait and switch! Obviously, Mr. Vanderweil believes he is running a company where he is CEO and we take orders from him. He made the comment that in congress, the common people don't get to have their say while they are in the room. According to him, we should run selectman's meetings this way as well. Who is this guy and where did he come from? Cohasset is not Washington, DC. Even Congress holds hearings with the people! Wait…I remember now. Isn't Gary Vanderweil a member of The Cohasset Land Trust? Doesn't he bill himself as a conservationist? Well, how ironic. What's the hidden agenda here?

Rob Spofford vehemently disagreed with Mr. Vanderweil. Spofford made it clear that when he became a selectman, he was elected to the honored position of "listening to his constituents." That's how good government should work. In a small town like Cohasset, it is even more important for town officials to listen to the citizens.

The people of Cohasset should not take this lightly. If the selectmen want to change this, it should go in front of a special hearing or back to town meeting where it can be voted on by the citizens once again. I honestly don't think the people of Cohasset will take this very well. The feeling would be that if the selectmen and other town officials don't like the original vote, they can re-vote again to try to bring it back into their court.

Yes we need the green space on that side of Sohier Street especially since the other side will be developed and because of traffic issues as well. But we need to preserve that land for a more important reason than pure conservationism. We need to uphold the decision we made as taxpayers and citizens of Cohasset. We need the town meeting and the voice of the people to mean something so that the personal agendas of the people who we vote into office will not become law.

Community support was there in spades

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee wishes to thank the many people who helped make its 4th Annual Yard Sale on April 30th another rollicking success.

With all proceeds dedicated in advance to the Committee's scholarship fund, once again community support was there in spades. We collected and sold bushels of great re-saleable stuff, all donated by hard-working members and generous friends, and we had fun doing it.

As always, the biggest winner will be the Cohasset graduating senior who becomes next year's recipient of the 28th annual Joseph F.Walsh, III Memorial Scholarship – with our best wishes for an exciting and engaging future.

Half-day kindergarten is at risk

COMMENTARY

BETH TARPEY

As the parent of a child entering kindergarten in September 2005, I fully expected that my daughter would attend the traditional half-day program at the Osgood School. While I was aware that the school department was advocating the implementation of a "Pilot Full-Day Kindergarten Program," it was commonly understood that both programs would be offered during the trial period. Then, as is typically the case, they would be evaluated and judged upon their merits.

Fair enough, but unfortunately not the case. It became abundantly clear at the school sponsored Kindergarten Orientation Meeting of April 13, that the school administration has an agenda which includes the elimination of the traditional half-day program and the immediate implementation of the full-day kindergarten program. Armed with research "findings" drawn from studies of full-day programs from other districts, the school administration extolled the benefits of full-day kindergarten while denigrating the value of traditional half-day programs.

The school administration has carefully created the impression that if parents do not choose the full-day curriculum, their children will be at risk academically as well as socially.

Although left unsaid, the data supporting this research presumably comes from the 55 percent of Massachusetts districts that currently offer full-day kindergarten. A review of this list indicates that almost all are considerably larger than our district and many are located in urban areas. It is fair to say that the benefits of full-day kindergarten in these districts will be much greater than in an already high achieving system such as Cohasset.

The school administration has carefully created the impression that if parents do not choose the full-day curriculum, their children will be at risk academically as well as socially. The administration further fueled these fears with its announced intention of "integrating" the half-day students into a full-day program. Parents were told they could come and "dismiss" their children at midday. This plan is totally unacceptable. Integration of the half-day students with those in the full-day pilot program would create two distinct groups of students in the same classroom. The flaws inherent in this expedient approach are obvious. One, if not both groups, is bound to be shortchanged.

There is a strong core of parents who believe in the merits of the traditional kindergarten program. There are also many parents who are "on the fence" and wondering which way to choose. The administration has not presented a clear plan for the full-day curriculum; the academic and social benefits of this program have been overstated, and the administration is playing to the fears of these parents that their child will somehow be at a disadvantage going into first grade.

Children enter school at many different levels of readiness academically and socially. These differences largely disappear by third grade whether or not your child attends a full-day kindergarten. The school administration needs to continue the existing half-day kindergarten program while piloting a limited full-day program through its initial phase of developing a curriculum and assessing its impact on the students. This would provide a clear choice between two distinct options as promised when the full-day pilot program was proposed.

Beth Tarpey lives at 12 Bates Lane.

Flap over email memo is misguided

COMMENTARY

RONNIE MCMORRIS

Last November, as the town prepared for Fall Town Meeting, as well as a special forum of all Boards on sewering issues, Town Counsel was asked to respond to a series of questions. On Nov. 9, he drafted three memos as part of an on-going dialogue addressing wastewater issues in town and what options exist. The memos also repeated the four- part solution, (including a legal sewer solution for Cook), that he drafted in cooperation with the Sewer Commission throughout the summer of 2004.

Questions regarding the legal implications of a variety of wastewater solutions for Cook were discussed including, a possible wastewater disposal site at Wheelwright Park; a sewer connection through school property at Deer Hill; Cook's connecting to a private sewer line to Hull; as well as negotiating with Hull for additional capacity. Many of these options were discussed at the Nov. 22 forum hosted by the Advisory Committee.

Taken in their entirety, the conclusions to be drawn from these memos are the same as have been discussed publicly many times. Private sewers are prohibited by Sewer Commission regulations. However a public sewer connection to Hull, negotiated by the Town and formalized in an inter-municipal agreement was more than appropriate. It would also have benefited homes on Old Coach Road and parts of Forest Avenue expansion areas in the Agreement for Judgement.

In a frenzy to tarnish the reputation of those of us who are advocates for seniors in this community, the memo was misread, yet published and spread via e-mail.

This past week a Selectman admitted distributing one of these memos to the public. This memo from Town Counsel, the second in a series of three that day (the third of which was individually sent to every member of the Board and made specific reference to previous memos), confirmed the illegality of private sewers. It also made clear that a solution could not be found without the cooperation of the Sewer Commission and discussed other matters, including legal strategy.

This memo has been waved like some smoking gun by some who accuse Michael Sullivan and me of pursuing a solution that had been deemed illegal by town counsel and keeping it a secret. This is preposterous and blatantly untrue. Anyone actually looking for the truth, who takes the time and effort to read the memo, in its entirety, will agree. Perhaps, given one piece of the entire picture, someone could misunderstand or misinterpret the full context of the opinions. Put all the pieces together and the picture is clear. In a frenzy to tarnish the reputation of those of us who are advocates for seniors in this community, the memo was misread, yet published and spread via e-mail.

This is a time when our community needs to come together to resolve issues like the balancing of affordable housing needs and growth. We also are grappling with declining revenues and cut backs in services across the board. We need leaders and thoughtful citizens who will bring us together to find solutions, not who rip us apart with innuendo, misdirection and personal attacks. The Cook project can and should be the pride of our community!

Down with the home run!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Robert Lipsyte, the onetime sports columnist who quit the New York Times to write novels, has come up with a proposal that is all but guaranteed to end baseball's not-too-enthusiastic struggles with steroids.

He wants to outlaw the home run.

Under the Lipsyte rule, a ball hit over the fence would be out and the big league record for home runs would revert to the 61 hit by Roger Maris of the Evil Empire back in 1961, presumably without the aid of any chemical stronger than sour mash.

Right on, Bob, and I say this as a guy whose only career home run came on a field off Bickford Road in East Braintree when Holly Black couldn't find the ball in the brush in Franny Nordahl's backyard. That field today is called Cape Cod Lane, but I digress . . .

The home run has been what's wrong with baseball ever since baseball's owners discovered that large numbers of people are willing to spend even larger sums of money to watch that fellow Ruth hit balls out of the park.

Maybe if we wound the yarn a little tighter around the core, they said, and outlawed those pitched balls that did tricks like the spitter and the shine ball and kept putting fresh, white balls into play, batters could hit them farther.

The result was 54 homers by Babe Ruth (talk about sour mash!) and a whole new game that was baseball in name only.

"The grand swat has marginalized thinking, finesse and planning in America's pastime," wrote Lipsyte in USA Today, "and as life imitates art, the homer may just be a kind of metaphorical weapon of mass destruction. As such, we should get rid of it."

I'm not encouraged that the Lipsyte rule will ever be adopted by the lords of baseball. For the past 80-odd years, their every action has been directed toward helping their hired hands jack another one into the bleachers.

Remember Greenberg Gardens?

When the Detroit Tigers sold Hank Greenberg, who once hit 58 homers for them, to the Pittsburgh Pirates, the Pirates moved the left field fence in 30 feet and called the new home run territory "Greenberg Gardens."

Greenberg lasted only a year with the Pirates but they still had Ralph Kiner, another 50-homer man, so they left the fence where it was and rechristened the area "Kiner Korner."

"Home run hitters drive Cadillacs," said Kiner. "Singles hitters drive Fords."

Before Ruth hit 29 in 1919, home runs were rare. The Chicago White Sox as a team hit only six when they won the American League pennant in 1906. Frank Baker's 15-year lifetime total of 93 earned him the nickname "Home Run."

The major league record was 27 set by Ned Williamson of Chicago in 1884 when the Cubs played their home games in Lakefront Park with its left field fence only 180 feet from home plate. He hit all but two of the 27 at home.

"You like offense, you loved Lakefront," said Bill Veeck, baseball promoter extraordinaire. "It was so small that early homers counted as doubles."

Not a bad idea! What do you say, Bob?

HEALTH NOTES

Volunteerism and emergency preparedness

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This week, the Local Emergency Planning Committee had its regular quarterly meeting. This in response to a growing recognition that the Town would be defenseless in the face of any of a large number and diversity of threats of low probability. Threats like blizzards, tsunamis, oil spills, plane crashes, terrorist activity and so on.

One of the things left by 9/11 is a recognition that sometimes our plans are governed by events beyond our control. When something like the fire at the Congregational Church occurs, it's an opportunity to think about our emergency services and the part they play in our daily lives. The police, with their new chief and new look are certainly before us. The Fire Department is no less deserving of our recognition and support.

The recent completion of the first phase of defibrillator training is an important first step, but there is a need for us to better understand our relationship with the Fire Department and the emergency preparedness functions necessary for a town like Cohasset. Many long for the old "call fire" department and the citizen volunteers who used to gather to fight fires in small towns. However, progress has changed the role for volunteer services related to emergencies. In the first place, it's generally considered necessary to have expensive and complicated equipment to efficiently fight fires and deal with health emergencies in Cohasset. To operate this material, special training and skills are necessary.

It's interesting to note, however, that there is a minimum number of personnel needed to man a fire station. A figure which has remained the same regardless of the size of the town to which the unit belongs. Fire stations in Boston, New Orleans, Quincy, and Cohasset are all broken into units of about 33 paid employees. There may be more such units in larger cities, but the number in a unit maintaining fire response is about the same. It is also a fact that the shift structure of a fire fighting unit makes it difficult maintain all the appropriate necessary skills on a 24-hour basis. When other duties related to the primary purpose of fighting fires and emergency response become necessary, it becomes difficult to find the personnel to accomplish them.

But the need still exists for a substantial cadre of emergency volunteer personnel with very special training and skills to support our paid fire and police personnel.

For example, defibrillator training is a simple task, but with his task comes the several administrative tasks of defibrillator maintenance, training records, location and periodic inspection of defibrillators, maintaining a structure of medical diagnosticians available to review and oversee their use in an emergency. This is an additional responsibility for fire personnel. In addition, the training organization needed to support emergency services requires a substantial organization at the state and county level to ensure the availability of appropriate equipment for emergencies and the people who know how to use it.

Also, let's face it firefighters and cops, in order to do their jobs have to have, if not different personalities, certainly a different outlook. They need to be risk takers ready to accept situations of extreme danger and intense activity interspersed with long periods of preparation, training, and boredom; and also the ability to adapt to a diversity of different roles.

It's true that the old fashioned call firefighter with his hat and fire axe ready at the door is gone. But the need still exists for a substantial cadre of emergency volunteer personnel with very special training and skills to support our paid fire and police personnel. Cohasset is lucky to have so many people who pitch in to help with the many tasks involved in its day-to-day operation. We have literally dozens of committees and boards on which our citizens serve. And, in fact, there's work for every type of temperament. We have a Harbor Committee, Advisory Board, a seniors committee, drivers for Meals on Wheels and Fish, there's a group for every taste.

For emergency situations we need still another group of volunteers. These people will provide administrative support at the base of operations in the event of an emergency; they will provide communications links between Town staff, fire and police personnel. They will man backup facilities such as the secondary response center at the Water Department. They will need to be trained and to train to help paid emergency personnel in dozens of ways. This in response to their regular jobs. It's a certainty that these people will be available in Cohasset when the call goes out for the special types of volunteers needed to support our emergency personnel.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Concerned Taxpayers group meets May 10

The Cohasset Concerned Taxpayers is hosting a forum on May 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers Cottage to discuss the crisis in the budget with impending yearly operational overrides and the impact on services and taxes with the push to quickly increase population by hooking up Cook, Avalon and Cedarmere and thus all other developments to the Hull treatment plant.

Answers as to why the town needs two very similar senior projects, Cook and Cedarmere, that will be ready for occupancy at approximately the same time and how the town will deal with a potential huge increase in educational needs from increased sewered development and the turnover of senior houses to families will be pursued.

Also to be discussed is the school budget and if all avenues have been explored to mitigate the soon to be needed $1 million annual school budget increases that were disclosed by the Superintendent.

Town officials have been invited and all are welcome to attend. For further information call 781-383-0024.

LIBRARY CORNER

Spanish take-home packs — Come to the library and check out the Spanish language concept backpacks for young children. Each take-home activity pack features write and wipe cards with simple step by step instructions for completing the activities. Kits also contain manipulatives, puzzles and familiar children's literature in Spanish. Parent instructions are included. Spanish take-home kits include the following concepts: Alphabet, Opposites, Writing, Size, Shape, Counting, Sounds, Obstacle Course, Lacing, Positional Words and Addition and Subtraction. You do not have to be fluent in Spanish to enjoy these kits. Spanish Take-Home backpacks are located on the "Cultural Connections" A-frame display unit. Spanish Take-Home kits were funded by an LSTA grant awarded to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library by the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners under the provisions of the Institute of Museum and Library Services.

Music with MamaSteph — MamaSteph will be performing Monday, May 9, and Monday, May 16, at 10:30 a.m. in the Meeting Room. This is a drop-in lapsit program for young children and their caregivers. All communities and ages welcome. This program is funded by the "Friends of the Cohasset Library."

College admissions 101 — College admissions consultant Marlena Alex will present an overview of the college admissions process Monday, May 16, at 7:30 p.m. in the Meeting Room. Geared to high school students and parents just beginning to think about applying to college, the program will include information on how to come up with a list of schools, standardized testing, interviews, completing applications, working with your guidance counselor and how college admissions offices make their selections. All are welcome.

Book sale — The Friends of the Cohasset Library will be holding a book sale Saturday, May 14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The sale will be held on the second floor of Our World Children's Discovery Museum, which will be holding its estate sale at the same time. Access to the book sale is through the Children's Room in the library or through the museum entrances. Prices are a bargain: $1 for hardcover books, DVDs, CDs and books on tape; $.25 for children's books and paperbacks; or five items for $1. From 3 to 4 p.m. take advantage of a special "Buck-a-Bag" promotion or buy a Cohasset Library book bag for $15 and fill the bag with books at no additional cost. All proceeds from the sale will go to the Friends of the Library who provide funding for the library's Children's Programs, Museum Pass Program and various other community and outreach programs for library patrons. For more information call the library at 781-383-1348.

Happy Mother's Day!

The second-graders in Lauren Cook's class at the Osgood School share their thoughts about why mothers are special.

My mom is the best mom in the world. She has short brown hair and pretty blue eyes. My mom is nice, smart, thoughtful and kind. At home my mom cleans and makes dinner for us. My mom also works at the Silver Spoon Restaurant. My mom helps me a lot. She helps me with my homework. My mom takes walks with me and I go grocery shopping with her. My mom makes me feel loved when she hugs and kisses me and says,

"I love you." I love my mom so much!

— Corianne Ahrens

My mom is very special. My mom has dark brown eyes. They are sparkly. She has beautiful brown curly hair. She is pretty inside and out. My mom is awesome at singing and acting. My mom does acting a lot. She drives us to skating every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. She cooks awesome food every day. When I am sad she helps me. She helps me with my homework. I like to shop with her. I like to go to her play practices. I feel loved when she kisses me goodnight. I feel loved when she reads with me. My mom is the best!

— Clara Baumgarten

My mom is really special to me, and my family. She is kindhearted and a really nice mom. My mom is very beautiful. She has dark shiny, curly hair and a big smile. She is a really great mom on the inside and outside. For work she takes care of me, and my sister Sara and our kitty Fenway. She makes me great lunches for school. My mom always cares about me. She helps me with my homework, hockey, and with getting dressed for hockey, and for school. I love to play games with her like: Sorry, Battleship and Connect Four. She makes me feel loved by helping me when I am sick and when I have a problem. My mom makes me feel loved when she snuggles with me in bed and reads to me and when we talk together. I would never want another mom. She is the best. I love her!

— Charlie Blackington

My mom is special. She has long brown curly, curly hair. She has dark chocolate shiny eyes. She is kindhearted and she's nice. My mommy works inside our house and she works in schools. She helps when I am sick and when I get hurt. I like to go to the beach with her and I like when she cuddles in bed with me and reads a book. She makes me feel loved when she gives me a hug and a kiss. I love my Mommy.

— Alexa Bleicken

My mom is special. My mom has blue eyes. She has beautiful freckles on her face. She has brownish-blondish hair. My mom stays at my house and works outside and inside. My mom helps me to do my homework. I like to ride bikes with her and sing with her. I love to go shopping with my mom. My mom makes me feel loved when she says she loves me and tells me prayers every night. My mom makes me feel loved when she helps me when I get hurt. I love my mom so, so, so, so, so much!

— Audrey Brown

My mom is special. My mom has blond hair and she does not have glasses. She has straight hair. My mom is sweet, smart and kindhearted. She cleans up the yard and paints the walls. She sells houses. She drives me, and my 5 brothers to school. She cleans up all the toys. My mom brings me to the library and helps me with my homework. She feeds me and helps me when I get hurt. I like going rollerblading and on bike rides with her.

I like drawing pictures with her. I feel loved by her when she hugs me and when I am crying. I love my mom and she loves me.

— Deirdre Dorian

My mom is really nice and kind. My mom has blue eyes and blond hair. My mom is kind on the inside and nice on the outside. My mom stays home and does chores. My mom helps me with homework. My mom and me like playing Block Us, Goblet and more. My mom takes me places and gives me a hug or a kiss when I go to school. That's how she makes me feel loved. I love my mom a lot!

— Jordan Bryan

My mom is the best mom in the world. My mom is tall and skinny. She has blue eyes and beautiful brown curly hair. My mom's job is to drive a school bus for Cohasset. My mom helps me with my homework and she helps me with my projects at home. I like going on bike rides with her and coloring with her. She does the best pictures. My mom makes me feel loved when she cuddles with me at night and when she tucks me in and kisses me.

I love my mom.

— Christina Dow

My mom is an awesome mom. She has green eyes and long brown hair and she's beautiful. My mom's work is taking care of me and my sister and my twin brothers.

My mom's other work is making dinner and helping me pack my snack. She helps me by helping me spell words and by helping me with my homework. I like to go to the pool and beach with her. She makes me feel loved when she reads me one of my favorite stories. I love my mom!

— Patrick Federle

Happy Mother's Day!

FROM MOTHER'S DAY, PAGE 12

My mom is very, very special. She has beautiful curly gray hair with bright blue eyes. She is funny and she is very nice. My mom makes dinner for me, and my sisters every night and every lunch. My mom helps every time I am sick and when I need something.

I like when she drives me to swimming alone and when she brings me to the library alone! When she smiles it makes me feel great and when she puts me to bed I feel loved. I love my Mom!

— Jacqueline Hart

My mom is special. My mom is nice. My mom is beautiful on the outside and really, really nice on the inside. My mom has straight brown soft hair. My mom has glasses.

My mom is one of the presidents of the school. My mom helps me by driving me to hockey, soccer and baseball. She helps me with my homework and she takes care of me when I am hurt. I like it when my mom takes me to the mall and gets ice cream with me. When my mom plays with me and tucks me in at night I feel loved. I really, really, really love my mom!

— Connor Hayden

My mom is very cool. She has blue eyes and beautiful hair. My mom is funny. My mom works at South Shore Ford and she is a good worker. When I am sick with a virus my mom takes care of me and gives me medicine. My mom helps me when I need help. I like it when my mom takes me to the zoo and when she brings me to Florida once a year. My mom makes me feel loved when she lets me play with my friends and when she lets me watch TV sometimes at night. My mom is very cool.

— James Hynes

My mom is a special person. My mom has long brown hair and my mom is thin and my mom is very pretty. She prepares meals and she cleans the house and does the laundry. She helps me with homework and she answers questions and she drives me places. I like to play checkers with my mom and I like to go on walks with my mom and ride bikes with my mom. My mom makes me feel loved by hugging me and taking care of me.

I love my mom.

— Derek Jamieson

My mom is the best. She is funny, kindhearted and a good cook. She has brown eyes and a thin waist. She works at home and makes dinner and does the dishes. She helps me with my homework and my problems. I like to play with her and snuggle with her. She makes me feel loved by kissing me and giving me a hug. I love my mom!

— Chris Lydon

My mom is special. She has brown eyes, light blonde hair and a nice smile. She's kindhearted and very thoughtful and fun. She is a dental hygienist and she cleans the house. She helps me do my homework and she helps me when I'm sad. I like to play games with her and I like to talk with her. I love her very, very, very much. I love my mom.

— Nick Lydon

My mom is very special. My mom has long brown straight hair. She has pretty blue eyes.

She is smart and kindhearted and is nice to me. My mom is an antique dealer. She helps me with my homework and helps me when I get hurt. I like to cook with my mom and I like to go to the aquarium in Boston with her. I like it when she takes me into bed and when she takes me to the beach. I love my mom.

— Lily McCarthy

My mom is the nicest mom in the world. She has the eye color blue-green. She has shoulder length hair that is shiny brown streaks of blond. Her skin color is apricot or peach. She invented the "Panda Puffer" and she works at the Sport's Closet. Sometimes she helps in our school by putting up bulletin boards and collecting box tops for a raffle. When I get hurt she bandages me. I like to go to the mall with her and I like riding bikes with her. She makes me feel loved when she snuggles up with me and when she lets me have sleepovers. I absolutely love my mom!

— Alexandra Raymond

My mom is very, very, very funny. My mom has brown eyes and brown hair. My mom is very smart, funny, helpful and nice. My mom does crafts and makes candles for work. When I get hurt my mom helps me by getting me a Band-Aid. I like to cuddle with my mom. My mom makes me feel loved by tucking me into bed and kissing me goodnight.

I love my mom.

— James Torres

My mom is fun and funny. She has beautiful lovely brown eyes. She's short but I love her anyway. My mom works in the house and she works at Atlantica. Whenever I get hurt she helps me and then she puts a bandage on me. She takes me to "Over the Moon" every Thursday and she helps me with my homework and she helps me with problems. At night she gives me a hug and a kiss when she leaves, and that's how she makes me feel loved.

I love my mom and she loves me.

Dog training classes offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer throughout the summer, dog obedience classes taught by Happy-Dog Training School.

For both the beginner class and the obedience with distractions classes, dog owners are required to have their dogs shots/inoculations up to date. Class times are 6 to 7 and 7 to 8 p.m. Distractions classes will begin session two on June 15.

The beginner class will teach basic obedience and responsible ownership to novice pet owners. Helpful hints on ownership, voice directions, basic commands and exercises beneficial to those thinking about eventually showing their dog, will be included. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class. For all classes the fee is $100 for the five-week, one-hour per-week program.

To register call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. A new session will begin approximately every five weeks. Classes are limited in size and participants will be accepted on a first call, firstenrolled basis. Dogs need to be 3 months of age.

"NOW, SHE LOVES TO LISTEN TO ME"

Frankly, I thought she was really getting tired of me and I was quite concerned at how things were going. She always seemed to "snap" at me. I knew that she missed a few words here and there, but, I didn't know that she couldn't hear me very well, at all. The people at Mass Audiology were able to show us just how little she heard and how much better her hearing could be. It was amazing and we are both so glad that we called. If you are wondering about your loved one's hearing, don't wait. Have it checked, it's FREE!

After a win over Abington on Tuesday, Nils Sceery and his Cohasset tennis teammates are gearing up for the season's home stretch. Next week, the Skippers travel to Harwich (Monday) and Hanover (Tuesday) before a big rematch at Norwell on Thursday.

A Grimm outlook for laxers

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

Michael Grimm continues to shine for the Cohasset boys lacrosse team.

The freshman joined junior Aidan Buick to score a team-high three goals in last week's 11-4 win over Norwell. He notched two goals, again a team-high, in Tuesday's 10-4 loss to Marshfield.

Buick and senior Jake Previte scored the other goals against the Rams, who improved to 6-3 on the year.

"We got behind in a hurry, but we played pretty well in the second half," said Cohasset head coach Stu Curran. "Marshfield is a very solid team this year."

The Skippers, who were 5-4 heading into last night's game with powerhouse Hingham, were within two goals of Marshfield after three periods, 6-4. The Rams then got a couple fast-break goals to start the fourth period, letting "the horse out of the barn" in the words of Curran.

The Cohasset coach was pleased with his team's defensive effort last Thursday against Norwell. The Skippers also received balanced scoring, as Previte and Jon Grimm each scored two goals to join Buick and Michael Grimm as Cohasset's top scorers.

Senior goalie Chris Simms continued his recent strong play with eight saves.

Cohasset was a bit on the shorthanded side these last two games due to a few injuries and illnesses, but acquitted themselves well. The Skippers will need some of those bodies back with a busy three-game schedule next week: Hanover (Tuesday, 4), Sandwich (Thursday, 6) and at Nantucket (Saturday, 3).

Curran says he likes where his team is at right now.

"The kids are working hard and keeping positive," he said. "We're 5-4, probably a little ahead of where we were at this point last year. We're remaining optimistic as the season goes on."

Straughn pitches well in loss to Abington

By T.J. Byrne
CORRESPONDENT

Although both teams entered their game with under .500 records, Abington and Cohasset still have plans to make a late season run to qualify for post-season play.

On paper, the Skippers were the favorite, with their ace and best player Ted Staughn taking the mound. The Boston College-bound hurler has a nice combination of a fastball and breaking ball, which has posed trouble in the past to a young Green Wave lineup. Abington has started as many as six sophomores this year.

As Abington prepared to face Cohasset's hard thrower, the Skippers had an entirely different match-up to face. Sophomore Ed Campbell, making only his second start of the season, took the mound for the Green Wave. Campbell is a rarity at any level of baseball. He is a pitcher who can consistently and effectively throw a knuckleball.

The end result was a 6-4 Abington victory Tuesday afternoon at Memorial Field. The win improves the Green Wave to 5-8, while the Skippers loss dropped them at the time to 2-6.

"It was a very well-pitched game," said Cohasset head coach Al Gallotta. "We just made too many mistakes to take advantage of the pitching."

Abington coach Steve Perakslis agreed with Gallotta about the pitching performance.

"We were nervous about Straughn before the game and we should have been," Perakslis said. "He pitched a tremendous game, but so did Campbell. He is so smart out there because he knows how to mix in a fastball and a curveball with his knuckleball."

Campbell's first start last week versus Harwich was hampered a bit with four earned runs. In the loss, Campbell pitched five strong innings and gave up just one earned run.

"Ed is always right around the plate, which makes him a very tough pitcher to hit against," said Perakslis.

Cohasset took the lead in the top of the third when the Skippers' number nine hitter Stefan Parnell drove a Campbell fastball past a diving Abington centerfielder and raced around the bases for a solo homerun. A fielding error, followed by a Straughan single, gave Coahsset runners at first and second.

A single up the middle by Luis Blanco scored Tim Pilczak to give Cohasset a 2-1 lead. Straughn later scored on a bloop single by younger brother Brian Straughn to right field to make it 3-1 Skippers.

Abington would get one run back in the bottom of the inning. James Sheehan lead off with a walk and would reach second with a stolen base. A passed ball advanced Sheehan to third.

"It was a very well-pitched game. We just made too many mistakes to take advantage of the pitching."
Cohasset coach Al Gallotta

Sheehan scored on a perfectly placed bunt by Mike Dyer, who scored Abington's first run of the game, to complete the suicide squeeze. The aggressive play closed the gap, 3-2.

The Green Wave took the lead in the very next inning. Tim Wells reached first on a dropped strike three, allowing Abington an extra at-bat and baserunner. John Creamer took advantage with a two-run homerun to centerfield to give the Green Wave the lead back at 4-3.

Although Cohasset would tie the game up in the fifth inning, they missed a chance to break it open. Two fielding errors and a Brian Straughn single loaded the bases with just one out. A Chris Ofsthun sacrifice fly knocked in Pilczak to even things up at 4-4.

Campbell got the next hitter to ground out to end the inning, but found himself in trouble again in the sixth.

A hit batsman gave Cohasset runners at first and second base. A wild pitch, Campbell's only one of the game, advanced the runners up a base to second and third.

Campbell got the next batter with a strikeout and got Ted Straughn to fly out deep to center to end the Skippers' threat.

"Ed's strikeout in the sixth was the biggest play of the game," said Perakslis. "He made a couple of mistakes in that inning, but he battled back to prevent any runs."

Abington took the lead in the sixth on a couple of Skipper miscues. Devon Davis was hit by a pitch to lead the inning off and reached second on a stolen base. A Dyer drive was knocked down by the Cohasset shortstop behind second, but was kicked loose by his foot. The kick allowed Davis to score to make it 5-4.

With two outs and Wells at third base, a dropped strike three, the third of the game, should have ended the inning. Instead, the batter safely reached first, allowing Wells to score and increase Abington's lead to 6-4.

Despite the strong pitching performances, the star of the game may have been Abington's catcher Wells. The sophomore played stellar behind the plate catching Campbell's knuckleball.

"Tim is the best catcher in the league right now," said Perakslis. "He had no past balls today and consistently throws runners out on the bases."

Straughn struck out seven batters in seven innings of work, while Campbell sat down four.

Cohasset 5, Mashpee 4

The Skippers got back in the win column Wednesday with a 10-inning 5-4 win over the Falcons.

Parnell got the game-winning hit in the bottom of the 10th to improve Cohasset's overall record to 3-6.

Chris Bryan pitched nine strong innings on the mound for the Skippers. Brian Hill pitched the top of the 10th in relief to earn the win.

Cohasset was scheduled to host Carver yesterday, and have three games next week: at Harwich on Monday, at Hull on Tuesday, and at Norwell on Thursday.

Balanced effort helps Cohasset defeat Marshfield, reach .500 mark

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

At the halfway point of the season, the Cohasset girls lacrosse team is where they want to be: on pace to make the state tournament.

Tuesday's 11-5 win over Marshfield improved the Skippers' record to 4-4-1. Of course, there is still a lot of work left to be done.

But with what appear to be some winnable games remaining on the schedule, Cohasset appears to have a good shot of at least maintaining the .500 record they need to qualify for the postseason.

Yesterday's game at Hingham figured to be a challenge, as is next week's schedule. Cohasset has four games in six days: Monday against Plymouth, Tuesday at Hanover, Thursday against Sandwich, and Saturday at Nantucket. All games are

COASTAL STARS YOUTH HOCKEY

An open letter to the Coastal Stars Squirt B-2 Team: South Shore Conference Squirt B Champions

To our players,

Congratulations on winning the South Shore Conference Squirt B Division Championship!

By beating Hanover 3-1 in the championship game on April 10, you finished an outstanding season in style and took home the championship trophies that each of you so deserved. Your run to the championship was not easy but you faced each challenge with the determination of champions.

After beating Pembroke soundly 10-1 in the first round of the playoffs on April 2, you played one of your finest games of the season and beat a smooth skating Westwood team in a heart stopping 1-0 second round victory on April 3. You came back the next weekend to outlast a difficult Weymouth team 3-2 in the third round on April 9 before playing Hanover the next morning to capture the championship.

Your playoff performance was nothing short of magnificent and was a continuation of the consistent and often dominating play you showed all season. Your team season statistics and accomplishments are truly outstanding.

In South Shore Conference play, your regular season record was 21 wins, 2 losses, and 1 tie for 43 points in the Western Division standings. That record resulted in you winning the regular season championship in the Western Division and receiving a number one seed in the 16 team playoff series.

In the regular season, you scored 123 goals for an eye-popping average of in excess of 5 goals per game. Your stellar team defense and goaltending only allowed 32 goals on the season, producing a goals against average per game of 1.33. That was the lowest per game goals against average of any of the 30 Squirt B teams that played in the South Shore Conference this year. In the playoffs, you reduced further your goals against average per game to 1.0 by giving up a total of only 4 goals in 4 games.

In addition to your regular season and playoff accomplishments, you also participated in the Massachusetts Hockey State Tournament by winning the District 4 championship. You captured the District 4 crown by beating an excellent Seahawks East team 3-2 in overtime on Feb. 23. You represented District 4 in the State Tournament on March 4 and 5. Your only loss in that tournament came against Reading, which went on to win the Massachusetts State Squirt B Tournament.

You played as a team all year long and your record and team statistics show it. Your accomplishments as players are equally impressive and also need to be mentioned.

Jake Beaulieu. You were the team's fastest straight away skater and showed your balanced offensive skills by scoring 14 goals and 14 assists during the regular season. You proved to be the key to victory in our District 4 tournament game against the Seahawks. You covered the other team's best player all game and denied him any scoring while putting in the winning goal in overtime for the victory.

Chris Cohen. You were perhaps the most improved player on our team. You hustled every shift and did everything the coaches asked. Your two-way hockey was excellent, and you showed that you have a real scoring touch by netting 13 goals and 14 assists on the year.

Tommy Dixon. You were the team's third leading scorer with 28 goals and 19 assists. You achieved those lofty statistics while getting used to playing right wing. You made a huge play in the final game against Hanover when you chased down and broke up a big play when the score was still tied. That play didn't register on the scoreboard but it may have turned the tide in the game.

Terrence Doonan. You were the team's leading scorer tallying 35 goals and 22 assists on the year. You scored our first goal in the finals against Hanover with a wrap-around move that was as pretty as they come. You played excellent two way hockey all year and truly are a living example of the saying: "It's not the size of the dog in the fight but the size of the fight in the dog."

Andrew Fontaine. You were the team's most versatile player. We called upon you to play every position on the ice except goaltender, and you did so extraordinarily well. Your excellent skating and puckhandling skills produced 15 goals and 11 assists. You also played a key role when our team was shorthanded in several games this year.

Ryan Foohey. You were a force on defense this year and played a big role in keeping the other team off the scoreboard. You showed excellent instinct all year by reading the play before it occurred and putting yourself in the right place at the right time. Your 5 goals and 11 assists was tied for second among defensemen.

Brendan Gardner. Your strength in the corners and aggressive style in the defensive end left many opposing forwards disappointed and heading back to the bench tired. Your hard shot from the point and your knack of jumping into the play in key moments led to you netting 15 assists on the year. That assist count led all defensemen and placed you sixth on the team with respect to assists. That is truly an amazing statistic for a defenseman.

Jonathan Gardner. You filled in admirably on our team on several occasions, including in the Waterville Valley, New Hampshire tournament. We appreciated your steady defensive play and your willingness to play for our team this year.

Andrew Geddes. Your quick skating and aggressive play made you a key player on defense. You led all defensemen offensively with 17 points on the year. You saved perhaps your best effort of the year for the final game when your aggressive style repeatedly kept Hanover's best line at bay. Against Hanover, you also set up our third goal with a hard shot from the point that Terrance Doonan tipped in.

Brendan Godfrey. Your speed and playmaking skills resulted in you leading our team with 30 assists on the year. Your two-way play was critical to our team defense and the flow of our offense. You also scored a "highlight reel" goal for us on a one-timer from the slot to put us ahead early in the semifinal game against Weymouth.

Frankie Lemieux. You were the team's fourth leading scorer with 22 goals and 18 assists. Your laser beam wrist shot has given many goaltenders in the South Shore Conference nightmares. You scored big goals in key moments for us all year, including two goals in our semi-final win over Weymouth.

Brandon MacPherson. You owned the lowest goals against average in the South Shore Conference this year. You played excellent goal for us all year and had stand-out games for us at key times. Most notably in the playoffs, you shut-out Westwood 1-0 and made several mind boggling saves. You also made a glove save in the final seconds of our semi-final playoff game against Weymouth that we imagine still have opposing players shaking their heads.

Jared McCrystal. You were a mainstay on defense for us all year and have become a student of the game. Your hard-nosed, tenacious play often sent a message to opposing forwards that they were in for a long day. You improved your offensive skills and added 5 goals and 9 assists during the regular season. You hustled every minute of every shift and it made a difference for our team. We coaches can all vividly remember the quote from your Mom during an early season game against Norwood, "I'll give you $100.00 if you score!" Did your Mom ever pay you that $100 when you netted that point shot?

Jake McDonough. You were the team's second leading scorer with 28 goals and 23 assists despite missing several games due to injury. You scored the winning goal for us in the finals against Hanover. Your hustle and big play making skills were critical for our team all season. As impressive as your offensive statistics are, they do not begin to tell the whole story because you were also one of our best defensive forwards all year.

As a team, all of you played like shining stars all year long. And now you are champions in every sense of the word. We are so very proud of you. Congratulations!!!!

COHASSET YOUTH LACROSSE

Girls youth lacrosse rolls on in Hingham

Cohasset's girls program kept its strong season chugging along with a weekend that saw four close games in Hingham, including the stiffest tests yet for the unbeaten 15-and-Under teams.

But if was the younger, 13-and-Under (grades 5/6) girls who opened the day, with Cohasset's Blue team playing Hingham's Yellow squad.

The Healy sisters – Christina and Danielle – accounted for all of the first-half scoring for Cohasset, which went to the half down by a goal. Christina Healy's second goal knotted things up, and Olivia Murphy and Katherine Brown broke things open, as Cohasset's defense – and six saves from goaltender Molly McElgunn – shut down Hingham in the second half, giving Cohasset a 5-3 win. On the season, the Blue 13-U squad is now 3-0-1.

The Cohasset White 13-U team had an easier time with Hingham Black, jumping to a 5-3 halftime lead on the strength of scores from Bridget Cahill, Merrick Sease, Sage Stebbins, Madeline Manning and Stephanie Brierly. The goals from Stebbins and Brierly were their first on the season.

Hope Kissick, Manning again, Alison Whelan and Molly McElgunn scored in the second half, as the defense again clamped down in front of goalie Ellie Tedeschi – who made six saves – and allowed Cohasset to roll to a 9-4 final. The White team's record now stands at 4-1.

For the unbeaten older girls, blowouts had been the rule up to the trip to Hingham, where the Blue team escaped with a 10-8 victory thanks to the scoring effort of three players who went straight from the game to the tryouts for the Mass Bay Youth Lacrosse League All-Star team.

Gabriella Flibotte scored four goals, Kaley Madge chipped in three and added an assist and Maura Barnes scored twice to account for enough scoring to put down Hingham. Katelyn Ryan added a solo score and Caitlin Mahoney picked up an assist on one of Flibotte's scores.

The 15-U White team was shorthanded for its game, but that didn't matter thanks largely to the efforts of Madeline Leahy and Katie Gaumer. Leahy scored a first-half hat trick and added two more in the final stanza, while Gaumer had one first-half goal and added a second-half hat trick as Cohasset came from behind to grab a 5-4 halftime lead, and then rolled to an 11-7 final.

Amy Meikleham and Lindsay Hill added Cohasset's other scores on the afternoon.

Thomson Jaffe played both 15-U games in the net, stopping a total of 10 shots to earn the two wins.

The girls return to the field on Mother's Day, May 9, with four games at Deer Hill School in Cohasset.

Boys Lacrosse game reports

U11 – Blue Team at Home against Abington

The U11 Boys Blue team took on visiting Abington in a somewhat lopsided contest where our youngest laxers played like veterans in dominating the play at both ends of the field for a strong post-vacation victory.

Conor Green again anchored the defense; as the "demon between the pipes" he stepped up repeatedly and stopped most of their opponent's shots cold. John Leahy and Axel Seppala had break out games on offense, with Axel scoring a goal on a nice no-look pass from teammate Mark Brown, and John scooped up several ground balls that led to scores for the home team.

The midfield tandem of John Mills, Nicky T, Christian Davis, Hunter Forrer, and Sarah Brown provided outstanding team transition play as well as locking in multiple tallies amongst the group. Ryan Davis took a bruising shot that actually broke his shaft in half (not something you see every day at this level), but then came right back and notched a goal of his own on a nice turn around upper corner pick.

It was evident that this group is really starting to click as a team and that all their hard work in practices is paying off as they played their best game to date.

U11 - White Team at Hingham

Cohasset white stepped-up its game this week with a coordinated effort against Hingham. With many new players we began to work as a team and advanced the ball with solid passes across the midfield to the crease.

Throughout the game our attack was aggressive and hammered the goal with shots from all sides. Colin Bell was made to solid shots and was also strong against the Hingham the goalie during clears. We also saw solid play by Drew Nahill at attack with a goal and a great effort riding the defensive clear.

The midfielders also hustled and worked as a group, using passing and field position to advance the ball. Colin Whelan was force at the midfield with a strong advance to the crease from the defensive half of the field. Teddy Pastos moved from attack to midfield and won face-offs and a fast breaking goal.

Newcomer Jack Conti also showed skill in turning back the advancing Hingham with good defense and ground balls. Will Golden also showed versatility in playing both strong offense and defense. Henry Brown was fast and effective at foiling the fast break at defense and both Zack Strecker and Blair McGowan did a great job in the crease. In all a good effort with a final score of 5 Cohasset, 9 Hingham.

U13 – White Team at Hingham

The U13 White boys took on a tough Hingham squad and ended up with a well deserved win by a score of 7-1.

The unflappable Willy Brown was a brick wall in goal turning away all but one of the shots he faced as he covered the net for the entire game. The defense was outstanding as well, led by a talented trio of Will Tetreault, Ben Curley, and Geoff Swain. Also providing support at D were Dean McNary, Patrick Kearney, and Brennan Bukowski.

The offensive power was supplied by Derek Youngman (2g, 2a) with John Collins and Kyle Livingstone each adding a pair of goals. John McGoldrick also added a goal and provided some key support from the midfield, where he was dominant on face offs.

The midfielders provided the spark all day with spirited play from Mitch McNary, Danny Barnes, Pete McKenna, and Kyle Livingstone. The attack provided great finishes all afternoon with Charlie Coffman, Kyle Healy, and several other players getting great looks and shots. It was a solid team effort with everyone contributing at several different positions.

U13 - Blue Team at Home against Abington

The Cohasset U13 Blue team beat Abington on Sunday 12-7 as Cohasset saw nine different players score goals. Almost more impressive was the fact that nine of the goals were assisted.

Chris Murphy played the first half in goal and stopped many Abington rushes. Jack Nelson, playing goal for the first time, played the second half and made many fine saves. Morgan McCarthy started the scoring with his first goal in his first year playing. Thomas Flibotte scored his first of three goals on an assist from Chase Baldwin, who also had a goal. Cohasset was up 4-2 at the half but saw the game tied 4-4 early in the 2nd half.

Terrance Durkin had three assists from his middie position and Jack Carrier had a goal and an assist. Other goals came from Charlie Neaves, Morgan Grasz, Alec Hurd, and Sam Richardson on an assist from Nate Brown. Alex Kinnealy scored two goals from the middie position in the 2nd half to round out the scoring. For the second week in a row the U13 Blue team played a strong 2nd half and came away with a win.

U13 – Silver Team at Marshfield

The boys from Cohasset lost a tough game to Marshfield 12-8. After playing Marshfield even through the first half behind the strong play of goaltender Sam Leahy, Cohasset could not keep pace in the second half as Marshfield took control.

In addition to Leahy's goaltending, the Cohasset defense was anchored by the outstanding play of Derek Froio and Alex Evans. Cohasset fought to keep the game close in the second half behind the offensive efforts of Mark Dick, Luke Ernst and Chase Murphy. The Cohasset midfield was led by the strong two-way play of Jeff Durkin and Brendan Horigan.

U15 – White Team

The Cohasset U15 White squad continued its 2005 campaign visiting rival Hingham last Sunday.

Cohasset fell behind early on a quick score by Hingham, but after that proceeded to play its best lacrosse of the season. With strong goaltending being provided by Chris Brown and Thomas Lemaire, Cohasset methodically took command of the game. Led by Anderson Lynner, the Cohasset defense responded to Hingham's offensive challenges and helped transition the ball to the offensive side of the field. Cohasset ended the first half up 6-3.

The second half saw Cohasset continue its disciplined approach which allowed for consistent two-way play. Strong transition midfield play from Danny Brady, John McKenna, Alec Livingstone, Todd Emanuello, and Andrew Bell ensured Cohasset maintained ball control throughout the second half. Cohasset ended the day with a solid 9-6 victory. Next up for the White squad is an away game at Marshfield on May 8th.

U15 Blue Team at Home against Abington

Abington had some athletic talent but the Blue squad is really developing, and won the game easily 11-1.

Cohasset jumped out to a 4-0 lead in the 1st quarter, and would go on to control the game taking it into half time at 9-0. Jack Murphy, a veritable brick wall as goalie, was helped by a defense that played its best positioning of the season. Many defensive take-aways were turned into clears to the offensive end of the field.

At the attack position, Dean Driscoll had one goal and three assists. Max Shipp had two assists and Jonny Wade netted four impressive goals. At the middie position, Andrew Smith had one assist and was all over the field. Andrew DiPaolo had four goals that zipped past their goalie. Ian Lyster posted two assists, and Andrew Littauer and Nick Lieberman each had one goal.

Coming up on the 8th, which is Mother's Day, Blue is home v. Scituate and White is away v. Marshfield. Note these games have been switched from the original schedule so that White would not play Scituate back-to-back the 8th and Saturday the 14th.

scheduled for 4 p.m., except for the Nantucket game at 1 p.m.

Head coach Torin Sweeney is looking at next week as a critical stretch of games.

"I think we have to win three out of four to set ourselves up for the tournament," he said.

That goal would appear to be a reasonable one if the team plays as well as it did Tuesday against Marshfield. The girls looked sharp in the first half, taking a 7-0 lead into the break. Cohasset finished the half with a nice goal by Lauren Rizzotti, set up with a great feed from Mia Lieb-Lappen.

After the Rams got on the board two minutes into the second half, Rizzotti scored her third goal of the night with a well-placed shot through the five-hole.

Marshfield pulled to within five at 8-3, but Mackenzie Holway dashed all hopes of a comeback with what may have been the goal of the game halfway through the second half. The senior forward worked her way past three Marshfield defenders and fired a perfectly placed top shelf shot over the goalie's right shoulder to make it 9-3.

Holway played another strong all-around game, notching three points (two goals and an assist) and consistently dropping back to help out on defense. Cohasset's defensive scheme generally requires forwards to drop back, and Sweeney says Holway is setting a good example in that area of the game.

"Mackenzie is the most improved player on the team," said the coach. "She's played real hard this year; I have to give her all the credit in the world."

Lindsay Durkin quickly followed Holway's score with a goal of her own, wheeling around from behind the net to put in her third goal of the game.

Leading the effort on defense for Cohasset was Miranda Lanzillotti and Marissa Evans. Molly Kirk also played a solid game, forcing a number of turnovers and starting attacks the other way for Cohasset.

"The defense has been playing great lately," Sweeney said. "They have all been fighting for the ball as hard as you can."

The Marshfield win came a day after an 11-3 victory over Notre Dame. Durkin scored a team-high four goals, with Lisa Spirito getting two goals and two assists. Joanna Hamilton made 10 saves for the Skippers.

ND was closely defending Rizzotti, and Sweeney is encouraged by the fact that his team has athletes like Durkin, Spirito and Holway to step up and score goals.

The two wins were a nice way to bounce back from an 18-7 loss to Norwell last Thursday. Cohasset started the game against the powerhouse Clippers strong, and led 5-4 in the first half. Norwell, currently 9-1, simply had too many weapons, however, led by Taylor Murphy (career-high eight goals).

That loss is in the rearview mirror, however, and Sweeney liked what he saw earlier this week.

"I'm very, very pleased with the way the girls are playing right now," he said. "The hustle has been awesome. We've really been outworking our opponents the last couple games."

Lacrosse spirit night, May 12

Cohasset's Annual Lacrosse Spirit Night will be next Thursday, May 12 at Alumni Field Cohasset Middle-High School.

The girls varsity team will kick this off at 4 p.m. against Sandwich and the boys varsity team will begin at 6 p.m., also against Sandwich. At 4:00 the girls JV team will play against Sandwich at the Deer Hill school on Sohier Street. The boys JV will also play Sandwich at 4:00 at Milliken field! Four teams on three fields!

A girls youth team will provide us with unparalleled lacrosse skills during the halftime of the girls varsity game. The boys youth 15-U team, coached by Mitch Brown and Bryan Baldwin, will give us a quick peek during the halftime of the boys varsity game. The biggest display of athleticism will be performed by our boys youth 11-U team for a half an hour between the girls and boys varsity games!!!

Pizza, soda, candy and baked goods will be available for purchase to benefit our lacrosse programs. Admission charged at the gate (which does NOT go to the lacrosse program) will be $4 for adults and $3 for kids 12 and over. Any youth lacrosse player-in uniform-and accompanied by an adult - will be admitted for free.

Parents of youth players will be contacted this week to contribute baked goods. Please do as much as you can to help your program continue to be successful and fun. This is not a fundraiser- but an event to be enjoyed by all. Feed you children- watch a game- go home. What could be better! We would hope all spectators from the games at Deer Hill and Milliken will join together at Alumni to eat, relax, and watch the varsity boys.

We are requesting that all spectator lacrosse sticks be left at home in order to prevent injury to others and/or property damage. Parents- this is a FAMILY event- please accompany your children.

Anyone with questions or who would like to volunteer to help with this event, please call Lyn Previte at 383-9723.

SPORTS NOTES

Cohasset Sailing Club Registration

Please remember to bring your registration to the Club on Sat 5/21 or Sun 5/22 8 a.m.-1 p.m. to sign up for classes, dock spaces and membership. The goal is to make the registration process more efficient and timely, so come on down to the club, cheer on summer and sign up.

Recreation Department offers Boating Safety

The United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and the Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a 2-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by the Coast Guard and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however certification in this course is mandatory for 16-year-olds and under, who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. U.S.C.G.A. instructors will teach the 2-session course, which will be held on 2 consecutive Saturdays, May 14, and May 21, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Rd., Cohasset.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at 781-383-4109, as soon as possible, as class will be limited in size, and participants will be enrolled on first call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the text book and class materials.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children aged 12 and under be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of the class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

Cohasset cheerleading clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for a Cohasset High School Cheerleading clinic to be held Monday through Wednesday, Aug. 22-24.

While the 3 day clinic will not be held until August, registrations can be accepted only to May 27.

The fee for this unique opportunity essential to anyone who plans to join the cheerleading squad, for either Fall or Winter sports, is $155 per person.

Registration forms and details are available in the foyer of Cohasset Town Hall, right outside the Recreation Office.

Coach Kate Hines in conjunction with the National Cheerleaders Association will conduct this program at Cohasset High School gym.

Fly Fishing Lessons

Fly Fishing Lessons for bass, stocked pond is offered by the Cohasset Recreation Department via Paul Bruce for $36 per person for all ages 7 through adult.

Saturday, May 21, at 9:55 a.m. learn how to fly fish for bass on a stocked pond in Duxbury.

All fishing rods and equipment will be provided. Register early by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 781-383-4109. Class size is limited.

Children can design a bouquet at plant sale

Don't miss this unique occasion to give your child an opportunity to hand select and design a bouquet for Mother's Day. Community Garden Club of Cohasset is having a very special plant sale Saturday, May 7 from 8 a.m. -1 p.m.

The sale features cut flowers for bouquets and arrangements put together by our award-winning members, pre-planted inserts for flower boxes, urns and planters, and hard-to-find perennials, freshly dug from the gardens our members' gardens.

This year's selection of flowers and plants guarantees some unique and stunning color combinations for your favorite containers, gardens and vases. The sale will be open under the tents from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. next to French Memories in the Village. Early birds will be guaranteed colors and selections of their choice. Proceeds from this event will benefit Community Garden club projects. Club members maintain the gardens at three locations in Cohasset: the Lothrop House, the Lightkeeper's Residence and Constitution Park. The club also supports local beautification projects, contributes to many environmental organizations and provides scholarships for three deserving Cohasset High seniors.

Isabelle Dunne of Beach Street presents her Mother's Day bouquet to her mom, Lisa Dunne.

This year's selection of flowers and plants guarantees some unique and stunning color combinations for your favorite containers, gardens and vases.

OUR WORLD

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum is open every Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $3 per child, optional donation for adults. During the month of May, we will make arts and crafts from Mexico. Join us on May 11 and 12 as we make our very own Sombrero's. Call 781-383-3198 for more information. The museum is located at 100 Sohier St., just behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Time is running out ...time to think spring-cleaning. Cohasset's own Lord & Ladies has begun planning for a giant estate sale to be held on Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. to benefit Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum. So start cleaning out those attics, garages and closets. Donations of all types of furniture, mirrors and pictures, rugs, lamps, tableware, table linens, books and brick-a-brack are being sought. Proceeds generated from this estate sale will go towards the installation of the Museum's new Bio-Diversity exhibit slated to open September 2005. Please drop off your treasures at Our World on Wednesday's from 4 to 6 p.m. and Thursday's from noon to 1 2 p.m., or please call the Museum's Director, Michele Dupuis-Bolduc at 781-383-3198 to arrange a specific drop-off time. Your donation is tax-deductible.

OBITUARIES

James R. Hooper

Professor, college dean

James R. Hooper, 90, of Walpole, formerly of Cohasset, a retired college professor and dean, died April 20 at the Harrington House in Walpole.

Dr. Hooper worked at Case Western Reserve University in Ohio for 25 years as dean of undergraduate studies, director of special and undergraduate scholar programs and as a professor of electrical engineering. He taught at Williams College, Union College and at Harvard University before joining the faculty at Case Institute of Technology in 1950.

He was a principal team member of Project Doanbrook, a classified weapons program during the Korean War. When World War II began, Mr. Hooper returned to his alma mater, Harvard, to teach a pre-radar training course for military officers.

Born in Dedham, Mr. Hooper lived in Cohasset for 30 years and was a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

James R. Hooper

While he lived in Ohio, he was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church of East Cleveland. He was senior warden of the vestry at St. Paul's and a lay Eucharistic minister and lector.

He graduated from Harvard University in 1937 and earned a master's degree in electrical engineering and a doctorate in physics from Harvard.

He was a member of the Appalachian Mountain Club for 30 years and led expeditions to the White Mountains of New Hampshire.

He leaves his wife of 65 years, Helen (Lang) Hooper, four daughters and a son, a sister and a brother, 12 grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

A funeral service was held April 23 at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave. Burial was in Mount Auburn Cemetery, Cambridge. Donations may be made to the College of the Atlantic in Bar Harbor, Maine.

Arrangements are by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset.

Agnes Louise Davis

Ran Goodwin's Bakery

Agnes Louise (Goodwin) Davis, 92, died Saturday, April 23, 2005 at her home in Maine after a long struggle with Parkinson's disease.

Mrs. Davis was born in North East Point, Nova Scotia to Bertha (Thompson) and Clinton Goodwin. After losing her father in the great flu epidemic of 1919 she moved to Cohasset with her mother, who married George Muller. She graduated from Cohasset High School and the Ballard School of Cooking in New York City. She and her mother ran Goodwin's Bakery in Cohasset until moving to Bridgeport, Conn., where she contributed to the war effort by working in a defense factory.

She married the late George Davis and settled permanently in Medway on their family farm.

She leaves three sons and daughters-in law; Frank and Ann Davis of Medway, with whom she lived the last 11 years of her life; Dr. Harry and Jeudi Davis of Marlborough, N.H.; Lloyd and Marie Davis of Gainesville, Fla.; three granddaughters and their families, Kelly Davis and Don White their children, Robert and Isabelle; of Casco; Sara Davis and Hayes Heath of New Gloucester, and Amber and George Hanna of Walpole, N.H.; a grandson Phillip Davis and his friend Rachel Bone of Baltimore; a brother George Mulhern and his wife Dottie of Palo Alto, Calif. Three sisters, Thelma Paten, Kathleen MacDonald and Irma James; two brothers, Harry Goodwin and Bradford Mulhern; daughter-in-law Sally Lou Patterson of Raymond; sister-in-law Ruth Goodwin of Cohasset; brother-in-law Gardner Pope of Brunswick; and several nieces and nephews.

As was her wish, Mrs. Davis will be cremated and her ashes scattered on the farm she loved.

A memorial service and celebration of her life will take place on Saturday, June 11 at 11 a.m .on the family farm at the end of Powersville Road in Medway. In lieu of flowers, friends may make donations in Louise's memory to the Hospice Program at Community Health and Counseling Services, P.O. Box 208, Lincoln, ME 04457.

IT'S HAPPENING

Sailing Club registration

Bring your registration to the Cohasset Sailing Club Saturday, May 21, or Sunday, May 22, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. to sign up for classes, dock spaces and membership. The goal is to make the registration process more efficient and timely, so come on down to the club, cheer on summer and sign up.

Baseball boosters hold car wash

The Cohasset baseball boosters, The Diamond Club, will sponsor a car wash Saturday, May 7, to benefit the Cohasset High School Varsity as well as the Junior Varsity Baseball teams. Stop by Coastal Nissan on Route 3-A to have your vehicle washed by team members. Donations are welcomed.

Dance to benefit Tsunami relief

On Saturday, May 7, a dance for the seventh and eighth grades will be held at the Teen Garage, from 7 to 10 p.m.

The door charge for this dance is an effort to raise money for the Tsunami Relief Fund. This fund raising dance is just for grades seventh and eighth and 100 percent of the proceeds will be given to the Tsunami Relief Fund.

Organizers are a group of senior high school students working through Mir Pace International, a voluntary/non-profit organization that provides aid to multiple disasters throughout the world. This particular fundraiser is to aid Tsunami victims.

Chaperoning this dance will include members of the Teen Garage staff, Jack Buckley, parents of seniors, members of Mir Pace International, and the group of seniors; Mackenzie Holway, Lauren Rizzotti, Teddie Straughn, and Nicole Whitney.

Drinks, appetizers and pizza will be provided from papa Gino's and Pizza Zone. Billy Carbone will be donating his time as the DJ.

Latvian organist at St. Stephen's

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset is pleased to present organist Ingrid Gutberg in recital on Sunday, May 22, at 3 p.m. Dr. Gutberg has had an extensive teaching career, from the Mozarteum in Salzburg, Austria, to Boston University. She annually tours Europe and the U.S. and is president of the Latvian Guild of Organists and the Latvian Heritage Foundation. She is the organist of the Covenant Congregational Church in Boston. Her recital will feature works by Latvian composers, played on the magnificent 58-rank Aeolian-Skinner organ of St. Stephen's.

The church is located at 16 Highland Avenue in Cohasset. Ample parking is available at the village car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For information, please call 781-383-1083.

Minot makes list of haunted towers

life," Monk writes. While performing their routine duties, light keepers that followed Wilson and Antoine at the new granite structure, experienced other oddities such as discovering that the lens had already been polished, the lantern cleaned and the lamp filled with oil, she said.

Local historian John Galluzzo, said although he has never seen or heard the alleged Minot Ledge Light ghost in action, he has heard his share of stories about it.

"The keepers would signal each other when their shift was over," he said. "It was a sound like banging a mug against a pipe that can be heard up (the coastline)."

According to Monk, some past lighthouses keepers have heard a voice coming from Minot Light crying in Portuguese "Stay Away!" and have seen both Wilson and Antoine in the lantern room.

"During calm seas, it was said that one could stare at the reflection of the lighthouse in the water and see what appeared to be the two drowned keepers in the doorway," Monk writes.

In 2000, a granite monument dedicated to both Antoine and Wilson was installed on Government Island in Cohasset, where the current lighthouse structure was built.

But David Ball, president of the Scituate Historical Society, said he takes these kind of ghost stories with a grain of salt. "It's a fun kind of story," he said.

For Ball, the biggest mystery that came out of the tragic event of Minot Ledge Light in 1851, was the fact that there is no living records of the two keepers and no real history of their lives that exists today.

"No one has been able to find any death records of either one of them," he said. "And nobody knows where they are buried."

Ball said he's surprised that Monk's book doesn't include Scituate's other historic lighthouse – Scituate Lighthouse on Cedar Point --- about which he has heard other ghost stories.

Monk said although lighthouses serve as a "romantic backdrop," there is also a gothic and dark quality to them.

"They are in dangerous places," she said. "Their job is to try and prevent death."

Monk's book also touches on similar eerie ghostly tales, including the sounds of piano music at Maine's Sequin Island Light, and the appearance of the keeper's daughter at Hilton Head Island Light in South Carolina still appears when a sudden storm is about to come.

According to Monk, the most well-known haunted lighthouse in America is the one at Point Lookout in Chesapeake Bay, Maryland. Visitors to that lighthouse each year have widely reported seeing the former keeper wearing a white blouse and long, blue skirt and ghostly voices have been caught on tape.

"Each one of them has something unique," she said.

Monk will have a book signing in Scituate at Front Street Book Shop Wednesday, June 15 at 5 p.m.

POLICE BRIEFS

Graffiti found

Incidents of vandalism have been reported in the last couple of weeks at Mullaney's Fish Market, Shaw's and King Jewelers. Police Chief James Hussey said graffiti has been found on the rear of several buildings. He said what's written "doesn't seem to be sending any negative message" and because of its location would likely only be seen by people making deliveries.

However, he said the department has been studying the "tags" and has also paid visits to see graffiti in North Scituate, to determine whether the two match and hopefully identify the person responsible. Hussey said there have not been any new tags discovered since the initial complaints.

Magazine sales

Complaints regarding magazine salespeople were reported on Fairoaks Lane, Beach Street, Doane Street and Brewster Road April 26. Chief Hussey said the magazine company, whose name was not recorded in the log, had begun selling in Scituate and had received permission from that town's police department to go door-to-door. However, members of the group had crossed over into Cohasset and did not realize they were in another town.

"They were very apologetic," said Hussey, and immediately provided the names of all the people who would be selling the magazines to the department and received permission to carry on.

That's all folk!

Arlo Guthrie plays Memorial Hall Mother's Day

This Mother's Day there will be more than one dinner reservation made at "Alice's Restaurant" as Arlo Guthrie steps on stage at Plymouth Memorial Hall on Sunday, May 8 at 7 p.m.

Like his father, Woody Guthrie, Arlo Guthrie has carved out a career as a folksinger and songwriter with a social conscience who leavens his political messages with his own brand of original humor.

Arlo Guthrie's career exploded in 1967 with the release of "Alice's Restaurant", whose title song premiered at the Newport Folk Festival helped foster a new commitment among the '60s generation to social consciousness and activism. Arlo went on to star in the 1969 Hollywood film version of "Alice's Restaurant", directed by Arthur Penn. With songs like "Alice's Restaurant", too long for radio airplay; "Coming into Los Angeles", banned from many radio stations (but a favorite at the 1969 Woodstock Festival); and the definitive rendition of Steve Goodman's "City of New Orleans."

Tickets for Arlo Guthrie's show on May 8 are priced at $35 & $30. They are available at the box-office, located at 50 Court Street in Plymouth, online at www.ticketweb.com <http://www.ticketweb.com>, by phone at 866-468-7619, and at all Strawberries. Visit www.plymouthhall.com <http://www.plymouthhall.com>.

Audrey II's the big star in 'Little Shop of Horrors'

Puppeteers Paul McGinnis and Michael Latini from the national tour of "Little Shop of Horrors," being stage at Boston's Colonial Theatre through May 15.

The man-eating venus flytrap at the humorous heart of the musical "Little Shop of Horrors" — now at Boston's Colonial Theatre — weighs more than 3,000 pounds and is bigger than a Volkswagen bug when it reaches its full size, according to Michael Latini, one of three puppeteers who help bring "Audrey II" to menacing life. And, in what should serve as a cautionary tale for fertilizer-happy local gardeners, Latini also points out that the well-fed plant grows to 18 feet tall.

While reaching that height, "Audrey II" puts increasing demands on her puppeteering trio. "Out of four puppets, only one is not performed by a puppeteer. The plant is brought to life by two of us, and voiced by an actor who works off-stage in a sound-proof booth using a series of monitors, microphones and speakers. The first two stages of the plant are hand-held puppets. In the third stage, 'Audrey II' is a full body puppet, with one of us sitting in the flower pot on stage and additional vines being operated off-stage by a second puppeteer. In the final stage, the puppeteering is a combination of live and mechanized work," explains Latini. "This show is the hardest puppeteering I've ever done. We have to use a combination of strength, agility, awareness and concentration."

Based on the 1960 Roger Corman cult film classic of the same name, the story was made a musical in 1982 by the songwriting team of Howard Ashman and Alan Mencken for a long-running off-Broadway production. Steve Martin and Rick Moranis starred in a 1986 film version of the musical. A 2003 Broadway mounting — directed by Jerry Zaks with puppet design by The Jim Henson Workshop and Martin P. Robinson — spawned the current national tour. The versions vary, of course, but each tells the tale of Seymour Krelboure, a mild-mannered Skid Row florist who makes a dangerous deal with a tiny plant to win the heart of the woman he loves.

Puppetry first won the heart of Latini, 26, while the Philadelphia native was a student at Temple University's Tyler School of Art. Since then he has worked as a puppet builder on the Broadway productions of both "Little Shop" and "Avenue Q." Latini began his puppeteering career playing the larger-than-life title character in the national tour of "Bear in the Big Blue House."

"I loved playing Bear. It was the first time I had done anything fully enclosed. My head was at Bear's chest and I used my right arm to operate his head. It looked so real that people had no idea how it was being done."

A similar magic can be found in Seymour's flower shop, according to Latini.

"The puppeteering is so enjoyable that people can give in and believe that the plant is really alive and really eating people."

"Little Shop of Horrors" will be at the Colonial Theatre, 106 Boylston Street, Boston, through May 15. For tickets and information, call 617-931-2787 or visit www.littleshopofhorrors.com

The art of Menopause

Two South Shore women — Carolyn Anastos of Hull and Laurie Israel of Quincy — are among the artists whose self-portraits are included in "40x40," a new companion art exhibit to the long-running Boston production of "Menopause The Musical." A celebration of the life of the female artist over 40, the mixed-media exhibit will be on display in the lobby of Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse through August 29.

"I was attracted to this project because I'm not sure people always think of quilters as artists and this provided a good opportunity to set the record straight," explained Anastos, a long-time member of Norwell's Herring Run Quilt Guild whose 16x16 self-portrait is done entirely in fabric.

"I love doing this work. It is like I've been sewing my whole life, since I learned it at my mother's knee. In the past 20 years, I've probably made over 100 quilts and wall-hangings. My piece for this show is called 'Now You See Me, Now You Don't' and is made from fabrics that have a special meaning to me. My hair is done in a music-themed fabric, because when I retire I'm going to learn how to play the piano," says Anastos who has been a guidance counselor at Fontbonne Academy in Milton since 1982.

Anastos first learned of plans for the "40x40" exhibit — sales from which will benefit not only the artists, but also "Women for Women," the service foundation of "Menopause The Musical" — while attending a January performance of the musical comedy about the challenges facing women over 40 as they deal with "the change."

"I learned about '40x40' just six days before the deadline for consideration. I quickly submitted three photos of my work and was delighted when I was chosen to participate. It's a great program, because it helps women over 40."

The "40x40" art exhibit is free and open to the public at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart Street, Boston, during box office hours. For tickets to "Menopause The Musical" — which features Mary Callanan of Weymouth and Hingham native Adrienne Cote — call 800-447-7400 or visit www.stuartstreetplayhouse.com

SCIENTISTS DISCOVER SECRET OF REGROWING HAIR (CELLS)

Laboratory studies have led researchers to identify a gene that prevents the regeneration of inner-ear cells that are critical to hearing. This discovery leads to the hope that, some day, experts may be able to correct the most common form of deafness among the elderly. Researchers found that eliminating the effects of a single gene could cause the inner-ear (hair) cells to regrow. Hair cells are nerve endings that translate sound energy into electrical impulses that are relayed to the brain. Until now, loss of these cells due to damaging noise has led to irreversible hearing loss. This form of nerve-related hearing loss is commonly responsible for the inability of older adults to hear high-pitched women's and children's voices.

At FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, we combine the latest space-age technology with old-fashioned, friendly care. And not only do we help you hear what you are missing, but we help you understand your hearing aid options and ensure that all your questions are answered. Here at 534 Main Street (Rt. 18), across from the Stetson Building in Weymouth, we believe hearing enhancement takes more than a hearing aid. It takes the right hearing aid plus the exacting skills of custom hearing aid fitting. Begin your journey to better hearing by calling 781-337-1144 to schedule a hearing test.

P.S. Nerve-related hearing loss can be effectively treated with the help of a hearing instrument.

Competing against the 800 lb. gorilla and the big, bad competition

4th in series of 2005 "Business Builders" seminars scheduled for May 10
How does the small, independent business maintain customer loyalty in the face of lower prices and mega advertising?
Learn how to compete.
May 10, Tuesday, 5:30 – 8 pm at the Radisson Plymouth
The presentation will highlight the unique advantages of small, independent business and how to implement these assets. Customer service, relationship building, competitive pricing, regional flavor, and community involvement will be explored.
Panelists include Larry Rice of Rodman and Rodman, a leading accounting and consulting firm based in Newton; Rick Taylor of Taylor Lumber-ACE Hardware, a second generation hardware store and lumber yard located in Marshfield; and Ernie Foster of Webster Printing, a commercial printer celebrating their 50th anniversary and based in Hanson. The seminar will be moderated by Steve Dubin of PR Works, a public relations firm located in Kingston.
In addition to tips and tactics, receive a FREE $100 ad from Community Newspaper Company, $20 off membership to the South Shore Women's Business Network, $100 off your next print order with Webster Printing, $100 toward a public relations/advertising campaign with PR Works, and more.
The seminar will be limited to 50 attendees. Cost is $25 per seminar. To reserve seating for one or all of the seminars, please call the South Shore Women's Business Network at (781) 749-8883 or visit their website at www.SSWBN.org.

Turin unshrouded

Upcoming Olympics turns spotlight on industrial Italian city

By FRAN GOLDEN

TURIN, Italy — It's the home of Fiat, the land where Tic Tacs breath mints were invented, the birthplace of fine barolo and barbaresco wines and not-so-fine asti spumante and a region famous for both chocolate and white truffles, unearthed by truffle-sniffing dogs.

But if you haven't heard much about Italy's Piedmont region, don't worry. You will. Turin, capital of the region, and home of a certain shroud, as well as 900,000 people, will host the 2006 Winter Olympics next February, with events taking place here and in the snow-covered "Milky Way" mountains of the Alps, about 60 miles away. Look for a bigger dot on the tourist map.

A recent visit showed Turin (Torino in Italian) to be full of surprises. On first inspection it's an old industrial city — an Italian version of Pittsburgh perhaps — where Fiat is king. But then you notice a historic Fiat plant is now a super modern Le Meridien hotel, part of a complex designed by the acclaimed Renzo Piano, no less. And you notice, heck, there's a lot of modern art here (including two major contemporary art museums, one in Castello di Rivoli, a former House of Savoy castle. And aren't there a lot of "beautiful people" in downtown's historic coffeehouses and on the arcade-lined streets. And, wow, check out the Italian designer duds.

Piedmont's vineyards.

A baroque square in Turin.

Then you meet chain-smoking chef Davide Scabin, who is probably insane, can quote from "Men in Black" and "The Da Vinci Code," and is a perfect example of what makes Turin tick: a one-Michelin-star chef with an unusual philosophy that food should be playful and "help keep alive the little girl or boy in each of us."

An example from his multicourse Creative Menu ($183 per person) is his trademark Cyber Egg. Served in a clear plastic box, it's a balloon filled with egg yolk and caviar (you are instructed to open the box, make a cut in the balloon with an X-acto knife and suck). Scabin, whose restaurant Cobal.Zero is in the Castello di Rivoli, and who teaches at the Polytechnic here, is also an excellent classic chef (his risotto with fontina cheese, topped with white truffle shavings, is to die for) and no doubt will be a big hit in New York some day. (Olympics-goers note: Scabin is planning special picnic menus for the Games.)

In preparation for the Olympics, much of Turin is currently a construction zone — think Grande Dig. Parking lots are being created under downtown's Baroque squares, new structures are going up and old buildings are getting face-lifts. For instance, the opening ceremonies will be held in Stadio Olympic, a former soccer stadium commissioned by Benito Mussolini in 1932, to which additions are being made that match the original design.

Figure skating, speed skating, short track and hockey will be held in or close to the city. Olympic banners are on display around town and an information center has been created in a city square.

Meanwhile life goes on, including in the charming coffeehouses, such as Bicerin, with roots in the 1600s, where for about $5 you can enjoy the namesake bicerin hot drink, with layers of coffee, bitter chocolate and cream — heaven in a cup.

Want hip? Turin's got that too, especially in the recently revived Roman Quarter, with a late-night crowd (you can dine here until midnight), restaurants, bars, cafes and wine bars. Start your night as the locals do with an aperitif such as vermouth (invented here) then go to a late dinner and stroll the piazzas or hit some clubs.

Chocolate is king here. About an hour away in Alba, Ferrero makes Ferrero Rocher chocolates and the chocolate hazelnut spread Nutella (the candy firm also created Tic Tacs). Inside the city are chocolate shops galore, offering gianduiotto, a melt-in-your-mouth combo of chocolate and hazelnuts wrapped in gold foil.

And the Shroud of Turin? Many visitors are surprised to find it's, well, shrouded. It's housed in the Duomo, and what you see is a wooden altar in which the shroud, which some believe is Jesus' burial cloth, is encased. There's also a copy of the cloth on display. Once the property of the House of Savoy, the shroud is now owned by the Vatican and is traditionally displayed only in Holy Years (the last in 2000, the next in 2025), although there are rumors the pope at least will be asked to put it on display for the Olympics.

If you go

Getting there: Fly Alitalia to Milan and drive about 1 1/2 hours to Turin. Or you can fly directly to Turin via Rome.

Staying there: The Grand Hotel Sitea is a pleasant, historic city property (www.thi.it). Le Meridien (www.lemeridien.com) has two adjacent properties in the old Fiat factory, one four-star and the other five-star.

'Full-day' has critics

Some parents feel pressured

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With a May 18 kindergarten enrollment deadline fast approaching, some parents feel they are in a quandary regarding whether to enroll their kindergartner in a full-time tuition based program next fall or in the traditional half-day program.

As a way to help boost educational opportunities for Cohasset's youngest students as well as the bottom line of the budget, the school department will offer both full-day kindergarten in addition to the half-day program for the first time this fall.

Parents will pay $1,800 "tuition" to participate in the full-day program for the year. With at least 70 students expected to sign up, the program could yield $126,000. There is no charge for the half-day program.

The Osgood School recently held an informational kindergarten orientation program for parents that did little to allay parental stress over which program is best for their child.

Concerns including questions over the potential integration of full- and half-day students in the same classroom led families to turn out in numbers at the May 5 school committee meeting.

"It has not been explained how this will work," said Beth Tarpey, 12 Bates Lane, the mother of a child about to enter kindergarten. Tarpey, who supports the half-day program, said parents were frightened by what was said at the orientation, including the possibility of combining the full- and half-day students into the same classroom, when they thought the half-day separate program would continue to be an option.

She said "half-day" parents were told they could dismiss their kindergartner early every day from the combined classroom.

"That took a lot of people who are on the fence (about half-day) over to the other side," said

Assistant Principal Mike Gill and Police Chief James Hussey field questions from the media following the discovery of a threatening note and bullet at the middle-high school Wednesday.

Investigation launched on school incident

Bullet, threatening note found at CMHS

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

All Cohasset police officers were called to the scene when a note implying threats along with a bullet was discovered Wednesday outside the middle high school.

Police Chief Jim Hussey said just before 6 a.m., a member of the school faculty who was opening up the building for the day found the note and ammunition. Hussey said because there is now an open investigation into the matter, he could not comment on the specifics of the note, including what it said or whether it was handwritten or typed. He would not specify the type of gun that would use that size bullet.

He did say it was an actual bullet and not a shell.

"The note implied a threat and we take that very seriously," said Hussey. He said the note and bullet have been sent off for forensic processing.

When the note was found, the police were immediately called to the school. It is still unclear whether the note was left at the school Tuesday night or very early Wednesday morning. Students begin arriving at roughly 7:20 a.m. and entered a "lockdown" situation, where they were escorted to a safe location upon entering the building. Hussey said to ensure the safety of the students, they were all kept together.

Post-prom party pact still needs the finishing touches

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Parents are working collaboratively with the school committee and police department to ensure all the proper precautionary measures are in place before this year's all-night post-prom party on May 27.

A preliminary contract has been drafted that will set clear rules for the night for both students and chaperones. Parents, who plan to send their students, will also be required to sign.

The school committee has been cool to continuing to allow the Post Prom Party, a privately sponsored event now in its ninth year, to be held at the middle-high school following alarming reports that last year's event included student drinking and rowdiness.

Therefore, the Post Prom Committee is taking every precaution to ensure this year's party that runs from 11 p.m. until 5 a.m. remains drug and alcohol free.

School committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said there are still some clarifications needed in the contract before it is given to students to sign. She said it has to be made clear that if students bring a bag with clothes to change into after the prom, the bags will be checked. "I believe all bags need to be searched," she said.

While school committee member Rick Flynn suggested only going through "suspicious" bags, MacCarthy said the issue then becomes too subjective.

"When we go to the airport, we get searched," she said, regardless of whether a person looks suspicious.

Members of the post-prom committee said chaperones would conduct the searches. The changing areas, which will be monitored by chaperones, will only have one way in and one way out.

Every year, chaperones attend a meeting where they are briefed on the rules. McCarthy said last year when she was a chaperone, she would have liked to have had a more thorough understanding of what her liabilities would have been as a host of a party where underage drinking took place.

"Maybe a little more seriousness would be taking place," she

Griffin charts course for town

By Samantha Brown

Hingham has one, so do Scituate, Norwell and Hull.

But when one "Googles" Cohasset on the internet, no official town Web site pops up.

That could be about to change. In the roughly four short months since Town Manager Bill Griffin has been on board, he has identified some areas of strengths and weaknesses and is establishing goals to carry Cohasset through fiscal 2006 and beyond.

One of those goals is to develop a cost-effective strategy to implement a town Web site at an estimated cost of $1,500-$2,500.

"Cohasset is one of the very few municipalities in Massachusetts without an official town Web site."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

"Cohasset is one of the very few municipalities in Massachusetts without an official town Web site," said Griffin, adding the town is missing out on an excellent means of communicating with an involved citizenry.

Griffin said most towns hire an outside consultant to develop a Web site. He explained someone on town staff would maintain the site so that it stays current with postings of meetings, minutes, announcements, special events and the like.

He said a useful Web site needs to stay current or risk losing credibility. Longer term, he said the Web site would be upgraded to include access to assessors' property records and on-line payments for things like beach stickers and dog licenses.

"That will cost beyond the esti-

PICTURE THIS/Keith Gauley

Keith Gauley

Name: Keith Gauley

Occupation: Deer Hill Elementary School Principal

Best day of your life: The day I graduated from high school (interestingly enough) as I realized that 12+ years of effort and work went into making that day happen.

Best vacation: Our trip two years ago to Phoenix, Arizona. We climbed Camelback Mountain, golfed, and we went to BankOne Ballpark to see a Diamondbacks game. It was our first time in the Southwest.

Favorite season: Autumn

Favorite holiday: Christmas – because I love the time spent with family and I always enjoy buying a secret gift for my wife or my kids and watching their reaction to the gift.

Favorite junk food: Hostess cupcakes still "call my name" more often than the nutritionist or doctor might like.

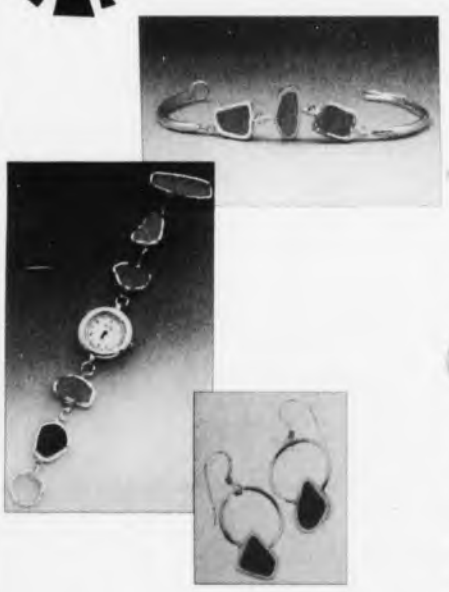
Best book: My favorite book of all time from when I was a kid was "Summer of the Swans." My favorite book as an adult is actually the original John Grisham book "The Firm."

Best movie: (Maybe this is predictable but…) Stand and Deliver

Best TV show: Extreme Home Makeover

Pet peeve: Adults who complain at youth sports games about the referee/umpire.

Most embarrassing moment: Nothing comes to mind right away – but I would say that it was a public speaking situation at a School Committee meeting (in a former district) and I had one heck of a time speaking fluently and finding the right words for the moment. Unfortunately, it was on cable television as well.



Goal: To be remembered as a person who was devoted to his family and who made a difference in the lives of others. How we do that doesn't really matter – but being a husband, father, teacher, school principal, and coach helps make this happen.

Person I'd most like to meet: Actually the "unknown person" because I feel that sometimes we get too hung up on those who are famous people and the "unknown person" is sometimes just as talented – just a special – and has yet to be discovered. We only have to listen to find out how special people are.

Biggest worry: Poor health coming my way.

Best part of Cohasset: The support of the community and the wonderful children at Deer Hill School.

Special election moves next door

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Citizens heading to Town Hall for the May 21 special election won't find the usual array of voting booths and cadre of poll workers.

Instead they'll find an auditorium filled with seats and a stage decorated for that evening's performance of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of "Annie," a show that was booked months before officials realized a special election would be necessary.

But voters won't have to go very far. The election will be held from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. next door to Town Hall at the Second Congregational Church Hall, 43 Highland Ave. All registered voters will be notified of the change of venue for the election via direct mail 10 days prior to the day.

The advisory committee recently approved a $5,270 reserve fund transfer to cover the special election costs that include moving voting booths, paying election workers, and the printing and postage necessary to inform voters of the change of venue.

May 21 is the first Saturday the election could be held and still meet the minimum 35 days required once an election is called to allow for voter registration, absentee ballots, and ballot preparation. The following two weekends, Memorial Day weekend and high school graduation, could be more problematic. Rather than wait until June or hold the election on a Tuesday, Town Manager Bill Griffin looked into the alternate voting site.

A $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override to subsidize the school budget and a debt exclusion asking voters to support a $13.2 million "50/50" taxpayer subsidy for the Little Harbor sewer project are on the ballot. Although Town Meeting supported both the override and debt exclusion, under Prop. 2-1/2 rules, both must pass with a simple majority at the polls.

If the $400,000 operating budget override passes, it would be the fifth one approved since 1999 and the 12th since 1988. Operating budget overrides permanently increase taxes. The town passed a $400,000 override last spring that subsidized the school budget.

If the override does not pass, cuts to the fiscal 2006 budget will be needed to make up the deficit.

The average homeowner with a $670,000 home will pay $6,998 in taxes for fiscal 2005, based on a tax rate of $10.44 per $1,000 of assessed valuation. If the $400,000 override passes, it will be an additional 1.81 percent increase, or roughly $126 for the average homeowner, bringing that homeowner's total tax bill up to $7,550, a total 7.89 percent increase from fiscal 2005. For fiscal 2006, the tax rate will increase to $11.27 per $1,000, or 82 cents including the override.

The tax rate also includes the built-in yearly 2-1/2 percent increase, which will add $167 to the average bill, and there will be a debt exclusion increase of 3.7 percent, or roughly $259 for the average bill, which covers debt service for projects, such as the school building expansion and renovations. A Community Preservation Act 1.5 percent surcharge is also added to the total bill.

The debt exclusion on the ballot would subsidize the Little Harbor and North Cohasset expansion sewer projects. With debt exclusions, the taxes go away when the debt is paid off.

Town Meeting approved two sewer articles at the annual Town Meeting which would appropriate $12 million to connect 440 dwelling units in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue neighborhoods to the municipal sewer plant off Elm Street and $1.2 million to expand the North Cohasset District to include 37 homes along portions of Jerusalem Road, Rust Way and Deep Run. Town Meeting also voted to ask all taxpayers in town to pick up 50 percent of the cost, hence the need for the debt exclusion.

The so-called "50/50" is in keeping with precedent established in the mid-1990s with expansion of the Central Cohasset District and development of the North Cohasset Sewer District, when voters at the polls agreed to share the cost of sewer installation for both those projects.

If the debt exclusion override passes, it will add another 15 cents to the tax rate on top of the 19 cents a successful operating override would add. If the debt exclusion fails, the users will pick up the entire cost of the sewer through betterment fees.

What could taxes look like for fiscal 2006?

Home price	taxes at10.44 per $1K	add 2-1/2	add debt exclusion	add tax override	add 50/50	total
$670,000	$6,994.80	$167	$259	$126	$100	$ 7,646.80
$770,000	$8,038.80	$192	$297	$146	$115	$ 8,788.80
$870,000	$9,082.80	$217	$336	$164	$130	$ 9,929.80
$970,000	$10,126.80	$242	$375	$183	$145	$11,071.80
$1,070,000	$11,170.80	$267	$413	$202	$160	$12,212.80

figures do not include a 1.5 percent CPC surcharge applied to the total tax bill, which will vary depending on the outcome of the special election. Not counting 2005, there has been a total of 30 overrides since 1988 including capital exclusion, debt exclusion and general overrides.*

School board reorganization

Jamie Williams has been voted in as the new school committee chairman. Serving as vice chairman will be newcomer Alfred Slanetz, who ran unopposed for the three-year seat at the recent town election. Adrienne MacCarthy will continue in her role as secretary of the school committee.

PSO donation

The School Committee voted to accept a donation of $2,357 from the Parent School Organization last Thursday, half of which will be used to pay for the Connect-ED technology notification system purchased by the schools. Connect-ED allows the school to record and send telephone messages home to keep the lines of communication open with parents. The technology is useful during emergency situations or for regular updates on activities at the school.

Rotary Clubs make a difference

On Saturday, May 21, Rotary Clubs throughout eastern Massachusetts and Rhode Island will be dedicated to one task — bring potable drinking water to South America. The 63 clubs in Rotary District 7950 are dedicating this day to sponsoring adults and youth who participate in activities at eight different locations around the South Shore. Wompatuck State Park will host walking, jogging, running and biking.

According to Cohasset Rotary Club President Peter Cotter, Rotarians have one goal, "To change and save lives," and the pure water effort is one way to live the Rotary Pledge of "Service above self."

Every day, contaminated water causes 15,000 people to die. Twenty-three billion people are suffering from diseases caused by contaminated water. In Honduras, 25,000 children die from disease spread by contaminated water clogged with e-coli bacteria and parasites.

Individual Registration is $35 for adults and $10 for children 17 and under. All participants will receive a free T-shirt and of course, pure water will be available to all who participate. For more information, please contact Rotary Club President Peter Cotter at either (781) 749-8378 or at (617) 439-8589.

Former town employee gets 18 months in prison

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Nicole N. Bartlett, former administrative assistant to the Cohasset town manager, was sentenced in federal court Tuesday (May 10) to 18 months in prison to be followed by three years supervised release. She will also be required to make restitution in an amount to be determined at a later date.

Bartlett was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Rya Zobel in connection with the theft of more than $200,000 from her former employer, the Boston Children's Museum, and fellow employees of the museum by devising and executing a theft scheme involving the museum's payroll system. The overall scheme involved more than 440 unauthorized checks that Barlett fraudulently endorsed and deposited into personal bank accounts.

Samantha Martin, spokesperson for the US Attorney's Office, said where Bartlett serves her sentence will be decided by the Bureau of Prisons. After she serves her sentence, she will begin a term of supervised release. If she violates that probation, she can be put back in prison.

Bartlett resigned from her position at Town Hall on Sept. 27, 2004, the day the charges surfaced. She was hired by former Town Manager Mark Haddad in May 2003. Bartlett worked at the Children's Museum from Sept. 30, 1998 until March 2003. Criminal records show four days after she began working for the museum, she forged the first in a long line of unauthorized checks.

Bartlett, a Marshfield resident, was responsible for the payroll in Cohasset. The town paid auditors, Melanson Heath & Company, P.C. $12,500 to conduct search of the town's records for any impropriety. No criminal activity was found.

However, the town's liability insurance carrier, MIAA (a self-insured pool of the Massachusetts Municipal Association), may have paid her more than $60,000 when it settled her claim alleging she was sexually harassed by a public official. The case was settled Sept. 28, the day after Bartlett resigned from her position at Town Hall.

Some parents feel pressured about full-day kindergarten

Tarpey, adding parents are getting the message they better send their children to the full-day program, or they will be the "odd man out academically or socially."

"I think your intention was to do all you can do to undermine the half-day program," she said.

A full-day kindergarten feasibility task force made up of Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan, Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey, Osgood Adjustment Counselor Bob LeCount, as well as parents, kindergarten teachers, preschool teachers, and special education teachers, was established in the spring of 2003 to determine the feasibility and potential financial gains from such a program.

The group developed and distributed a district survey and roughly 159 surveys - or 20 percent - were returned of approximately 475 distributed at Osgood, 375 at Deer Hill and from 25 to 50 at local preschools. Roughly 52 percent of parents who responded said they would enroll their child in a tuition-based full-day program, while 30 percent said they would not enroll their child. Seven percent were unsure, and 7 percent reported enrollment was not applicable.

Jeff Moy, 33 Ledgewood Dr., also has a child about to enter kindergarten and said he understands the issue is a complicated one. "My own house is divided," he quipped.

Moy said regardless of which program he prefers, his major concern is combining both the full- and half-day children in the same class room.

"I don't think you guys have any idea of how the curriculum will work," he said, adding there will be some children who would be in school all day and could therefore work at a slower pace because they have more time.

"What happens to the half-day class? Do they work at half speed for the full-day class and double time for the half-day class? I don't want my child to take a risk either way," he said.

School committee member Alfred Slanetz suggested looking into potentially having full-day kindergarten for all students maybe two or three times per week and half-days the rest of the week.

But Sheehan said much research was done and it was determined offering a full-day program that allows children to study topics in a more in-depth manner works best when offered five days per week.

Sheehan said currently, she hears from kindergarten teachers who say they feel rushed on a daily basis. In response to Moy's comments, she said the half-day classes won't be racing to keep up and the full-day class will not be operating "at a snail's pace." Teachers in the classrooms will be able to determine the proper pace for students, she said.

The task force report states research has shown children have greater academic and social success in school by participating in full-day kindergarten programs, and that full-day kindergarten children perform better than half-day kindergarten children. It also states children are better prepared to make the transition to first grade, and that children score higher on achievement tests if they are enrolled in full-day kindergarten programs.

The task force also examined data relative to full-day programs across the state and found 55 percent of Massachusetts school districts offer full-day kindergarten. However, space and fiscal resources have been the top two barriers to implementing programs. With the movement of the third grade up to the Deer Hill school, Osgood has plenty of space to accommodate students.

Tarpey said Cohasset needs to decide whether the town will offer full-day mandatory kindergarten for all students and find a way to fund it, or decide only half of the children may attend and set up a lottery system for enrollment if that is what the town can afford.

But when School Committee Chairman Jamie Williams asked if money was the main problem with the program, all parents in the audience blurted out "no."

The school committee will take the matter up again at its May 19 meeting. For more information on full-day kindergarten please visit the Department of Education's Web site at www.doe.mass.edu or contact Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan at (781) 383-6117.

Supt. Walsh welcomes new staff

There will be some new faces at Cohasset Middle High School this fall including Principal Joel Antolini, Assistant Middle School Principal Elizabeth Sternala, and Director of Curriculum and Professional Development Nancy Mrzyglod. Supt. Denise Walsh publicly welcomed the new members of her "leadership team," at last Thursday's School Committee meeting.

Antolini comes to Cohasset with 20 years under his belt spanning five school systems — one of which was Cohasset. Over the years he served as assistant principal in Mansfield and is currently the principal at Holbrook Junior Senior High School. "I am extremely excited to have the opportunity to reconnect with the students in Cohasset," he said.

Sternala formerly served as a middle-school science teacher in Needham and is currently enrolled in a graduate program at Harvard. She said she cannot wait to work with middle-school aged students again, and begin a new chapter in Cohasset. "I have two weeks left and 60 pages of writing" for her coursework, she said.

Mrzyglod was not able to attend Thursday's meeting but Walsh said she is a veteran in the business. "When we had finished the (selection) process, we only had one candidate," Walsh said. Due to her outstanding qualifications, she beat out all other applicants.

Web site floated for Cohasset mate above," he said. "But we want to crawl before we start running."

Establishing a town Web site was part of a larger discussion about the future at the May 3 selectmen's meeting.

Griffin said he would like to work with the board of selectmen, advisory committee, school committee and director of finance to hold a series of fiscal review sessions to improve financial management. This would culminate in an annual fiscal summit in the fall that would prepare the town for the upcoming budget cycle.

Griffin would also like to develop a long-term financial model to project town revenues and expenditures over a five-to-10 year period, and "show where we're likely to have problems." He said he wants to be able to undertake "what-if" analyses based on assumptions from prior years. He said he has a model he can use from another town and Director of Finance Michael Buckley will be able to help him with the historical data.

Griffin also plans to develop a set of financial policies and guidelines to address topics such as:

- fiscal reserves
- financial planning and monitoring
- capital planning
- debt management
- revenue enhancement
- investments

Griffin said he plans on utilizing the capital budget planning committee as part of this initiative.

He also plans to act on Buckley's request to form a trust-fund investments advisory committee. "There are a lot of smart people in town who know about trust funds," said Griffin, adding the town could benefit from their expertise.

Another goal is the careful monitoring of departmental spending trends during the course of the fiscal year to minimize the need for supplemental appropriations at the fall special town meeting, Griffin said.

Griffin said he would like to develop a schedule to assure the Town Meeting Warrant is completed in a timely fashion. "Less than half of the articles in that book had a recommendation," from selectmen or other applicable boards at the annual Town Meeting and that should not be the case, he said.

Griffin would also like to develop an administrative code to organize board policies and procedures and update them or develop new policies and procedures as necessary. Griffin said he would be utilizing the help of all the boards to determine what is appropriate. "I shouldn't be sitting in my office deciding how you're going to run things," he said.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he would like to see a strategic plan for building maintenance put in place. He also suggested implementing an educational program for residents as Greenbush commuter rail train comes to town.

Griffin said he will prioritize the goals and won't address everything at once. "I want to have some goals to keep working on next year," he quipped.

Post-prom party pact needs finishing touches said if chaperones had understood the seriousness of turning a blind eye. While MacCarthy believes there should be zero tolerance during the event, not all parents shared her view last year.

Middle-high school Principal Jack DeLorenzo said all the bathrooms and locker rooms would be secured before the party. "Based on last year's party, we know the kids were one step ahead of us," he said. Underclassmen were allowed into the building to view the decorations beforehand and apparently hid alcohol in various areas for the seniors. "This year we won't be showing the town (the decorations) and the building won't be open," he said.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh said wording in the contract did not specifically address students' acknowledging the event would be drug and alcohol free. She said she would like to see a line for the student to sign his or her name agreeing to remain substance free during the evening.

DeLorenzo agreed and said students definitely need to sign the line accepting responsibility. He said he wants to be able to assure parents their children will arrive at the dance in a sober condition, "and we'll bring them back to you at 5:30 in the same way."

He added, "If you need me, I'm only a call away."

The contract will continue to be finalized and the school committee will take a vote at its next meeting, scheduled for May 19 at 7 p.m. at the middle-high school.

A 'no' vote for school choice

Students from other communities will not have the option to attend Cohasset public schools under the School Choice program, at least for the 2005-2006 school year. The School Committee cast a negative vote last Thursday, and will therefore not be open to accepting any new students through the program.

Every year, school districts are given the opportunity to decide whether they would like to become part of the School Choice program. The vote against enrolling must be cast by June 1, and the Department of Education must be notified or the district is automatically enrolled.

Before the vote was taken, Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh cautioned the school committee, "Because of tight class sizes, this wouldn't be something I think would be a benefit right now."

"I think we have such a class size issue it's a no-brainer we'll vote against it," said Alfred Slanetz.

Rick Flynn agreed, "We haven't had it, why change now?"

The Massachusetts School Choice law was enacted in 1991 to give parents the opportunity to send their children to schools outside the town they live in. According to the Department of Education, 15 states in addition to Massachusetts offer some form of inter-district public school choice, and 25 others have legislation pending.

Parents do not have to pay tuition for their children to attend public schools in other towns, and the state pays tuition of roughly 75 percent of the per pupil cost, up to a limit of $5000, which would mean Cohasset would receive compensation, but not enough to fully cover the cost, which is roughly $8,000 per student.

New sports Web site takes off

The Cohasset High School athletic department has a new Web site, which Athletic Director Ron Ford said has been working out well. "We've gotten a lot of positive feedback from parents," he said.

At last week's school committee meeting, Ford also reported on the effect of higher user fees for sports. Students now pay $125 for the first sport, $125 for the second sport and $100 for the third sport to help offset reductions in the athletic budget. In turn, students receive a complementary adult pass to all home games.

"This sports season has been very well attended," said Ford, adding more parents could be attending as a result of complementary passes.

The Web site can be accessed at www.cohassetk12.org/hschool/CohassetAthletics/index.html or via the Cohasset High School main page.

I have always been fairly fit and strong and I have always wondered what it would be like to really go to the next level. How do people feel when they are really fit?
I received a voucher from Fitness Together and considered the offer. I am very busy with 2 companies, 2 kids, a traveling husband and a million other distractions. Time is ALWAYS in short supply. FT offered close proximity to my house, a time that was convenient for me, and a really efficient workout.
I still go 3 times a week, and always look forward to it. I see plenty of friends there and the atmosphere is great. The session is private, focused and all about me and my goals. It takes no mental effort on my part, and the best thing for me is that it is an appointment, so I have to show up. I am not dieting or trying to lose weight. I love the way I look in the mirror, and I feel really strong and fit. It has been a fantastic investment for me , and I love having FT as part of my life.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

ANNIE WILL LIFT YOUR SPIRITS

I hope that this column finds everyone in a relatively good frame of mind due to the fact "the sun did come out tomorrow!" (At least it is out now as I am writing the column.) That being said, if you are looking for a truly enjoyable way to spend this Friday or Saturday evening or Sunday afternoon, consider coming to the Cohasset Dramatic Club's performance of "Annie". The show is being held at Town Hall this weekend and next with the Friday and Saturday shows starting at 7:30 p.m. and the Sunday matinees at 2 p.m.

For tickets, please go to Buttonwood Books in Shaw's Plaza or the Front Street Book Store in Scituate Harbor. The cost is $12 per ticket and for the Sunday shows, all Annie look-a-likes are encouraged to come dressed for a costume parade and prizes.

DEADLINES A MUST

A reminder from myself to all about submissions for this column. Please make sure to have all of your news and information to me no later than noon Tuesday! I will not be taking any more requests to squeeze items in at the last minute as I have a block of time when I write the column and submit it to the editor for review. All items received after the noon-time deadline will be included in the following week's paper.

COLLEGE LACROSSE

Rob Hickey and Mike Rasmussen (former CHS Lacrosse teammates) are members of the Widener University Lacrosse Team that defeated nationally-ranked Messiah College to win the Middle Atlantic Conference (MAC) Championship Game. With the MAC title win, they are on their way to the NCAA Division III Tournament.

BEING 50 IS NIFTY!

CALLING ALL ARTISTS

The South Shore Art Center will present Juried and Members' Art Exhibitions, June 17–19 during the 50th Arts Festival on Cohasset Common. Open to all artists, the work must be original, completed within the last three years, and not previously exhibited at the art center or festival. There is no limit on the number of submissions. Work must be submitted May 14–16. The Members' Exhibition is open to all members of the South Shore Art Center. Membership must be current through June 2005 and memberships may be obtained or renewed when work is dropped off. Work must be submitted May 21–23. The work will be displayed under the tents at the festival Shore June 17-19. For an exhibition entry form and more information visit www.ssac.org or call 781-383-2787.

ICE SHOW

The Skating Club of Hingham will present its annual ice show on May 21 at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham. This year's show theme is "A Cruise Around The World." More than 80 area skaters from ages 4 through 60 will perform group and solo numbers to a variety of music from around the world, including Asia, the Middle East, Europe, Mexico, the USA and much more. The two-hour show will feature 12 solo numbers by members of the club. Tickets are available at Pilgrim Arena, 75 Recreation Road, and are $5 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and seniors. For more information call the Skating Club of Hingham at 781-741-8194. Several area children are taking part in this show as well, including Cohasset's own Ellie, Clara and Emily Baumgarten.

Chris Roy is an MVP wrestler.

ON STAGE

The Academy of The Company Theatre — students ages 7-12— will present its production of Irving Berlin's great musical, "Annie Get Your Gun" at the Company Theatre in Norwell. Cohasset residents, Harry Braga and Isabelle Robinson, are is in this show. Performances are Friday, May 13 at 7:30p.m., Saturday, May 14 at 7:30p.m., and Sunday, May 15 at 3 p.m. Tickets at the box-office located at 30 Accord Park in Norwell, and by calling 781-871-2787. All tickets are $10.

MVP WRESTLER

Sophomore Chris Roy was named the Most Valuable Player on Lawrence Academy's wrestling team for the past winter season. Coach Justin Cotter reported that this season's young team made remarkable improvement throughout the season. With many close matches resulting in a season record of 8-13 in the Independent School League, the team's attitude earned them their first-ever ISL sportsmanship award. An ISL championship medallist, Chris competed in postseason and clinched his MVP honors after defeating the ISL champion from the Brooks School at the New England's. Chris, who plays football for Lawrence Academy during the fall season, is the son of Peter Roy of Cohasset and Susan Roy-Reposa of Hingham. Great Harry Braga of Cohasset is performing this weekend in the Academy of The Company Theatre's production, "Annie Get Your Gun" at the Company Theatre in Norwell.

NDA HONORS

Notre Dame Academy is proud to announce the honor roll for the third term of the 2004-2005 school year. Cohasset's Caitlin O'Connell, Grade 11; Margaret Pilczak, Grade 11; Jacqueline Chase, Grade 12; and Megan Stanley, Grade 12, all made the principal's list. Super work girls.

That is all for this week. Please send in all of your items to me no later than Tuesdays by noon. All photos should be emailed to mford@cnc.com or dropped off at the Cohasset News Store on Brook Street downtown.

Make sure that the photo is in an envelope that is labeled "Around Town Cohasset" with a description of the written piece that it goes with.

During the month of May we will make arts and crafts from Mexico. Join us on May 18 and 19 as we make our very own serapes. Call 781-383-3198 for more information. The museum is located at 100 Sohier St., just behind the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Estate sale — Lord & Ladies will hold an Estate Sale on Saturday, May 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., to benefit Our World, Children's Global Discovery Museum, 100 Sohier St. Sale includes antique furniture, mirrors, paintings, rugs, lamps, tableware, linens, china, glassware, books and many "treasures." Proceeds go toward the installation of the Museum's new Bio-Diversity exhibit slated for opening in September,2005.

The museum is open Wednesdays and Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., for drop-in playgroup and a craft. Visitors may also explore the Small World toddler play space, geared for ages 1 to 5.

The Museum offers a rotating arts and crafts activity based on the culture being focused on for the month.

Admission is $3 per child with optional donation for adults.

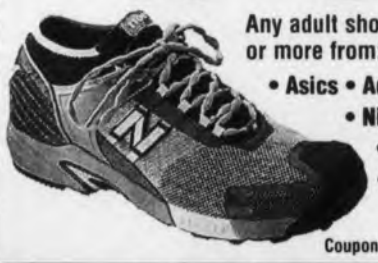
May 24, 4-6 p.m., Manners Can Be Fun with Angela Brown. Effective etiquette begins in the home no doubt, but sometimes kids need additional reiteration from an outside party to really propel those manners into skills. "Manners can be Fun," stresses the importance of introductions, formal and informal; phone manners; table etiquette, including setting the table, properly passing food, appropriate table conversation, proper utensil use; poise and body posture; 'please and thank you,' and more. $50 per class, sign up for individual classes or both. For ages 5-7. Call to register 781-383-3198

Beginning in June, let Jim Armstrong, well known and respected South Shore guitar teacher, teach your child how to play the ukulele at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum. Unlike the guitar, a ukulele is just the right size for your preschooler and much easier to play. Students will be playing a song after only one lesson, a real confidence builder. Children will learn to play and sing classic American and International children's songs and have a chance to make lasting friendships with fellow students by forming and naming their own band.

In the final session, a recital will be given and the famous music bands will display their banners and play and sing their favorite songs over real microphones for their parents.

Classes start the week of June 6. Sessions are held on both Monday and Tuesdays. Call Jim for times, dates and fees at 781-871-9088.

Historical view from the 17th Century



The Cohasset Historical Society concludes its spring lecture series with Jim Baker presenting a "17th Century World View," on Wednesday, May 18 at 7:30 p.m., at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St.. Baker is the curator at the Alden House Historic site in Duxbury and former Senior Historian at Plimoth Plantation.

He'll be discussing the beliefs and ideas of the 17th century and the mental baggage that Pilgrims brought with them from the old world. His lecture will include the systems of cosmology, astrology, galenic medicine, alchemy and theories of magic and witchcraft, all factors influencing the way they reacted to their environment.

This program is open to members and non-members. Admission is free and light refreshments will be served.

For more information, call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

CEA friends leave donation of thanks

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Ruth and Abraham Coblentz spent many an afternoon in good company at the Cohasset Council on Elder Affairs. They would dine with friends, enjoy music, and attend educational programs.

As a way of saying "thanks," Abraham, affectionately known as "Abe" by his friends at the center, left a $30,000 donation in his will to the CEA, which was presented Monday by the couple's niece Sandy Goldman.

"I hope this can be used for one or two lunches as well as special entertainment programs. They really loved music," said Goldman. She added the money could also be used to help with transportation costs as well as helping those seniors who cannot afford the cost of their prescriptions. She also said she hoped the funds would make it possible for the CEA to host more educational programs on estate planning and transitional care.

CEA Outreach Coordinator Carol Barrett said Ruth and Abraham both used to frequent the CEA. She said after Ruth passed away, Abraham continued coming and always brightened up her days.

"He had a great sense of humor," she said, adding at every lunch he attended he would always sit in the same seat, and joked he wouldn't stand for someone taking his favorite spot. "We will miss them, but we have very fond memories."

"We were very happy to have them share a part of their lives with us," she said.

Goldman said the couple, who lived on Brewster Road, loved to travel. Ruth was born in Germany.

"My aunt was a phenomenal cook," said Goldman, adding she has all of Ruth's recipes, which she cherishes.

Ruth was also an avid gardener and "Her yard was her delight."

Goldman also said Ruth was a very talented clothing designer and her patterns were used by some exclusive companies, including Baby Dior, the children's line of famous designer Christian Dior.

Goldman said Abraham will likely be remembered for the way he talked about his pride and joy — a silver BMW, and CEA staff and friends can attest to the stories. Goldman said even after surgery when he wasn't feeling himself and his memory wasn't up to par, if asked what kind of car he had, he could go on with every little detail.

"My uncle loved the center and when I called him I would ask him what he did that day and he would tell us about the schoolchildren coming in or what he had for lunch. He took in an awful lot and these funds could never repay what you gave to him," Goldman said. "I can't thank everyone enough."

Barrett said the center already has all the issues Goldman mentioned on its radar screen and is grateful to have the funds available to help enhance the work already being done. She added the CEA has plans to host a special evening of music in the couple's honor, probably in the fall, and Goldman will be invited to attend.

CEA Outreach Coordinator Carol Barrett, Town Manager Bill Griffin, and CEA Director Kathy Bryanton gladly accept a donation from Sandy Goldman, the niece of the late Ruth and Abraham Coblentz. The couple used to frequent the center and Abraham left $30,000 to the CEA in his will.

WELLSPRING

Get PC-ready for livin' online— The nonprofit organization, Wellspring, at 814 Nantasket Ave. in Hull is offering the basics in computer training during the month of June.

Learn the proper use of basic computer functions; be able to locate files, folders and programs; learn to make use of the Internet and understand the terminology associated with "livin' online." This "PC Ready" class will be held Tuesday and Thursday, June 7 and 9, from 6-8 p.m. Cost is $60.

Then on Tuesday and Thursday, June 14 and 16, another class, "Word Ready for Beginners" will be held from 6-8 p.m. Create, save and work with Word documents including an understanding of the necessary functions of this important program as well as inserting pictures. Cost is $60.

"Excel Ready for Beginners" will be held on Tuesday and Thursday, June 21 and 23 from 6-8 p.m. With the powerful medium of Excel, you will learn to create, save and work with Excel workbooks; enter data and format cells; learn formulae and how to work with rows and columns. Cost is $60.

"PowerPoint Ready for Beginners" will be held on Tuesday and Thursday, June 28 and 30 from 6-8 p.m. Learn to create slide shows and how to add text and pictures. When you are done, you will be able to run your own slide shows. Cost is $60.

Financial assistance is available and Wellspring will not deny services due to an inability to pay.

Heavy metals make sour notes in school water pipes

Affected bubblers are taken off line

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Water bubblers in certain areas of all three Cohasset school buildings have been temporarily shut off as routine testing revealed abnormally high levels of lead and copper.

Health board chairman Peggy Chapman said there is no reason for alarm, as the water sources that had elevated levels of lead and copper have been shut off and therefore, continued exposure will not be a risk.

Supt. of Schools Denise Walsh alerted parents, students and staff of the problem and a plan of action via an April 25 letter. The letter states educational materials will be distributed to parents and flushing of pipes as well as follow-up testing will be conducted at the schools.

"The administration takes these results seriously and is moving immediately to safeguard the health of the students, faculty and staff," she wrote.

Water commission chairman Glenn Pratt said the town is required by the Environmental Protection Agency to conduct annual water testing in town buildings. One year ago, tests in the three school buildings and approximately 20 homes showed elevated levels of both lead and copper. The water department reported its findings to the school department.

"We found some samples were high, which didn't surprise us," Pratt said. He explained copper leaching is more prevalent in new pipes which do not have the buildup of a protective film on the inside, and new copper pipes were installed at the middle-high school and Deer Hill school during their renovations. Copper leaching typically occurs in pipes where the water is not constantly moving, and at the school buildings, drinking water fountains or "bubblers" are the biggest culprit.

"Drinking fountains don't get that much use," said Pratt and therefore, water tends to sit in the pipes.

Pratt said after last year's tests, then Supt. of Schools Edward Malvey was in the process of retiring and the new facilities manager was not on board. "A lot of time went by with the DEP wringing its hands, waiting for Cohasset's plan (to fix the problem)," he said.

School Committee Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz said new Facilities Operations Manager Brian Adams received copies of the reports sometime between last December or January and immediately shut down the contaminated areas. "He has been working on resolving those areas ever since," Slanetz said, adding any health related concerns are very serious issues and the school department is working to fix the problem. However, it is still unclear what happened between the time the tests were completed in the spring, and the time Adams received the reports.

"There is a new group of leaders and administration in town and they are very much on top of this," Slanetz said.

Pratt said the new pipes aren't totally to blame for the problem. He explained lead gets into in the water from the solder which holds the old pipes together. At the middle-high school, not all pipes were replaced with the renovations, and some older pipes still exist.

"The elevated levels were found at all schools, which is a surprise in the Osgood, because that school has no old plumbing and the new pipes are old enough so one would not expect to see elevated levels," Pratt said.

Adams said the tests which were conducted at the schools showed results that were barely over the allowed levels but were enough to require taking action. He said there were roughly 120 samples taken from different areas throughout all three schools. The results were:

- Cohasset Middle High School — 4 locations lead; 5 locations copper
- Deer Hill School — 6 locations lead; 4 locations copper
- Osgood School — 1 location lead; 2 locations copper

"The lead and copper is not in the water (from the treatment plant) and not in the town's pipes which are iron," said Pratt, meaning the contamination is taking place within the school pipes. Therefore, the issue is not the water department's responsibility to fix, even though it conducted the initial testing. "But we would certainly help in any way we can," Pratt said.

Adams said the water in the affected areas was shut off to prevent students from drinking from the fountains. The areas were flushed to remove any contaminants. Additional water samples were taken after the flushing last Friday (May 6) and when the school department receives the results that will determine the next course of action, he said.

Facilities Operations Manager Brian Adams will attend the May 19 school committee meeting to provide more information. To receive an update prior to that date, please contact Facilities Manager Brian Adams at (781) 383-3031, the Water Department at (781) 383-0057, or the Board of Health at (781) 383-4116.

Water department in compliance with TTHM standard

The Water Commission has announced that in the 2nd Quarter of 2005, the Water Department is now in compliance with the Total Trihalomethanes or 'TTHM' regulation with a level of 77 parts per billion, which it had temporarily exceeded in the 4th Quarter of 2004 and 1st Quarter of 2005.

"We are confident that we have conclusively solved the TTHM problem," said Glenn Pratt, Cohasset Water Commission Chair. "Since early January, our voluntary testing has shown that we have succeeded in reducing the levels in our water system to an average of 55 ppb, much less than the standard of 80 ppb."

According to Pratt, Cohasset's running average over the past four quarters, as of the 2nd quarter of 2005, had been lower than the maximum contaminant level of 80 ppb. Yet, the results of tests taken throughout 2005 the have been significantly lower and are consistent with the levels seen in similar towns as Cohasset. The reduced levels are believe to be the result of several improvements made by the Cohasset Water Dept. to the treatment process and distribution system.

Pratt explained, "We have succeeded in sufficiently reducing TTHMs, as well as significantly improving overall water quality, through an aggressive four step program." Key aspects of this program include:

replacing the filter media to provide better filtration and content removal changing to a more effective coagulant to remove more total organic content from the water changing the chlorination process and injection point operating the treatment plant 24 hours a day which improves the treatment process and dramatically reduces the amount of time that water is stored in the distribution system

"These steps allows us to deliver fresher, better tasting water," Pratt added. "Cohasset residents should be assured that we are working diligently to continue to improve the quality of our tap water as we proceed with our long-term capital improvement program for the Cohasset Water System. Toward that end, we immediately were able to solve a problem with the proper reporting of chlorine contact time that occurred during the first week of March," Pratt said.

According to a notice distributed to all Cohasset residents, in order to ensure proper disinfection, water in the treatment plant must be in contact with chlorine or a similar disinfectant for a minimum amount of time. The amount of time necessary, the contact time, depends on the amount of disinfection in the water and the temperature of the water.

"Operators did not take chlorine residual samples at the proper time to assure chlorine contact time was achieved, and did not record that the chlorine residual concentration was at a level sufficiently high to achieve the required contact time," Pratt explained. "We solved this problem quickly by providing the operations staff with specific written operating procedures and calculation tables to simplify the calculation of the contact time and facilitate the adjustment of the chlorine dose to ensure that regulatory requirements are met," he added.

PUBLIC NOTICE

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

The Cohasset Water Department Has Levels of Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs) Above Drinking Water Standards

The Cohasset Water Department recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely monitor for the presence of contaminants in drinking water. The test results we received for the 1st Quarter of 2005 show that our system exceeds the standard, or maximum contaminant level (MCL), for Total Trihalomethanes (TTHMs). The standard for TTHMs is 80 parts per billion (ppb). The average contaminant level of TTHMs over the last four calendar quarters was 94 ppb.

What should I do? You do not need to use an alternative (e.g. bottled) water supply. However, after reading this Notice, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

What does this mean? This is not an immediate risk. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately. Some people who drink the water containing trihalomethanes in excess of the MCL over many years, however, may experience problems with their liver, kidneys, or central nervous system, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer.

What happened? What is being done? When will the problem be corrected? TTHMs are formed by the interaction of organic matter in the water with chlorine which is added as a disinfectant. We have succeeded in reducing TTHMs by (a) changing to a more effective coagulant; (b) replacing the filter media; (c) moving the pre-chlorination point in the plant and installing baffles in the clearwell; and, (d) operating the treatment plant 24 hours a day, allowing us to deliver fresher, better tasting, and lower-TTHM water, to your tap. We are continuing to make further improvements that will allow us to further improve tap water quality.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

Investigation launched on incident

Officers from the department met with school officials and it was decided the best course of action would be to conduct a thorough search of the building and its grounds, including searching every locker. At roughly 8:50 a.m., the decision was made to dismiss all students at 9:20 a.m., the conclusion of the first block period. All after-school and evening activities for the day were cancelled.

Officers, wearing rubber gloves, searched through outside trash cans, along the outside walls of the school building, in bushes, and other inconspicuous areas for any evidence.

Parents were notified via the Connect-ED technology system that was recently purchased by the school department. A pre-recorded telephone message from Assistant Principal Michael Gill was sent to every student's home about the situation and the decision to evacuate.

A subsequent message was also sent home to alert parents that an unrelated industrial accident had taken place off school grounds and the MedFlight helicopter would be landing on Milliken Field to transport the victim.

Gill said all roughly 800 students from grades six through 12 were dismissed in an orderly fashion. "They didn't seem frightened, but they certainly weren't laughing," he said.

After students were dismissed, some teachers remained in the building for a while, but most had left for the day by 11:30 a.m., just before news crews from Boston-area television stations began arriving.

Later in the day, another Connect-Ed message was sent home by Principal Jack DeLorenzo, thanking the students, staff, parents, and Cohasset Police Department for their cooperation in handling "Our unfortunate incident today." He also informed parents school would be in session Thursday, the day would progress as usual including holding Student Council elections, and that members of the police department would be at the school for the rest of the week.

"We encourage parents to discuss this incident with your sons or daughters, and we would appreciate any information you may share with us," he said.

Hussey said members of his department would be present at the school, "Thursday and Friday and maybe into the future."

In addition to the police, Hussey said the school department will be taking measures on its own. He said there is a heightened level of alert which means certain doors will be locked at all times during the day and means of egress and exit will be restricted. Hussey said outdoor activities, such as physical education, would be curtailed to ensure students are kept inside the building at all times.

The weather was beautiful Wednesday, which may lead some to speculate the incident was a teen prank to get the day off. Hussey said hoax or not, it is a crime.

"This is a felony and it's a very serious crime," he said, adding the laws have changed regarding threats in light of terrorist activity. The presence of a bullet with the note makes the incident highly punishable.

Gill said in the 25 years he has worked in the Cohasset school system, nothing like this has ever happened before. "It was the ammunition that led us to be very concerned," he said. However, with the help of the police department, he was confident students could return safely to school Thursday.

Hussey said the department is trying its best to bring quick closure to the incident. He said the incident "leaves an uneasy feeling for people" especially since the youngest students in the building are in sixth grade.

An anonymous tip line has been established by the Cohasset Police Department and anyone with any information on the incident is urged to call (781) 383-1055 X1047.

We'll make you smile.

The Cohasset Water Treatment Plant Failed to Achieve the Necessary Contact Time

The Cohasset Water Department recently violated a drinking water standard. Although this situation does not require that you take immediate action, as our customers, you have the right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct the situation.

In order to ensure proper disinfection, water in the treatment plant must be in contact with chlorine or a similar disinfectant for a minimum amount of time. On March 1-7, 2005, this did not occur. Although chlorine quickly kills most bacteria, it is less effective against organisms such as viruses and parasites. For this reason, water needs to mix with chlorine for a longer period of time to kill such organisms. The amount of time necessary, or the "contact time", depends on the amount of disinfectant in the water and the temperature of the water.

What should I do? You do not need to boil your water or take other corrective actions. However, if you have specific health concerns, consult your doctor.

People with severely compromised immune systems, infants, and some elderly may be at increased risk. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. General guidelines on way to lessen the risk of infection by microbes are available from the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1 (800) 426-4791.

What does this mean? This situation does not require that you take immediate action. If it had, you would have been notified immediately. Tests taken during this same time period did not indicate the presence of bacteria in the water. Inadequately treated water may contain disease-causing organisms. These organisms include bacteria, viruses, and parasites, which can cause symptoms such as nausea, cramps, diarrhea, and associated headaches. These symptoms, however, are not caused only by organisms in drinking water, but also by other factors. If you experience any of these symptoms and they persist, you may want to seek medical advice.

What happened? What is being done? Water treatment plant operators did not maintain the required chlorine residual needed to meet the calculated contact time. We solved the problem immediately by providing the operations staff with specific written operating procedures and calculation tables to simplify the calculation of the contact time and facilitate adjusting the chlorine dose to assure that regulatory requirements are met.

For more information, please contact Hugh Spurway, Superintendent, at (781) 383-0057 or by mail at the Cohasset Water Department, 339 King Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

An appeal to parents

This is an appeal to parents of teenagers to "just say no." That means say "no" – unequivocally and without exception – to condoning underage drinking.

The message is particularly important this time of year with proms, post-prom parties, and graduation looming. It's often a time when parents are tempted to let down their guard, especially with a son or daughter who is in the senior class.

After 12 school years, even the most vigilant parent might be tempted to look the other way thinking, albeit misguidedly, that a beer or two is a rite of passage for youth about to embark on the next phase of their lives.

Next year, Tom or Sally will be in college where they're bound to drink, so why not let them learn to deal with it now?

As reporters, we cannot stress enough that approach amounts to nothing more than providing a boot camp of sorts for learning how to abuse alcohol.

It's also hard for some parents to say no because it's cool to be the parents who allow a little drinking, collect the keys and try to tuck everyone in for the night.

Some parents don't realize that teens are smart. They often have another set of keys in their car. And it's important to remember that driving drunk is not the only way a teenager can hurt himself. Inebriated teens can throw up and choke on their own vomit, stumble into the street and get hit by a car, jump from an upstairs window, or get alcohol poisoning. From where we sit, we've seen all of the above.

We once covered a story where a drunk teen put the beer glass in his pants pocket, fell breaking the glass, which cut an artery and he bled to death.

Not a pretty picture. We don't like covering those stories and interviewing the grieving families.

The graduation and prom season should be a time to make happy memories.

To put it simply, this is scrapbook time. Our teenagers get dressed up and head off to the prom; they get measured for their cap and gown for graduation day. The spring is filled with parties where friends and family get together to celebrate a milestone.

Please, keep those parties alcohol free as far as teenagers are concerned.

It's just not worth the price. Say "no" and mean it.

No alcohol, no way.

Full-day, half-day

The "half-day" kindergarten year can be crazy for working parents. But if one parent can be at home with the kids, half-day can be a wonderful transition from preschool to full-time, regular school.

We realize there are a lot of forces at work to make full-day kindergarten a reality in Cohasset. But we sympathize with those parents who feel some pressure that if they opt for half-day their child will be behind when he or she starts the first grade the following year.

In our highly competitive society, those fears are real and very frightening.

But we urge those parents who choose the half-day program to rest assured their child will do fine. The extra time at home, taking walks, going shopping or to the community center, or having lunch together can be more beneficial than full-time school at so young an age.

It seems a shame to rush our children into full-time kindergarten when we don't have too.
